RAILS TIED UP; ASK U.S. RULE

PLAN OF CARRANZA TO BE DIAZ II. UPSET BY REVOLT

Effort to Saddle Bonillas on Mexico Wouldn't Wash Down—Barragan, 27, Ruled the "First Chief."

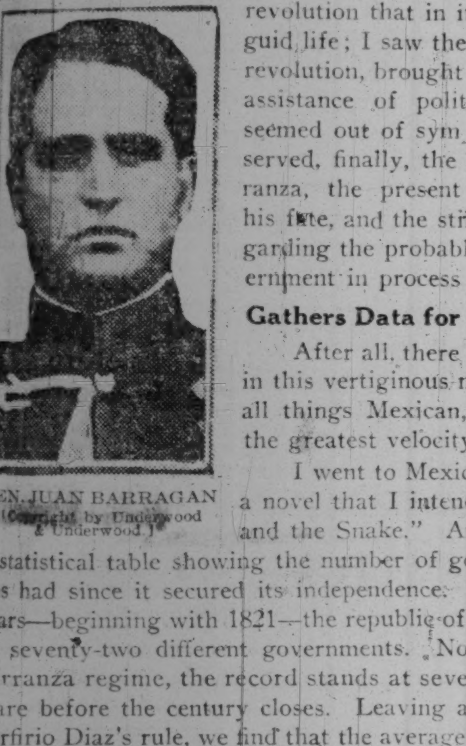
THE CAUSE OF THE REVOLUTION

I am just back from Mexico, where I spent a month and a half. In this brief period of time I made the acquaintance of a government that looked strong and seemed destined to reach the end of its constitutional days peacefully; I witnessed the outbreak of a revolution that in its early stages led a languid life; I saw the decisive triumph of this revolution, brought about by the unexpected assistance of political elements that had seemed out of sympathy with it; and I observed, finally, the flight of President Carranza, the present uncertainty concerning his fate, and the still greater uncertainty regarding the probable future of the new government in process of formation.



GEN. JUAN BARRAGAN.

Gathers Data for His Novel.

After all, there is nothing extraordinary in this vertiginous movement of events. Of all things Mexican, revolutions move with the greatest velocity.

I went to Mexico to gather material for a novel that I intend to entitle "The Eagle and the Snake." Among my notes there is a statistical table showing the number of governments that Mexico has had since it secured its independence. In less than a hundred years—beginning with 1821—the republic of Mexico has been served by seventy-two different governments. Now, with the fall of the Carranza regime, the record stands at seventy-three, with time to spare before the century closes. Leaving aside the thirty years of Porfirio Diaz's rule, we find that the average life of each government has been approximately one year.

"What I Saw. What I Heard."

In this series of articles I am going to tell what I saw and what I heard in Mexico. I am going to give the American public in advance a small portion of the observations I made for "The Eagle and the Snake."

These will be simply the impressions of a novelist, of an impartial observer. I had ample opportunity to talk to Carranza as well as to his bitterest enemies, and I was able to get their conflicting views. I am grateful to both sides for many courtesies received; but I hold no brief for either party.

If there is any group that has won my sympathy, it is the Mexican people, the eternal victim of a tragio-comedy that never ends, the poor slave whom all pretend to redeem and whose lot has remained unchanged for centuries, the everlasting dupe whom the redeemers shower with fine phrases, never telling him the truth because the truth is frequently cruel.

Carranza Policy at Close.

I had several fairly intimate talks with President Carranza, and I am in a position to state what the underlying motive of his policy was in the last days of his regime.

I am fully aware of the fact that Carranza is not one of those men who can be easily probed. Accustomed to the politics of a country where dissimulation is one of the best practical virtues, it is not an easy task to sound him. Suffice it to say that when Don Venustiano receives a visitor the first thing he does, by instinct, is to back his chair against the nearest window.

By this simple maneuver he places himself in semi-darkness, so that his body becomes a silhouette from which the face stands out like a faint white spot. In this posture he cannot be observed closely, while he, on the other hand, can scrutinize at pleasure the face of his visitor, which remains exposed to the full flood of light streaming through the window.

Blue Glasses Hide Carranza Thoughts.

When something arrests his attention Carranza has a way of peering over the rim of his light blue spectacles. It was this very trick which made the rustic Pancho Villa suspicious of Carranza and led the former to exclaim on one occasion:

YGNACIO BONILLAS.
[Copyright by Underwood & Underwood.]

"There's nothing the matter with Carranza's eyes. He has very good sight and doesn't need spectacles. He wears them to shade his eyes and hide his thoughts better."

But the reader must not infer from this that Carranza is a sort of shrewd tyrant of awesome aspect. Don Venustiano is an old country gentleman, a ranchman, with all the cunning of rural landowners and all the shrewdness of county politicians; but he is a simpatico and has a noble bearing. Despite his apparent reserve, at times he waxes loquacious—"feels like a student," as he put it—and then he talks freely; he even laughs.

Why the First Chief Lost Out.

Carranza's fall was due to his stubborn attempt to pursue an anti-military policy.

This old chieftain of the revolutionary armies, who, though

SHOCK OF SON'S BANDIT CAREER KILLS WALTON

Dies as He Comes for I. C. Robber's Body.

Shock of the discovery of his son's criminal career caused the death last night of L. T. Walton, father of Horace Le Roy Walton, "lone wolf" train robber killed by Chicago police Friday night.

HORACE L. WALTON

Walton, the elder, was en route for Chicago with Mrs. Walton yesterday when he was stricken with paralysis as the train pulled into Bucklyn, Mo. He was immediately removed to a hospital and placed under medical care. He died within two hours.

Mrs. Walton left Bucklyn last night with her husband's body, and will arrive here this morning. It is planned that both father and son will be buried here.

Fail to Find Bandit's Pal.

Police failed yesterday to find any trace of Dick Smythe of St. Joseph, Mo., said to be the 19 year old pal of Walton. Smythe was last heard of in St. Joseph a week ago.

Reports that a "blonde woman" had been friendly with Walton were discredited by city and federal authorities yesterday, who declared they had been unable to find any person giving such information.

$5,000 Still Missing.

No trace, likewise, was found of the missing $5,000 from the loot taken by the bandit from the Illinois Central New Orleans express Friday night.

Efforts to connect Walton with other Chicago crimes likewise proved fruitless.

Chief of Police Garrity yesterday issued a statement eulogizing Patrolman Roberts, who was killed by Walton.

AID ROBERTS' FAMILY

Among the contributors yesterday to the fund for the six orphaned children and widow of Policeman William A. Roberts, slain by Horace Le Roy Walton, the train robber, was A. M. Kenney, president of the Citizens' National bank of Decatur. He telephoned THE TRIBUNE he was mailing a check for $500. The sum of $69,980 belonging to his bank was recovered through Roberts' act.

Other contributors were L. B. Patterson, south park commissioner, and Happy Jack Galligan, proprietor of a news stand at 61 West Harrison street.

Previously acknowledged is a $1,000 contribution from Julius Rosenwald and $100 from A. S. Trude, Chicago attorney, near whose home Roberts was slain.

Contributions received yesterday, exclusive of Mr. Kenney's, which will be listed when received, are:

L. B. Patterson	$100.00	A. B. Chapin	5.00
V. A. Galante	1.00	Howard M. Rich	5.00

CHURCH BELLS CALL SWISS TO VOTE ON LEAGUE

GENEVA, May 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—The ringing of church bells at 5 o'clock this afternoon calling nearly a million voters to the polls throughout Switzerland marked the beginning of the first national referendum to be held for acceptance or refusal of membership in the league of nations.

The country seems divided on the subject, but many believe that there will be a majority for the league.

The houses have been bombarded with propaganda, some dropped from airplanes.

Within the next forty-eight hours the decision of Switzerland will be known.

Of more than 10,000 who attended the meeting at Geneva last night only three opposed the resolution favoring the league.

The Swiss militarists, headed by Ulrich Wille, former commander of the Swiss army, and the Socialists continue their strong campaign against the league.

SENATE VOTES TO END WAR BY MAJORITY OF 5

Veto of Knox Measure Is Expected.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May 15.—[Special.]—The Knox peace resolution, repealing the declarations of war against Germany and Austria, was adopted by the senate today, 43 to 38.

The measure will be laid before the house Monday, and that body, having already passed a resolution similar in principle, is expected to concur in the senate amendments without delay.

Unless some unexpected obstacle intervenes the resolution will go to the president early next week. It is regarded as a certainty he will veto the measure promptly and return it to congress. Prediction is being made in some quarters that he will resubmit the peace treaty along with his veto message.

Vote on Partisan Lines.

Rather strict party lines are drawn in the resolution, and Republican leaders have little hope of passing it over the president's veto. At the same time, there is no expectation that the treaty can be ratified by the present senate, so that a continuance of the present technical state of war until March 4, 1921, appears inevitable.

Only one Republican, Senator Nelson of Minnesota, joined with the Democrats today in opposition to the Knox resolution. Senator McCumber of North Dakota, another Republican, announced that he was opposed to the measure but was paired and could not vote.

Three Democrats—Senators Reed of Missouri, Walsh of Massachusetts, and Shields of Tennessee—voted with the Republicans in favor of the resolution, while announcement was made that Senator Gore of Oklahoma, Democrat, if present, would have voted for it.

Provisions in Knox Measure.

The Knox resolution provides:

For the repeal of declarations of war against Germany and Austria.

For retention of all enemy property taken over during the war by the alien property custodian until a settlement of claims by treaty between the United States and Germany.

For repeal of all wartime legislation.

For holding of all rights, privileges, and advantages obtained by the United States under the treaty of Versailles.

The chief point of difference between the house resolution and the senate resolution, as reported by the foreign relations committee, was eliminated in the course of the debate in the senate. It requested the president to open negotiations with Germany for the purpose of reëstablishing friendly relations and commercial intercourse.

Harding for Resolution.

The closing hours of debate today were marked by a speech by Senator Harding of Ohio, one of the Republican candidates for the presidential nomination, urging the adoption of the resolution as a means of ending the autocratic powers of the president. He was vehement in his denunciation of President Wilson's usurpations.

"I like to think," Senator Harding said, "that the Knox resolution will do for America what thte world war did to autocratic power in Germany. The war demonstrated that no one man and no one power can rule the world, and the Knox resolution will demonstrate that no one man can run the United States."

"President Wilson was warned when he left for Europe by the senate and by the people that America had no thought of surrendering its independence to a supergovernment," Senator Harding continued. "Yet he has laid down an issue of 'My will or none,' and with an insistent obstinacy he is demanding the ratification of the treaty just as he brought it back from Versailles."

Hitchcock Backs President.

Senator Hitchcock declared that in passing the Knox resolution congress was trying to "run the president." He insisted that President Wilson did represent the will of the American people in the treaty negotiations because no one ever protested when he made his fourteen points speech.

Senator Underwood, the minority leader, told the senate that President Wilson "could not approve the Knox resolution."

"It is merely a political play," Senator Underwood said. "The Republican leaders must think the people are blind if they think that the smoke cloud of this resolution is going to fool them as to who is responsible for the nation not being at peace with the world."

Fredericton, N. B., May 15.—A six inch snowfall was reported today at Doyen Ridge, eighteen miles from here.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 15.—One of the latest ice bridges in many years has formed in the Niagara gorge from the American falls to the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side. The solid formation is due to continued cool weather, a heavy flow of ice from Lake Erie and a steady north wind.

Topeka, Kas., May 15.—Snow and freezing temperatures were the weather conditions today in northwestern Kansas. Goodland reported a temperature of 32 degrees and snow falling.

Chicago had no snowstorm; in fact the weather yesterday was dazzlingly fair—but cool, almost cold at night, and the northeast breeze promises to blow again today. It's a cool Maytime.

WILSON MEETS JAPANESE AND POLISH ENVOYS

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 15.—[Special.]—President Wilson personally received two diplomatic representatives of foreign countries at the White House today. From all accounts the president looked better than he had for some time and showed a cheerfulness and humor that tended to discredit some of the reports that have been circulated concerning his physical condition.

The diplomatic representatives were received separately. They were Prince Casimir Lubormirski, the Polish minister, and Mr. Kijuro Shidehar, the Japanese ambassador, who was presented by Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state.

President Wilson sat at a table to receive the diplomats and relieved the formality in each case by inviting the envoy to sit down and chat.

The appearance of the president today had significance in the fact that there has been a revival of reports that he is broken in health.

Extreme care still is being given to the president. Dr. Cary T. Grayson continues the practice of sleeping at the White House every night. The president is attended by three trained nurses, one of whom is always on duty.

PARTY WAITS AS AUTO KILLS GIRL

Seven Candles on Birthday Cake Unlighted.

Twelve little children had prepared a surprise party for Marie Peterson, of 2025 Clifton avenue last night. It was her seventh birthday. Her father, William A. Peterson, a clerk in the postoffice, had asked a neighbor to make a cake, because Marie's mother is in a hospital recovering from an operation.

MARIE PETERSON.

An hour before the party was to have been held the children collected in the shadows in front of Marie's home. Marie's brother, Chester, who is 16, saw the children and, fearing that Marie would see them too and discover the party, hurried out of the back door.

Starts for Store.

"We'll go to the store and get some candy," he said.

When Chester and Marie were out of sight the children entered the house and asked "Daddy" Peterson to see the cake. There were no candles on it.

"Where's candles"? they asked.

Mr. Peterson had none. So the children hurried out of the house and scoured the neighborhood for seven tapers to decorate the cake.

Meantime Chester and Marie were skipping towards the store. As they neared the corner of Sheffield avenue and Center street, Marie broke away from her brother and ran ahead.

The auto truck that hit her was driven by Arthur Raffael of 5737 Wentworth avenue and was owned by the Patterson Mineral Water company of 4602 South Western avenue.

Dies at Hospital.

She died twenty minutes later in the St. Joseph hospital.

Until 10 o'clock last night the twelve kids stood on Marie's front porch and waited for her to come home.

Every step on the sidewalk sent them scurrying to hiding places ready to spring and scream the surprise. They had secured the candles.

At 10 o'clock Chester, his cheeks streaked with tears, dragged his heavy feet up the stairs and told his father the story.

The candles are still waiting the match.

URGE REVIVAL OF WARTIME FREIGHT POOL

Breakdown Is Near, Managers Say.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May 15.—[Special.]—The railroads have asked the Interstate commerce commission to take over supervision of traffic in order to relieve the car shortage.

In a petition filed today by the Association of Railway Executives the commission is urged to assume, under authority granted in the emergency section of the transportation act, control of the transportation, food, fuel, and other vital commodities by exercise of the priority system.

In reality this is a plea to the commission to pool the freight traffic of the country, as was done by the railroad administration.

Action Already Considered.

It is believed the interstate commerce commission had been contemplating this action. The commission, replying to the petition, said:

"The interstate commerce commission is proceeding toward the effective exercise of the powers and duties cast upon it in such emergencies to afford such relief as may be possible in the present situation."

Commenting on the railroads' appeal, Thomas De Witt Cuyler, chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, said:

Car Shortage Menacing.

"There exists today a menacing shortage of cars and transportation due to restricted building of equipment during the war, to the unusual degree of equipment requiring repair, to the wide dispersion of equipment during the period of federal control, to the heavy traffic in all kinds of commodities, and all of these elements greatly complicated and emphasized by the recent switchmen's strike. In the opinion of the railroad companies the situation is such as to warrant and require emergency action similar to that taken when this country entered the war.

"Without the exercise by the interstate commerce commission of its emergency powers the railroad companies themselves are not able to afford the relief necessary because they are subject to general laws, federal and state, governing transportation and cannot legally prefer traffic except under very limited conditions, nor discriminate between shippers, sections of the country, or commodities. The unauthorized switchmen's strike, added to the general scarcity of labor, reduced available operating forces so that all of the transportation needed, including the movement of empty cars, cannot now be supplied. As a result the fuel and food situation is assuming threatening proportions, increasing the cost of living and affecting the banking and credit conditions throughout the country in a manner requiring immediate relief.

"Must Pool Traffic."

"The emergency powers referred to are granted to the interstate commerce commission by section 402 of the transportation act. These powers must be exercised in order to establish necessary legal preference and priority in the movement of food, fuel, and other vital commodities, essential under present conditions. They are also required to secure the movement between designated railroads of empty grain, refrigerator, open top, and other cars needed to accomplish the movement of the particular commodities which they are designed to transport."

ADVISORY BOARD NAMED.

A committee of railroad executives, representing the carriers of the country, has been appointed to coöperate with the interstate commerce commission in relieving the transportation crisis, Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, said last night.

The committee is composed of Mr. Holden for the west; A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central lines, and Gen. W. W. Atterbury, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad, for the east; J. H. Hustis, president of the Boston and Maine railroad, for New England, and C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central railroad, for the south. With R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railroad association, it will meet with the commission early next week.

Equipment Badly Worn.

"The railroads were turned back by the government with new legislation having many excellent features, but without much, if any, increase in engines or cars, and with little ready cash," Mr. Holden said. All the equipment received hard usage during federal control, and many freight cars and a good deal of the motive power was turned back to the companies in poor condition.

"The enormous traffic of the country cannot wait for the building of new engines and cars, and the railroads have not the means to purchase except in a meager way, until the pending cases for increased rates are decided. War conditions produced a growing shortage of railroad labor, aggravated by strikes in various parts of the country. There has been a substantial recovery from the effects of the switchmen's strike, due largely to the loyalty of the regular organization and hard work of the officers of the roads in manning switch engines to operate yards and terminals.

Shortage of Transportation.

"The strike can and will be settled in one way only, which is through the orderly process of the decisions of the railroad labor board. Meanwhile, the railroads are handling enormous traffic, but there is not now enough transportation to go around. Food and fuel conditions are becoming serious, much traffic is delayed, and banking and credit conditions are likewise becoming involved.

"The recent law authorizes the interstate commerce commission to act in an emergency of this character. The railroad committee will ask orders authorizing necessary preference in movement of foodstuffs, fuel, and other vital commodities; also preference in movement westbound of empty box cars needed to move grain, flour, sugar, and other vital food products, and thereby halt rising prices; refrigerator cars to save the ripening crops of melons, vegetables, and fruits in the southwest; return of coal cars to better supply the mines, and increase the movement of coal by lake to western ports for next winter's supplies."

HINES QUITS RAIL POST.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—Main headquarters in Paris, with branch offices probably in Vienna, Budapest, Belgrade and Bucharest, will be established by Walker D. Hines, who has been selected as the arbitrator between European powers concerned in various questions affecting navigation on central European rivers.

Hines retired today as director general of the railroad administration. He will leave early next month to begin his work, having been notified by Premier Millerand, president of the peace conference, of the acceptance by the allied governments of his appointment.

It was said Hines' successor in the railroad post would be announced in a few days.

TREATY MAKES HUNGARY FEAR FURTHER WAR

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, May 15.—"Hungary will sign the peace treaty only when the government finds some one willing to affix his signature to the instrument, which will ruin the country and provoke revolution," said Andre Adorjan, member of the Hungarian peace commission, today.

"The government still insists that the treaty is unjust, but realizes its defenseless position and that the Roumanians are waiting an opportunity to reinvade.

"The members of the peace delegation favor signing, however, rather than to give their enemies excuse to overrun Magyar soil, but not a single member of the delegation is willing to sign the treaty. Even Count Apponyi refuses to sully his family name by becoming a partner to the infamous document.

HOOVER FACES JOHNSON'S IRE, PALMER'S, TOO

Washington, D. C., May 15.—Two statements dealing with recent public utterances of Herbert Hoover were issued here tonight. Senator Johnson said:

"Mr. Hoover is spoofin' Oregon. In contest with three sides he has the advantage of having advocated in turn one of the three."

Attorney General Palmer replied to Mr. Hoover's contention that sugar be [illegible] now as in war time. Mr. Palmer said, while such a plan was under consideration, there was no practical, legal way to carry it out.

WOOD MANAGERS PLAN VICTORY ON FIRST BALLOT

Put Out Claim to 350 Delegates.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Gen. Leonard Wood's strategy in the fight for the presidential nomination apparently is centering in a drive to put him through as a winner on the first ballot, if it is humanly possible. This was disclosed yesterday, in part by the trend of the statements that came from Wood headquarters, and partly by the shrewd politicians who are watching every move in the big game.

The latest claim from Wood headquarters gives to the general more than 350 pledged or instructed delegates, based upon the inside information that comes to the Wood managers. It is, of course, disputed bitterly, vigorously, and in detail by all of the other presidential camps.

Fix Strength of 260.

Outside of the Wood headquarters the belief is unanimous that no candidate will have to exceed 260 votes on the first ballot, and on the second and third ballots it is scarcely expected by any except the Wood chieftains that the high man will be much over 300. It will require 493 votes to nominate.

The "uninstructed and unpledged" block of delegates who are pledged to stand together in a movement to nominate the candidate who has the best actual political chance to win the election in November, now stands at 479, fourteen short of an actual majority of the convention. This difference will be eliminated when Alabama and Texas elect their delegates.

In the Wood claims are included all of the southern states that are in contest and also the Thompson votes from Chicago. To win these delegates the Wood forces will have to make good in the national committee for the temporary roll and before the credentials committee. The belief prevails among those who have watched the progress of the fight for delegates in the south that the pro-Wood delegations involved will have the greatest difficulty in making a prima facie case.

Only 147 delegates remain to be elected. Last week the Illinois delegates at large were elected and unanimous instructions given for Lowden. At the Springfield convention Mayor Thompson personally professed an unswerving determination to have his friends vote for the governor, but that they will is not seriously believed by Illinois politicians, in view of the relentless contest that is on between the governor and the mayor for control of state political affairs.

Wyoming for Lowden.

Wyoming elected an uninstructed delegation of six friendly to Lowden.

Indiana elected its delegates, sixteen of them without instruction, ten instructed for Gen. Wood, including the four delegates at large, and four instructed for Senator Johnson.

This week Pennsylvania will elect seventy-six delegates. No candidate appears in the primaries. It is believed now that the delegation will be lined up for Senator Knox.

Vermont will elect eight, with Gen. Wood the only primary contender.

Fight in Oregon.

Oregon will stage a bitter primary fight Friday. The field seems to be centering upon Wood in order to deprive Johnson of the delegation. The Alabama fourteen will be elected Monday in district conventions, and Wednesday in the state convention. The following week Texas will elect twenty-three at a state convention, with every prospect of a contest for all of the delegates. West Virginia has a primary with a showdown between Gen. Wood and Senator Howard Sutherland of that state.

This will be the big Democratic week in electing delegates. Full delegations will be chosen as follows: Monday, Colorado, 12; Washington, 14; Tuesday, Pennsylvania, 76; Vermont, 8; Georgia, 28; Wednesday, South Carolina, 18; Virginia, 24; Michigan, 30; Thursday, Indiana, 30; Friday, Oregon, 10, making a total of 250. No Democratic presidential candidate is in sight of the 100 mark in annexing instructed delegates.

Texan Withdraws His Attack on New Jersey Wets

Washington, D. C., May 15.—Senator Sheppard of Texas today formally withdrew from the congressional record his recent statement that the state of New Jersey, by attacking the prohibition constitutional amendment, "had put itself on the side of anarchy and revolution."

Senator Edge, Republican, New Jersey, acknowledged the Texas senator's withdrawal.

A. E. F. VETERANS TO GUARD DOORS OF CONVENTION

The Republican who bursts through a Coliseum door at the national convention next month without a badge and a ticket will have to do so over the body of an A. E. F. veteran. The 105 American Legion men who will be the doorkeepers of the convention go into training Saturday, June 5, under the command of Brig. Gen. James A. Ryan, U. S. A., retired.

The arrangements for the distribution of convention tickets and the preparations for safeguarding the rights of legitimate ticketholders have been organized on an entirely new basis by the committee on arrangements of the Republican national committee. The main plank in the platform of A. T. Hert of Kentucky, chairman of the arrangements committee, and of his executive secretary, L. W. Henley of Indiana, is that only persons shall be admitted to the Coliseum who have tickets and badges for the 13,289 seats that are to be provided. The total of seats is 1,025 greater than that in the convention of 1916.

Heretofore, it has been customary for one badge to be good for all the way from one to 200 customers, dependent largely upon the doorkeeper. This time no badge will be good at the doors unless accompanied by the ticket that goes with it.

The tickets, badges, and appointments to the posts of sergeants at arms, ushers, and other convention officials have been apportioned to the states on the basis of their delegate strength. The seats in the Coliseum have been divided into three classes—good, better, best—and each state gets its exact proportion of each classification. These tickets will be issued to each national committeeman on Saturday, June 5.

Commissions for assistant sergeants at arms allotted to each state will be issued in blank to the national committeemen, who will fill in the name of the appointee and furnish him with his badge and ticket.

Work on preparation of the Coliseum starts this morning. Tomorrow morning the convention committee takes charge of the office in the Coliseum annex, and for all practical purposes the convention season opens tomorrow.

CORK RESTORES GERMAN NAME ERASED IN WAR

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

CORK, May 15.—The city corporation has decided, with one dissenting vote, to reinscribe the name of the late Prof. Kuno Meyer on the roll of honorary freemen. Dr. Meyer was given the freedom of the city eight years ago in recognition of his work for the Irish language revival. After the outbreak of the war the corporation, by a large majority, decided to erase his name from the roll. It is now decided to restore his name to the roll in both German and Irish.

Reasonable compensation, however, will be offered.

BRITAIN ACQUIRES NAVAL BASE ON THE BALTIC SEA

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

REVAL, via London, May 15.—Great Britain has made the first move in the establishment of a naval base on the Baltic.

Through purchase by British interests, control has been acquired in the Russian Baltic shipyard and the Boecker yard here.

This move on the part of British financial interests confirms THE TRIBUNE dispatches from Helsingfors in February announcing the intention of the British government to secure naval control in the Finnish Gulf.

Gen. Gough is scheduled to arrive at Reval tomorrow. It is said his mission partly deals with the naval base.

Italian warships will arrive at Reval tomorrow. Then official recognition of the Esthonian government will be proclaimed by Italy.

G. O. P. PLATFORM WILL BE BUILT IN A FEW DAYS

Committee to Meet at Capital Tuesday.

The Republican national platform of 1920 for all practical purposes is to be constructed in Washington Tuesday. The committee on policies and platform, of which Gov. Henry Allen of Kansas is chairman, will meet at the national headquarters for the purpose of passing upon the draft of the document that will be presented to the resolutions committee of the national convention next month.

Substantially all of the members of the Republican national committee will be present. Chairman Hays has invited in the eastern members for the regular monthly conference, and most of the western members who were in Chicago early this week went on to Washington for next week's proceedings. The prospects are for two days of the biggest politics of the Republican campaign, barring only the actual assemblage of the delegates in Chicago three weeks hence for the preliminary stages of the national convention.

Delegations Organized.

Most of the state delegations that have been elected have organized and it is understood that at least a majority of the men who will sit in the resolutions committee at the Coliseum are included in the list of members of the platform and policies committee that was named in January by Chairman Hays, in conformity with the action taken by the national committee at its session in Washington last December.

In his speech before the Illinois state convention at Springfield on Monday Senator Sherman made the flat statement that an agreement would be concluded before this week's end between the opposing schools of Republican thought as to what should go into the platform on the question of the treaty of peace and the league of nations.

This agreement has been made all the easier of accomplishment by reason of President Wilson's Oregon telegram made public Monday.

Three Weeks' Discussion.

This being true, according to views being expressed along presidential row, there will be little difficulty in completing the proposed platform that will be recommended to the real platform makers at the convention. The purpose, it is understood, will be to give to the Republicans of the nation an opportunity of three weeks for discussion of the proposed planks as they will be prepared in Washington, and subject them to any amendments or suggestions that the delegates will then bring to the Coliseum from their several states.

Notice has been issued by C. B. Miller, secretary of the national committee, directing attention of Republican state chairmen to the necessity of filing credentials for their delegates with the national committee on or before May 18, as required by the national convention call. All notices of contest must be filed prior to that date.

Only three contests have been actually filed up to this time, and there were strong indications that the number of threatened contests from the south will be materially smaller than has been expected, and some of those filed will not be pressed seriously, it is said.

HISTORY'S HORN PLAYS 'LOWDEN,' HAMMERS 'BILL'

Governor's War Record Wins Praise.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., May 15.—[Special.]—Arthur C. Cole, Ph. D., assistant professor of history at the University of Ilinois, wrote the last chapter in the fifth volume of the centennial history of Illinois.

Some say this volume was issued last week, others say this week, but it is certain that it was not published prior to the Illinois presidential primaries.

Lowden Did His Bit.

It contrasts the records of Gov. Lowden and Mayor Thompson in "Illinois and the great war." To the governor it gives unstinted credit, and then paints a tinted picture of the mayor. "At Springfield Gov. Lowden and his aids brought every pressure to bear for a more effective prosecution of the war," reads page 475 of the fifth volume.

"Meantime in Chicago, the very seat of the special war organization of the state, Mayor William H. Thompson, an old political associate and a Republican national committeeman, was pursuing different tactics.

While as to "Big Bill."

"When war clouds first threatened he issued a warning against sending 'the glorious young manhood of America to foreign battlefields like sheep to the shambles.'

"After the passage of the war resolution by congress he declared himself opposed to conscription and to sending troops abroad. Next he declined to act on a suggestion that he extend to the French commission, headed by Marshal Joffre, an official invitation to visit Chicago, claiming that this was the prerogative of the city council, to whom he referred the matter. If the mayor's policy was purely a matter of political expediency, he was doomed to disappointment, as friends and supporters began to drop away.

City Council Shows Loyalty.

"On June 11, 1917, the city council by a vote of 60 to 8 proclaimed the loyalty of Chicago in terms that were intended as a rebuke to the silence of the city executive.

"Mayor Thompson's position doubtless encouraged the position of other critics of the war and of war politics. On the whole, alien enemies and citizens of foreign birth and descent caused little trouble."

On Mayor Thompson's candidacy for the nomination for United States senator the history says:

"In the summer of 1918 the senatorial campaign of William H. Thompson offered a rallying point for the various factions that were not satisfied with American international policy. The Republican tradition for the German-American vote, in combination with Thompson's insistent appeal against 'war hysteria' and 'a gospel of hate,' insured a heavy support from that source."

CARRANZA SAFE IN MOUNTAINS; CAPTURE DENIED

Rebels Start Chase After Escape from Trap.

El Paso, Tex., May 15.—President Carranza tonight had safely eluded his rebel pursuers and with a small bodyguard was again in hiding in the mountains near Oacaca, revolutionist headquarters here was advised tonight.

Reports from Laredo, Tex., and Nogles, Ariz., that Carranza and an escort of 800 men had been captured by the revolutionary forces of Gen. Guadalupe Sanchez lacked confirmation tonight, and was doubted by revolutionary leaders here.

Insurgent forces were forging their way through the mountains in pursuit of the fugitive president, latest advices said. Rebel leaders declared they expected contact with the loyal troops again soon, and anticipated early success of their expedition.

Carranza Holds Off Foe.

Carranza forces successfully held off a superior insurgent force for nearly a week. With their ammunition and supplies apparently in no condition for a protracted siege the Carranzistas early today drew out the attackers.

A concealed machine gun nest lay in wait. The rebel forces were mowed down, according to reports here. All advices reaching the rebel junta indicate sanguinary losses. During the engagement President Carranza with the main force withdrew.

A battle between Carranzistas and Obregonistas was anticipated at Monterey momentarily by rovelutionists here. Gen. Francisco Cos was known to be en route to Monterey with a large detachment. He will coöperate with Gen. Villareal in the movement.

Ordered to Kill Obregon.

Gen. Francisco Cesie Robelo, former Carranza commander in Morelos, has issued a manifesto in Mexico City, declaring that his reason for joining the revolution was the issuance of an order to him by the Carranza government to kill Gen. Alvaro Obregon, candidate for the presidency of the republic, Senor de Oca said:

In his flight from Mexico City April 1 Obregon was compelled to pass through Morelos, and Robelo had been ordered to intercept and slay the fugitive, it was claimed.

Gen. Luis Gutierrez has been appointed revolutionary military governor of Coahuila, succeeding Gen. Gustav Espinosa Mireles, who has deposited 2,000,000 pesos in Rio Grande City, Texas, according to Luis Montes de Oca, revolutionary "consul" here.

Seizure of various sums of money deposited by Carranza adherents in the United States has been made by agents of the United States department of justice, Senor de Oca announced.

Confirm Capture of Dieguez.

Mexico City, via Laredo Junction, May 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Reports that Gen. Manuel Dieguez has been captured were confirmed on Wednesday by a wireless dispatch from Guadalajara, given out by Obregon headquarters, stating that Dieguez, with his staff and Gen. Sebastian Allende, are imprisoned.

Obregon's headquarters announced that permission has been given Gen. Guadalupe Sanchez to allow Gen. Candido Aguilar to pass through revolutionary lines to confer with President Carranza with a view to avoiding more bloodshed, Gen. Aguilar later to surrender.

Twenty-five members of the national senate and chamber of deputies are holding meetings with a view to solving the problem of calling an extraordinary session of the assembly for the purpose of appointing a provisional president.

New Government Running.

Financial measures instituted by the liberal revolutionary administration are taking favorable shape, forced loans being unnecessary. More than 1,000,000 pesos have been secured by two weeks' advance revenues from customary government imports in the federal district.

Oil company taxes, which are due shortly, are expected to be paid somewhat in advance and will result in six or seven more million of dollars.

The municipal government is taking similar measures to keep city services functioning, since the municipal treasury was swept clean of funds when the capital was evacuated, May 7.

During the six days that have elapsed since the evacuation of Mexico City and the entrance of revolutionary forces, the capital has been quiet with public utilities operating.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

Obregon to Quit Army.

Mexico City, May 15.—Gen. Obregon, in an exclusive interview with your correspondent, states he will resume his campaign for the presidency when a provisional president has been appointed.

The new president will appoint a leader for the army to fill Obregon's place.

Gen. Gonzalez will also leave the army and run as an opposition candidate. The election will be held in July, as almost the entire country is under control of the rebels, all of whom have joined the Obregon movement.

EVACUATION BY FRENCH BEGINS IN RUHR TONIGHT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 15.—Marshal Foch this evening ordered Gen. Degoutte to begin the evacuation at Frankfort, Darmstadt and Hanau at midnight Sunday. It is expected all the troops will be out by daybreak Monday.

This confirms an exclusive TRIBUNE dispatch of Wednesday announcing that Frankfort would be evacuated on Sunday or Monday.

Commandant Degraves, in charge of the verification of the reichswehr evacuation in the Ruhr, filed his report with Marshal Foch this afternoon. He stated that the German troops were below the number provided for.

THE TRIBUNE communicated the news to the German charge, Mayer, and president of the peace delegation, Goeppert, who was just leaving for Berlin.

$600,000 LIQUOR, U. S. EVIDENCE, IS 'LOST'; INQUIRY ON

Warrant for Remus in Permit Tangle.

The reported disappearance of the greater part of $600,000 worth of contraband liquor stored by the government in the Sibley bonded warehouse and the inability of United States deputy marshals to locate Attorney George Remus, wanted on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the passing of alleged forged withdrawal permits at the same warehouse were developments in the Chicago liquor situation yesterday.

HARRY W. MAGER.
[Copyright: Harris & Ewing.]

Federal prosecution by District Attorney Clyne was promised in connection with the disappearance of the liquor should evidence of graft warrant it.

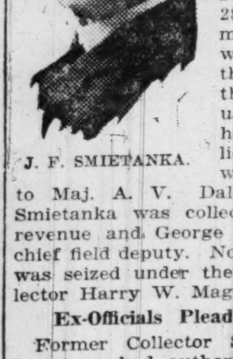
Find "Evidence" Gone.

Government agents recently have been checking over the liquor seized in federal raids since the Volstead law went into effect. A week ago investigators under Thomas O'Brien, chief field deputy, discovered a shortage existed. Collector Harry W. Mager gave orders at once to search every bonded warehouse in Chicago for the missing liquor.

Hurried investigation of the Sibley warehouse was made, but because of the alleged hopeless condition of the records and the large amount of liquor seized it proved impossible to determine how much of the "evidence" had disappeared. In some instances the liquor is no longer necessary, for the cases involving it have been disposed of, but in others it is a vital link, as the saloon men from whom it was taken have not yet been tried. Without the evidence it may be impossible to convict.

Promises Clyne Action.

Mr. O'Brien declared he would make it his business to fix responsibility and would take the facts to the district attorney if criminal liability could be shown.



J. F. SMIETANKA.

Most of the missing liquor was confiscated following the passage of the Volstead act on Oct. 28, 1919, although many seizures were made before that date. Until the last of January, when the handling of the liquor situation was turned over to Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, Julius Smietanka was collector of internal revenue and George G. Dunlap was chief field deputy. None of the liquor was seized under the régime of Collector Harry W. Mager.

Ex-Officials Plead Ignorance.

Former Collector Smietanka said he never had authorized withdrawal of the liquor except to be used as evidence.

"I never authorized the withdrawal of any liquor held as evidence," said Mr. Dunlap. "If there is anything wrong with the records now, it is not through any fault of mine. As soon as the liquor was seized, it was taken to the Sibley warehouse and stored under lock and key. A receipt was issued by the Sibley company, which was forwarded to Washington by my department as soon as duplicates had been made. The duplicates were placed in the keeping of the deputy clerk in charge of the distilled spirits division. These records were not under my supervision, and I know nothing whatever about the disposition of the liquor after it was placed in the warehouse."

Attorney Remus' Story.

Attorney Remus, whose alleged signature was found Wednesday on forged permits, explained the permits were approved by Capt. Hubert Howard, state prohibition director. He said the liquor involved belonged to his client, Angelo Prozeman, who had authorized him to move it to another warehouse where it could be sold. He asked until yesterday to explain, but only a telegram telling Maj. Dalrymple the attorney was out of town.

Warrants for Remus' arrest were placed in the hands of deputy marshals, but he was not found.

Yesterday investigation is said to have disclosed that Prozenan was not entitled to any permit and that a stamp imitating the one used by Capt. Howard had been utilized to "legalize" the permits.

PARIS CITIZENS HELP POLICE TO CURB STRIKERS

Cavalry Routs Mobs Assailing Workers.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, May 15.—Cavalry, police, and citizens charged into riotous groups of strikers at several places on the outskirts of the city this morning when the latter assaulted those who wished to work.

The trouble began outside a large metal work factory, at which about half the men have gone on strike. These grouped around the gates and tried to prevent other workers from entering. Stones began to fly, and when the police attempted to arrest one of the strikers a general fight began. When a passing trolley car was wrecked soldiers were summoned.

In the fight several policemen and soldiers were injured with stones, but the cavalry quickly dispersed the mob and re-established order.

Gas Famine Threatened.

Among the rioters were many gas workers, who are the latest recruits of the strike movement. Since yesterday morning the number of those who have quit work has increased considerably, and though the authorities say that supplies can be maintained with volunteer labor and Chinese, the gas workers themselves declare that the city will be without gas in two days' time.

Like the other strikers, the gas workers have no special grievance. They simply have responded to the general strike call in support of the naturalization program at a time when the railroad men and others are tiring of the strike and are returning to work.

Strike Slowly Dying.

In Paris, at least, where all the transport workers and a large percentage of other strikers are back at their posts, Premier Millerand's policy of letting the strike die of stagnation is proving successful. In mining centers, however, the leaders are receiving a larger amount of support than appeared at first. Local and professional grievances have come to their aid and though coal supplies are stated to be sufficient for some weeks, other methods for dealing with the situation may have to be taken by the authorities if the strike continues.

100,000 MOTOR CARS, 25,000 ON FOOT TRY BRIDGE

Rattling flivvers, haughty town cars, and other odds and ends of traffic celebrated the opening of the new Michigan boulevard link yesterday. It was not as spectacular a celebration as the one the day before, but it was a lot more impressive. Traffic cops on duty there estimated that more than 100,000 automobile owners drove across the bridge during the day.

Approaches to the structure were jammed by a triple line of traffic moving each way virtually all day long. It was estimated that 25,000 pedestrians also "tried" the bridge. The lower level of the bridge will be finished within two months, according to William A. Mulcahy, engineer in charge.

Prizes and awards for the best automobile and truck displays in the link bridge opening procession were announced yesterday afternoon. The first prize for pleasure cars, a gold medal, was given to the Elgin Automobile company. The second, a silver medal, went to the Magnetic Motors corporation, and the third, a bronze medal, was awarded to the Medinah Temple Motor club. The gold medal for auto truck displays was won by the Allied Florists' association, the silver medal by the Fleischmann Floral company, and the third by Morris & Co. Twenty-two others were awarded honorable mention.

SABATH FEARS ACT TO EXCLUDE SINN FEINERS

Row on Passports Stirs House.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 15.—[Special.]—Far reaching legislation making permanent war time passport regulations, which has slipped into the conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, caused an uprising in the house today. This forced Republican Leader Mondell to bring about a sudden adjournment for the day.

Representatives Sabath and Gallagher of Illinois, and Siegel of New York led the fight. Prior to that few members of the house were aware either that the conference report was under consideration or that such far reaching legislation affecting the immigration situation had been injected into the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

The conference report already has been approved by the senate where not a word of comment was made on the floor relative to the new matter put in by the conferees who consisted of members of the foreign relations committee of the senate and the foreign affairs committee of the house.

Representative Sabath in denouncing the measure declared that under its provisions it would be impossible for Irish subjects of Great Britain who were political offenders to come to the United States.

Besides making permanent the war time provision prohibiting the entry of aliens, except from Canada and other adjacent countries, without a passport vised by an American consul, a section is included requiring passports for Americans desiring to leave the United States.

The present war time restrictions, under a law passed a few months ago, were extended to March, 1921. By that time it was expected that permanent immigration legislation would be passed.

Dame Nature Is Hostess

Within 6 cent carfare of the loop tired city dwellers may find the forest primeval. There is Budlong Woods, at Western and Bryn Mawr avenues, in which the Camp Fire Girls of the Presbyterian church rediscovered nature last Saturday.

Garbed in their Pocahontas costumes, they practiced at rifle shooting and mastered the secrets of boiling coffee and frying bacon over a twig fire, baking a potato in the embers, and other essentials of woodcraft. Some of them performed a revised version of the war dance without the whoop.

Among those who answered the call of the wild were Dorothy Krautsch, Alice Robertson, Nellie Smith, Ruth Burns, Leota Cole, Ella Smith, Dorothy Herr, Suzzane Munchalfen, Helen Stanlor, Lillian Tefft, Kresse Chase, Edna Busscheck, Lucile Walder, Marjorie Evans, Yvonne Munchalfen, Dorothy Trainer, Constance Grey, Margaret Hall, Marguerita Reich, Isabella Caldwell, Alice May Roberts, Grace Neff, Grace Fox, Dorothy Speirs, Lucille Shumann, Mildred Mathusen, and Elizabeth Stevenson.

Miss N. C. Wiley was in charge of the camp.

GIVE GERMANY MORE TIME, BUT NO RELEASES

Premiers Discuss Reparations Program.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[By Special Cable.]

HYTHE, England, May 15.—The conference with the Germans at Spa has been postponed until June 21 provisionally on the agreement of the other allies. There will be no variation from the treaty, which will be maintained in its entirety. The disarmament clauses will be enforced immediately and will not be discussed at Spa.

These definite decisions were reached this morning by Premiers Lloyd George and Millerand at Sassoon house in two hours between 10:15 and 12:15. The weather was fine, but too cold to hold the conference in the open air as originally planned, so it was held in the drawing room overlooking the sea and marshes for miles.

Discussion opened on the question of reparations and Premier Millerand expressed agreement in the principle of fixing the sum Germany must pay on conditions—one being that France immediately receive a payment on account. The question of the sum was referred to financial experts.

Coal experts also attended the meeting and will report today.

Suggest U. S. Discount German Debt.

There were conversations on two other important points, one of which is of special interest to America. That is the suggestion coming from both French and British sources that America be asked to discount the German debt to France. France must have money immediately for reconstruction and she feels the German debt when fixed would be a good security to offer a friend for a loan. A variant of this suggestion is that the British loans repaid America be used to assist France in taking the German debt as a security. Undoubtedly an additional side object with both the French and British is that such an arrangement would intensify America's interest in seeking that Germany pay in full.

Another subject informally discussed was the alleged complaint that France is relying too much on the help of friends, and is not taxing its own citizens. The French reply that she has been taxing much more than is apparent by indirect methods, and by spreading loans over a long term, which means deferred taxation.

No Reparation Pay for Ten Years.

[By Special Wireless.]

PARIS, May 15.—German circles did not hide their pleasure at this afternoon's announcement from Hythe that the Spa conference had been postponed to June 21. On the eve of his departure for Berlin Herr Goeppert stated that the conference would be adjourned to permit the German representatives to talk authoritatively at Spa.

From a high German source, however, I learn that the Germans will tell the supreme council at Spa that it will be impossible to make any payment of reparations within ten and possibly twelve years, and then the biggest sum that can be paid will not exceed 10,000,000,000 marks.

Expect France to Protest.

The Germans realize that the French will fight such a statement bitterly, but warn the allies not to expect too much and coerce Germany into accepting a reparations payment program which the German government knows itself that it cannot carry out.

The Germans remind the allies that they gave a warning that they could never deliver the war culprits for trial and now give a warning that they cannot begin paying even 2,000,000,000 yearly.

The fact that its shipping has been confiscated, its railways run down, and that huge amounts must be spent for foodstuffs and raw materials is given as the reason why Germany cannot pay a mark before 1930, and that even then 10,000,000,000 is the biggest sum that can be considered.

RED TAPE OF U. S. HINDERS YANKEE TRADERS ABROAD

Consuls Unable to Be of Real Use.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, May 15.—Not only the American newspaper men in Europe but American business men and commercial representatives abroad are commencing to renew the old complaints about the apparently inexplainable hostile attitude of the state department toward Americans in foreign lands.

The personnel of the consular and diplomatic services abroad is not so much to blame as the state department at home. The Paris Tribune has just received a letter from an American business representative.

Not Fault of Service.

"It is a wonderful state department policy," he writes, "which makes it impossible for an American abroad to get a service or courtesy performed by his representative which will be performed gladly by the representatives of other countries. I have not had any difficulty in using the French embassy pouch here. The British are equally accommodating.

"The American consuls would like to help, but are prevented by Washington."

Larry Rue, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE correspondent in Syria—the man who gave the world the first reports of the Armenian massacres in Aintab—brings another illustration. In the absence of cable transmission from Syria, Rue prevailed on the American consul at Beirut to accept mail dispatches for the embassy pouch to be forwarded to the American embassy in Paris for the Paris Tribune for relay to Chicago.

Had Important News.

The dispatches contained news of vital interest to all Americans concerning the welfare of American relief workers operating at danger of their lives in a foreign country. The dispatches, after being carried by a courier for several thousand miles across the Mediterranean and through central Europe, reached the American embassy in Paris, and there were held up.

The embassy was prevented by the state department ruling from delivering the dispatches to the Paris Tribune, and instead was forced to put the dispatches back in the embassy pouch, and send them back to Syria.

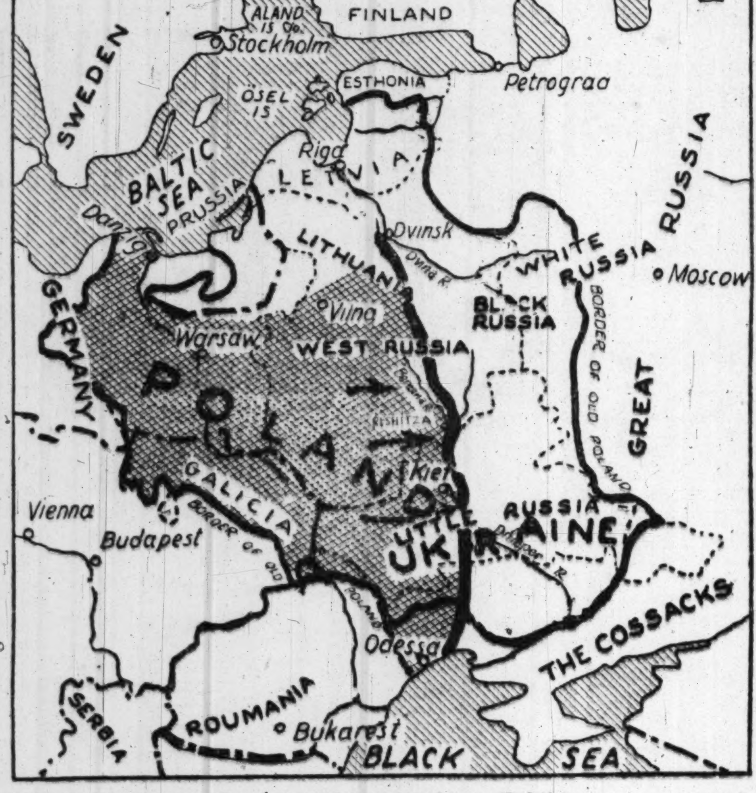
French Execute 3 Men, 1 Woman, Aids of Germans

PARIS, May 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Three men and one woman, convicted last July of denouncing compatriots to German authorities during the occupation of Laon during the war, were executed at Vincennes prison this morning.

Those who met death were Toque, Lemdine, Herbert and Mme. Aubert.

Of twenty-eight persons tried last summer as "Laon informers" eight, two of whom were women, were condemned to death. Three failed to appear for trial and were sentenced to death by default, eleven received prison sentences ranging from one to twenty years, and six were acquitted.

RISING POLAND



Recent dispatches tell of a mighty blow struck by the Polish and Ukranian forces at the Russian bolshevik front far north of Kiev, driving the enemy back along the Beresina river.

Betchitsa, an important Dnieper river crossing, was captured and serious losses inflicted on the soviet army. Fighting was reported as going on over the front of approximately 420 miles.

Capture of Odessa, the most important Russian port on the Black sea, was reported.

Necessity of straightening the Polish line after the capture of Kiev is said to have led to the new offensive, which extends from almost directly west of Vitebsk to below Kiev on the Dnieper. Polish forces crossed the Beresina river at several points and took Wielatisch after heavy fighting.

Northeast of Mozir the bolsheviki have been forced across the Dnieper. Attempts were made by the enemy to distroy the railroad bridge at Betshitsa, but Polish units prevented this move and captured a large number of prisoners. Announcement was made that two soviet regiments were annihilated in the fighting around this town.

The military, economic, and political convention signed by Poland and Ukrania just before the opening of the drive toward Kiev is understood to have provided for a Polish outlet to the Black sea.

Such a southern outlet has been a Polish ambition dating far back in the national history, just as was a seaport on the Baltic.

WARSAW HEARS OF ROUT OF 10TH SOVIET DIVISION

WARSAW, May 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—The rout of the 10th bolshevik division in a battle in the region of the mouth of the Beresina river is reported in an official communiqué issued today. In attempting to escape across the Dnieper river the remnants were killed or captured.

Sultan to Resign as Treaty Protest, Is Turkish Report

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Turkish sultan will resign his throne in protest against the severity of the peace treaty presented to Turkey by the allied powers, according to a rumor which is credited in many quarters today.

COMMUNISTS OF GERMANY PLAN REIGN OF TERROR

LONDON, May 15.—[By Associated Press.]—German communists are planning a new insurrection which may be attended by wholesale murders, according to a Berlin dispatch, quoting a statement by Herr Graefe, conservative member of the reichstag.

The dispatch says Herr Graefe has advised the ministry of defense that meetings of communists are being held regularly in Mecklenburg and that the question whether land owners alone should be put to death or whether their wives and children should meet a like fate is being discussed. He maintains, it is said, that "there is no doubt Mecklenburg will be the scene of frightful slaughter."

German Workmen Raise Red Flag in Small Town

BERLIN, May 15.—Armed workmen last night took possession of the town of Sangerhausen, Prussia, establishing a "committee of action," says a Lokal Anzeiger dispatch. The town, which is forty-five miles east of Halle, was posted with announcements that the government was overthrown, and authority had passed into the hands of Left radicals.

RUSSIA OFFERS TRUCE TO JAPAN IN SIBERIA ROW

Nippon for 'Buffer State' to Guard Manchuria.

BULLETIN.

VLADIVOSTOK, May 15.—The Russian soviet government has proposed an armistice between the Japanese and Siberians, according to a dispatch from Irkutsk.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

TOKIO, May 13.—[Delayed.]—Gen. Oi, commander in chief of the Japanese forces in Siberia, issued at Vladivostok on the eleventh a statement concerning the proposed "buffer state" between the Russian bolsheviki and the Japanese.

The statement said Japanese military activity in Siberia was solely defensive.

"The Japanese army," says the statement, "could not afford to overlook the appearance, in the neighborhood of Japanese interests, of a political body with ambitions and plans that would disturb the peace of the world, since Japanese interests in Corea and Manchuria would suffer."

The commander declared the Japanese army was anxious that the Russians should follow their own desires.

"It is the most sincere desire of the Japanese troops and of the Russian people that East Russia form an autonomous administration under a government which will satisfy the people that economic relations between Russia and Japan will be reëstablished speedily for the relief of the Russians in east Siberia.

"To realize these aims, the Russian troops in Siberia should suspend hostilities against the Japanese and offer to establish such a state in the hope of preventing a possible collision with the bolsheviki advancing eastward from China.

"Following these necessary steps the establishment of an autonomous East Russia is possible. The Japanese would not interfere with such antonomy, but would withdraw with pleasure."

Throws Hand Grenade Into Erzberger Meeting

BERLIN, May 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—A man threw a hand grenade into a hall at Enslingen near Stuttgart, where the clerical party was holding a meeting in favor of the candidacy of former Vice Chancellor and Minister of Finance Mathias Erzberger for the reichstag. Some of the fragments struck persons on the stage, among them Herr Erzberger. A wild panic ensued.

SOMETHING BIG DUE TO HAPPEN IN CHINA SOON

Country Is on Verge of a New Era.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 16.—[Delayed.]—Some great dramatic changes will probably happen soon within China. It may be a fighting revolt against the present Peking government or it may be a bloodless revolution that will hardly be more than swift evolution—but something big is going to happen.

Newcomers here feel this in the air, and old timers affirm it: China is being reborn. A new consciousness is suddenly developing and public opinion, a brand new thing for China, is sweeping over the country like prairie fire. The old game, the old order, the things that were, are crumbling to dust and fast being blown away before the wind of a fine, new public consciousness that is surging across Asia. China is preparing herself to save herself from herself.

Own Worst Enemy.

The biggest thing that one learns in studying China is that China is her own worst enemy. That is to say that the China of the militarists and the corrupt politician and the Ta Ren—the Superior Men—bound with all the cruel traditions and outworn customs and inequalities of the past as tightly and brutally as the Chinese women bind their feet, is a greater enemy to New China than the Japanese are. It really is the same game in both countries—the military, political governing cliques attempting to check the rising tide of the rights and futures of common people.

China today is even less of a republic than Japan is—and Japan today is merely an echo of the Germany of Bismarck. The government of China, instead of being a responsible democracy, is nothing short of a military autocracy—or rather a collection of military autocracies

Officials Selfish.

The ordinary 400,000,000 of China do not count. They have no method of expressing their disapproval, except by strikes and boycotts, but most of these 400,000,000 being ignorant and very poor coolies and tiny land owners have no disapproval to voice. They are primarily interested in keeping their rice bowls full and so close is the margin of life and death in China that this plain struggle for mere existance keeps them busy twelve and fourteen hours a day. They have had little to say so far because no one of the government has ever bothered to have anything to say for them. Official China now or never has had the least concern about the millions of China—they have worked and dreamed only of their own personal games and ambitions.

FREE TURKEY OR DEAD TURKEY IS HOPE OF KEMAL

Cuts Adrift from Porte for Heeding British.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[By Special Cable.]

ANGORA, April 29., via Paris, May 11.—[Delayed.]—The great region of Anatolia now has no political, economic, or military relations with the Turkish government at Constantinople. The nationalists have formed a provisional government and taken over the administration of the affairs of the entire region.

They declare their government will function until such time as there shall be a cabinet at Constantinople that will truly represent the caliphate and issue orders without consulting the British.

Would "Show the World."

The nationalists declare that they want to demonstrate to the world that the Turk can govern. There is nothing about the life here to impress a traveler with the notion that the times are abnormal. There is prohibition here, however, sufficiently severe to work a hardship on the tired visitor.

What the nationalists have done since the allied occupation of Constantinople and what they want to do in future are expressed best in the words of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, head of the new provisional government. This morning he said:

"On March 16 we learned of the allied occupation of Constantinople. We disarmed the British forces at Eski Shekia and Afiun, at Kara and Hisar. We destroyed railroad bridges to prevent allied military expeditions from Constantinople against Cilicia.

"We ordered that no telegrams from Constantinople be accepted. We asked statements from all the banks and forbid the forwarding of any valuables to Constantinople. We established censorship and the control of the movements of private persons from place to place.

Seize Allied Officers.

"As reprisal for the arrest of Turks at Constantinople we arrested allied officers found within our boundaries. Greeks and Armenians who lived in Turkey and obeyed the laws and did not interfere with the national Turkish aims we treated as we did the subjects of any other states.

"Since the coöperation between Ferid Pasha and the British, the nationalists have ceased all official communication with Canstantinople.

"My personal opinion is that we should unite the nation. It may be possible for a time to govern the country with illegitimate leaders, but that can not go on forever. The provisional government should function only until the sultan is free to resume the duties rightfully his.

"The national assembly should be the administrative as well as the legislative body."

POLICE CENTER ON 2 COLOSIMO MURDER CLEWS

Seek Ex-Wife's Suitor and Another.

The police officials in charge of the search for the slayer of James Colosimo last night dismissed a dozen theories that have furnished no clews, and began to look for Nicholas Villiani.

They also want to question William Sullivan, alias "Chubby Lardner," former partner of Earl Dear, who was thrown out of Colosimo's café a few weeks ago and beaten by Colosimo—but they particularly want to see Villiani.

Villiaini, they explain, was a friend of Mrs. Victoria Colosimo, whom the cabaret owner divorced for Dale Winter. He was in Los Angeles recently, with Mrs. Colosimo, they say. But he left the coast some time ago, and the police have information that leads them to believe he was in Chicago at the time the "vice king" was killed.

Think Slayer Italian.

The police have information, too, that the slayer was an Italian. There are many Italians, they say, who have borne enmity to the slain resort keeper. He had "got away" from most of his old friends of the red light days, it seems, and ignored them. And there were many who turned against him when he divorced his wife.

"You can discard all theories that booze deals, graft, vice, gambling, politics, maniacs, labor troubles, gangsters' troubles, or the black hand had anything to do with the murder," a police official summed up the matter last night, "and put it on your slate that the slayer was a very good friend of the first wife."

Tells Story of Row.

The "Chubby Lardner" incident was related by Detectives Parr and Knowles of the homicide squad. Lardner, or Sullivan, they say, created a disturbance in the cabaret while with a party of women, and battled desperately when he was led to the exit. He was fond of his reputation as a "hard guy" the detectives say, and swore revenge because of his humiliation.

However, Sullivan-Lardner's picture does not look like that of the man seen by the cabaret porter sometime before the shooting, according to Knowles.

Wire from Ex-Wife.

Rocco de Stefano, attorney for Colosimo, received the following telegram last evening from Mrs. Vittoria Moresco Colosimo, discarded wife of the cabaret king, in which she formally designated him as her attorney.

"Wire me at my expense if I should come and look after my interests."

The message was dispatched from the Catalina islands, where the former wife has been enjoying herself.

Attorney De Stefano sent back the following wire:

"Leave as soon as possible. Nothing will be done for ten days. Wire when you will leave and when you will arrive."

Interest in Strong Box.

Interest centers in the revelations expected to follow the opening of "Big Jim's" safety deposit box at the Michigan Avenue Trust company at 2218 South Michigan avenue. Even members of the immediate family refuse to conjecture on its contents. Belief is expressed that it contains a will, and perhaps even papers which may provide a new clew in the baffling murder.

Pretentious obsequies marked the interment yesterday. Crowds gathered before the residence at 3156 Vernon avenue long before the services began. Judges, politicians, city officials, cabaret singers, actors, gamblers, waiters bared their heads when the heavy bronze cakset was borne from the house to the hearse afted a brief scriptural reading by the Rev. Pasquale R. De Carlo of the Italian Presbyterian church.

Those at Funeral.

Conspicuous in the varied throng on the doorsteps as Mrs. Dale Winter Colosimo was helped to an automobile were Judge Bernard P. Barasa, Judge John K. Prindiville, John J. Coughlin, Michael Kenna, James P. Bowler, John Powers, Ike Bloom, "Diamond Joe" Esposito, William Weinstein, former Assistant U. S. District Attorney Francis Borrelli, "Polak Ben" Zellem, Samuel Bloom, Michael Fritzel, Michael L. Igoe, Tony De Andrea, Sol Van Praag, Frank Duffy, Thomas Chamales and Bailiff Dennis J. Egan of the Municipal court.

From the residence the mile long cortège moved slowly by a circuitous route to the front of the cabaret of the slain restaurateur, where it halted for a few minutes while the band played.

Services at Cemetery.

As the casket was being placed in the Oakwoods cemetery chapel, where it will repose until a final resting place is chosen, Attorney De Stefano began his expected eulogy. Before he completed his introductory remarks, he became choked with emotion and was unable to continue. Ald. John Coughlin quickly took his place and concluded the obsequies with a few words, eulogizing Colosimo. He followed with a few prayers.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—[Special.]—Senator McCormick of Illinois, introduced a resolution today calling upon the federal reserve board to inform the senate what steps it is taking to meet the inflation of currency and credit and what it is doing to mobilize credits to move the 1920 crop.

"The credit situation is beginning to cause widespread apprehension and alarm," said Senator McCormick "If proper steps are taken in time we can avoid a condition which may not be unlike the stringency of 1907."

He's Steak Now, but a Lively Time Was Had.

The otherwise peaceful life of the community of Cragin was stirred up yesterday by a real bull fight. The matadors, picadors and toreadors were city firemen and policemen.

Early in the morning several steers steers escaped from a car in the Galewood yards at Fifty-sixth and Armitage avenues. All but one were captured by the train crew. That one started something.

After terrorizing pedestrians and charging automobiles, being shot at by policemen and dodging lassoes thrown by mounted cops, the steer discovered the vegetable garden kept escaped from a car in the Gale- by members of engine company No. 68 at Grand and Kostner avenues. The garden is no more.

Don Walter Takes Field.

Astride a fire horse Pipeman Walter Coyle, 1605 Lawndale avenue, attempted to capture the destroyer. There was a wild charge and Don Walter was unhorsed. He was only slightly injured.

A man with a red necktie had to flee for his life. A motorman on a Grand avenue car, seeing the man's danger, slowed down and opened the front door. The fugitive gained the safety of the car by eight inches and a dent was put in the side of the car.

A huge crowd had gathered and was having all the thrills of a steer tying contest in Cheyenne when Fireman John Botherroy, 2746 Rutherford street, appeared on the scene. He soon gained the good will of the beast, slipped a noose over its neck, and was securing the other end to a pole when the animal saw his flaming red hair.

Lashed to the Post!

Dodging from one side of the pole to the other, pursued by the enraged beast, Botherroy failed to notice the rope was winding around him. He was saying his prayers when the animal dropped dead from exhaustion and bullets.

Lieutenant John Gondek claimed the carcass for the firemen in lieu of damages for their despoiled garden.

"Eat and Keep Fit"

Eat and keep fit is the motto of Marcy Center Settlement house for the children of the Ghetto. Wherefore the monthly field and track events were staged yesterday in the settlement athletic field. This happens to be the pavement of the block in Newberry avenue in which the center is located.

The street was closed to traffic between Roosevelt road and Maxwell street and the games were on. Yesterday there were sack races, roller skating, bicycle sprints, and many other events.

The field days are under direction of the nutrition clinic of the physical department.

CONVICT EX-WIFE OF RICH AUTO MAN AS SAFE ROBBER

Mrs. Charlotte Randelle, as the former wife of Ray Deering, president of the Stevens-Duryea company, styles herself, was found guilty of robbing a safe by a jury in Judge Pam's court yesterday. The decision was reached in twenty-five minutes.

A similar verdict was returned for Harry Cox, the co-respondent in Mr. Deering's divorce suit five years ago. Though not married, the two have been living together since that time.

According to the evidence, a Miss Nina Cook, who testified for the state, called up the Hayes hotel, 6345 University avenue, in the wee small hours of April 7, 1919, and made a date with the night boy to meet her at the Woodlawn avenue entrance of the place.

While she engaged him in conversation, Cox and his affinity opened the safe and removed the money, jewelry, and Liberty bonds valued at $1,500. Mrs. Randelle had formerly worked in the hotel as a bookkeeper, and knew the combination.

The trio skipped, Miss Cook to Detroit, where she soon repented and confessed, the other two to New York. Cox was grabbed by a detective while walking down Broadway, and Assistant State's Attorney William Oehlson went there and arranged the extradition. Mrs. Randelle was caught later.

On the stand she wove such a fanciful tale that Judge Pam told her she would have to sojourn in the county jail pending hearing on a motion for new trial, instead of being released on bond.

MORSE, INDICTED, EXONERATED BY SHIPPING BOARD

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 15.—[Special.]—Trustees of the emergency fleet corporation and members of the shipping board have exonerated Charles W. Morse of the charge that he conspired against the United States government by negotiating the sale of an American ship to foreign purchasers in violation of the law. The federal grand jury in New York recently indicted Morse on this charge.

According to a statement issued at the shipping board today, Morse's dealings with the prospective purchasers of the McCullough, the vessel in question, were made with the knowledge of the board, to which Morse reported the steps he had taken.

Morse appeared before the board on Friday and told his story. It was found, upon examination of the records, that the whole matter had been acted on by the board at a meeting held March 26, 1918. On that date Bainbridge Colby, then a member of the board, moved that the board intimate to the department of justice that it make no move toward prosecution. This motion was carried.

The department of justice went ahead on its own initiative with the result that Mr. Morse was recently indicted.

Princeton Fire Loss Put at $500,000 to $700,000

Princeton, N. J., May 15.—[Special.]—Examination placed the loss from the fire that early today destroyed Dickinson hall and Marquard chapel at between $500,000 and $700,000. Only two walls of the chapel remain standing and only a few sections of the stone work of Dickinson hall.

BROTHER FINDS '6364'; DECIDES TO AID CONVICTS

Offers to Care for Twelve Paroled Men.

Robert Houston, who is superintendent of a large manufacturing concern within forty miles of Chicago, has not known for ten years where his younger brother was located. He sometimes worried about him, but concluded he was out in the world trying to make his fortune. He expected to hear from him some day. That some day came this week. He found his brother in the Joliet penitentiary, where he is known as "convict 6364."

It was through Attorney William S. McNamara that the story of "6364" was learned by Robert Houston. The convict's wife told the attorney of her humiliation.

She declared her husband had become intoxicated only twice in a year, but because he fired a gun in his house the night that she asked the police to disarm him he was accused of perpetrating a robbery across the street from their home, and sentenced to from one to twenty years.

Brother Visits Prison.

Robert Houston went to Joliet with Mr. McNamara. He went through the institution and declared: "There are many men here with good faces. I believe they could make good. I'm going to ask the pardon board to parole to me any man it sees fit to give a chance, and I am going to give him a new start. I am willing to keep this up until I have twelve, at the rate of one a month."

The meeting of the two brothers was a tragic one. Mr. Houston at once took steps to have his brother paroled.

"If they won't parole him," he said, "it doesn't matter. I'll take any man the board does parole, give him clean linen, clothes, food and a place to live, and give him a good job in the factory. I'll help him get a fresh start in life. I can see now that it has struck home what a handicap a prison record can be to a man. They tell me 85 per cent of the paroled men make good. More would make good if they had someone to take a special interest in them."

How He Was Convicted.

If his brother is paroled, Mr. McNamara said Mr. Houston will take him and his wife to the Houston home, and do everything to make the brother's future a useful one.

In a sworn statement made by "6364" to Mr. McNamara, he said his attorney, Eugene Moran, told him Judge Kavanagh would be lenient with him if he would plead guilty.

"I told him," the convict stated, "that I wouldn't plead guilty, because I didn't do the robbery. When I got upon the stand the court said to me: 'How could you do this thing?' and I said: 'If I did, I must have been crazy.' I still insist that I did not do it. I can't blame the jury for finding me guilty after that. It was the fact that I was told to say I did it, and received leniency that caused the trouble.

"The man who owned the music store that was robbed identified me as 'looking like the fellow, except that he had a mustache.' I was never in any trouble before."

(Robert's name is not Houston. Because he is in no way to blame for his brother's disgrace his name is withheld. He does not wish to humiliate other members of his firm in the way his brother has humiliated him.)

GIRL'S $100,000 SUIT AGAINST "CORN KING" DROPPED SUDDENLY

GEO. A. ROBERTS.

Miss Regina Squires' $100,000 suit against George A. Roberts, the "corn king," was suddenly abandoned yesterday in Omaha.

Miss Squires is 18 years old. She said in her bill that she had claims upon the grain millionaire growing out of injuries to her health, reputation, character, and future.

Mr. Roberts, who is married and has a family, declined to discuss the affair; but his attorney, William A. Schall, pronounced the suit groundless. The young woman is said to have denied the allegations made in her petition, which was drawn last Febuary.

The petition says the girl and the "corn king" met in the office of a dentist in 1917, and that Roberts began the acquaintance by matching dollars against the girl's pennies, "permitting her to win."

"The petition was withheld while a private settlement was being negotiated," said Attorney John E. McFarland, counsel for Miss Squires. "Then Miss Squires wrote me from the Meuhlebach hotel, Kansas City, that Roberts had refused to give her any money. She told me to effect a settlement or sue."

FRENCH FORCE IN ASIA MINOR MADE TO RETREAT

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—A French column of 3,000 soldiers which left Killis, Asia Minor, May 9 to relieve the garrison at Aintab, about 30 miles north of Killis, was met by a strong nationalist force when ten miles from its destination and was compelled to return.

The nationalists were equipped with 1,000 cannon, outranging the French 75s, and kept up a continual attack upon the French.

Advices received here describe the situation at Killis as critical and that at Aintab as desperate.

SOCIALISTS ASK DEBS' RELEASE FOR CAMPAIGN

Washington, May 15.—The Socialist party's petition for the release of its presidential nominee, Eugene V. Debs, and other political prisoners, was taken to the White House today by the special committee named by the recent convention in New York.

Seymour Stedman, the party's vice presidential candidate, made a special plea to Secretary Tumulty for a pardon for Mr. Debs.

"These are serious matters," said Mr. Tumulty, "and I am sure the president will give them conscientious consideration."

ARNSTEIN GIVES UP, BUT REVIEWS POLICE FIRST

Sleuths Fail to See Him; Bail $100,000.

New York, May 15.—"Nicky" Arnstein came home today.

And after having been sought for about three months by the police of the entire continent, "Nicky" had a rather hard time getting arrested for the $5,000,000 bond robbery he is alleged to have engineered with New York as a base.

It wasn't that "Nicky" didn't try to get arrested, after he decided to surrendered himself. He made as conspicuous an entry into the city as he could—motoring down Fifth avenue, reviewing the annual police parade of New York's 10,000 "finest" and finally encircling the criminal courts building three times before alighting.

"Please Arrest Me, I'm 'Nicky.'"

Even that didn't turn the trick. He had to go right up to the district attorney's office and beg to be arrested before he was recognized. He had shaved off his mustache.

"Greetings. I'm Nicky Arnstein," he said to Detective Edward Rayens. And then he was arrested.

After "Nicky" finally obtained recognition, he was kept busy with engagements. First he was arraigned on a charge of receiving stolen securities and the court insisted on $75,000 bail, although his counsel protested that the district attorney's office had agreed to release him on $60,000.

Digs Up $75,000 Bond.

"Nicky" spent a few minutes in the Tombs until the extra $15,000 was dug up, and then he dashed off to keep a date with Federal Commissioner Gilchrist, who invited him to drop in to talk over some bankruptcy proceedings brought against "Nicky" during his absence.

There he was held in $25,000 bail on a federal writ of ne exeat.

This order, signed by Federal Judge Augustus Hand, directed the United States marshal to hold Arnstein, "sometimes known as Nick Arnstein, Nick Arndtstein, Jules W. Arnstein, Jules W. Arnold, J. W. Arnold, James Wilfred Adair, James W. Ames, J. W. Ames, McCormick, Borach and Price, Charles Enright, Elmer E. Steele, George Wall, and Arkin."

After refusing repeatedly to answer questions put to him during the examination before Commissioner Gilchrist, Arnstein was taken before Federal Judge Knox, who directed that formal papers in contempt proceedings be prepared and submitted to him tomorrow.

Arnstein then was remanded in the custody of a United States marshal under bail of $25,000, in default of which he was taken to Ludlow street jail. This made a total of $100,000 bail which Arnstein was called upon to furnish. His attorney said he expected to obtain the additional amount.

PIEZ'S MEN PUT HEART IN WORK; PRODUCTION UP

Expert Management Wins for Link Belt.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Here's an eye-opener for some employers who are bemoaning the falling off per man output in industry—one of the several accepted causes of high cost of living:

CHARLES PIEZ.

The Link-Belt Co. made public yesterday figures showing that during the first quarter of this year the individual efficiency of its men was one-seventh greater than during 1916. The company has not been affected by the "sag" in productive effort, but, instead, its employés are turning out nearly 15 per cent more, per man, than four years ago.

Its individual output for the year 1919 was even higher. It was 34 per cent greater than in 1916. While some branches of industry have suffered from a decrease of about one-third in productive efficiency, the Link-Belt last year had an increase of one-third. This, however, was largely due to a drop in contracts after the armistice and the trimming down of the working force to the most proficient workers.

What the Figures Show.

Here is a two-line tabulation that is illuminating; it covers the Chicago plant of the company:

Output in Units Per Productive Hour.

1916	1917	1918	1919	First quarter. 1920
35	40	45	47	40

"The increased output in 1917 and 1918," says the company, "was due, we think, to the war enthusiasm and spirit. The increase in 1919 was due to the fact that there was a decline in business and therefore a decrease in our force, the poorer men being dropped. The last quarter there has been a decided increase in business and in men with a consequent dilution of output."

Due to Expert Management.

Expert management seems to be the key to the Link-Belt phenomenon of increased productivity during a period of general slump in energy. It points to the fact that management shares responsibility for the prevailing sag at least 50-50 with labor, something that large employers are recognizing more and more.

The company manufactures elevating and conveying and power transmission machinery. Its president is Charles Piez, who was head of the Emergency Fleet corporation during the war, a man of singular skill in handling labor problems. In twenty-eight years as an executive, Piez has never had a strike under him. In fourteen years the Chicago branch has not had a strike.

The Chicago plant is strictly non-union, but for all that, when commissions have been appointed to study industrial questions, labor leaders have more than once expressed satisfaction when Piez has been put on. In 1911 he was chairman of the Illinois Workmen's Compensation commission.

"Treat Them Fair" Policy.

None of the "new stuff" in industry, such as employés' representation and works councils, has been adopted by the company, but the chief reasons ascribed for the showing it has made are:

Competent management, which keeps in close touch with the men.

A select force of workers, employed under excellent working conditions.

A "treat them fair" policy, and recognition of the fact that thinking labor wants to do the right thing.

Competition in business; full instruction of the workers in the connection between output and wages, business, and employment.

In a word, close coöperation.

Rewards Proficiency.

The men are paid on a scientific piece work basis, whereby proficiency gets its reward. The business is a highly competitive one, the Chicago plant having rivals in other labor fields.

The men have had some of the fundamental theories of business drilled into them; they realize that the business of the concern depends on the prices it can quote, and that with overhead remaining the same, the more goods a man can make a machine produce per hour, the lower is the cost price of each unit, which means ability to quote lower prices when the company bids for a contract.

If the experience of the Link-Belt company could be carried throughout all branches of productive effort, it would mean lower prices for commodities all around, or, in other words, wages would have increased purchasing power.

Instruct New Men.

One feature to which the company has devoted attention particularly since the labor shortage started is the instruction work, school work, through which foremen take the unskilled men and the semi-skilled newcomers and put them through a course to develop proficiency in the quickest way, and thus increase the earning capacity of the men and the productivity of the plant.

MICHIGAN TOTAL OF VACANT FARMS IS PUT AT 18,232

Lansing, Mich., May 15.—[Special.]—Almost a million and three quarters acres of Michigan's fertile farm lands—a total of 18,232 farms—will be idle this year.

Statistics compiled by Verne H. Church, field agent of the United States bureau of crop estimate, show that the remaining farm population of the state, 230,000, will fall far short of normal crop production. There are 30,300 vacant houses on Michigan farms, 10,000 of which have been vacated during the last year.

The number of men who have left farms of Michigan during the last three years is three times as great as the number of Michigan men who died or were killed in the civil war. There are enough vacant farm houses in Michigan to house conveniently the population of Grand Rapids.

Of the farms of the state, 8.74 per cent are wholly idle this year, an area of approximately 1,668,000 acres, equal to about five ordinary counties.

Of the 276,000 men on farms three years ago, 46,000 have since left, 20,000 of them during the last year. This unprecedented exodus from farms indicates that city and industrial life have become more profitable and satisfactory than farm life.

With a steadily decreasing supply and increasing demand the price of food will continue to advance, the field agent asserts.

MAYOR AND AIDS LEAVE FOR TRIP ON MISSISSIPPI

Mayor Thompson and forty of his friends, including members of his cabinet and newly elected ward committeemen, are sailing down the Mississippi river today on board the river steamer Alabama toward Cairo, Ill. Some rearrangement of jobs and filling of vacancies is expected to take place during the junket, which will take the party to the battleground of Shiloh on the Tennessee river.

One of the vacancies which will probably be filled is that of secretary of the board of education. Albert H. Miller, who held the post, died several weeks ago from injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

That the mayor will have plenty of advisors in doling out plumes is apparent from the list of administration notables who are members of the party.

These are headed by Fred Lundin, the "power behind the throne" in the Thompson political machine. Others are Edwin S. Davis, president of the board of education; Charles R. Forsberg, business manager of the board; Controller George F. Harding; Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements; Charles R. Francis, commissioner of public works; James Rea, former alderman; Charles E. Ward, William Mulvihill, P. H. Moynihan, Alexander Todd, Lawrence King, Charles Barrett, Frank Mesci, Health Commissioner Robertson, Eugene R. Pike, and John Righeimer.

The mayor and his friends are expected to return to Chicago on May 24.

Seattle Also Shows Good Population Gain.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—All records for increases in population as reported in the 1920 census were broken today by two Detroit suburbs, Hamtramck and Highland Park, which since 1910 have increased 1,2[illegible] and 1,031 per cent, respectively.

Neither Hamtramck nor Highland Park had more than a few thousand inhabitants ten years ago. Detroit's automobile factory workers sought the two towns for homes.

3 BLACK HANDERS GIVEN 10 YEAR PRISON TERMS

Three members of the Black Hand society, convicted by a jury several weeks ago on charges of using the mails to defraud, were sentenced to ten years' imprisonment each in the federal penitentiary by Judge Julian W. Mack. Two of those sentenced were women.

The sentence yesterday follows a long investigation begun by Chief Postoffice Inspector James E. Stuart more than a year ago, which resulted in the arrest of twelve members of a gang which obtained thousands of dollars from Italians in "Little Italy" by threats of violence and murder.

Those sentenced were Mrs. Lucio Naponiello, Mrs. Donna Filipa Martello, and Vito Petruzzio.

In pronouncing his sentence Judge Mack declared that none of the defendants deserved mercy from the court.

"They deliberately threatened their victims with death and destruction of property. This was no pretense they were making, but part of an active existing scheme carried on in Chicago for the purpose of extortion."

4 NEW BISHOPS IN TWO BALLOTS BY METHODISTS

Dr. L. J. Birney First to Be Chosen.

Des Moines, Ia., May 15.—[Special.]—Three additional bishops were elected in today's balloting at the Methodist general conference and the vote announced tonight. They are: Dr. Fred B. Fisher of Mucie, Ind.; Dr. E. L. Waldorf of Cleveland, O., and Dr. C. E. Locke of Los Angeles, Cal.

This morning the election of Dr. Lourish J. Birney, dean of the Boston University School of Theology, in the first ballot for bishop taken yesterday was announced.

Those who polled the highest votes, other than those elected are: E. G. Richardson, Brooklyn, 529; Edgar Blake, Chicago, 475; C. W. Burns, Minneapolis, 421; G. H. Bickley, Philadelphia, 379; F. T. Keeney, Syracuse, N. Y., 338; H. L. Smith, Detroit, 322 D D. Forsyth, Philadelphia, 273; John Thompson, Chicago, 269.

Eight Still to Be Chosen.

Richardson, Blake, Burns, Bickley and Keeney made substantial gains over their votes on the first ballot. Immediately upon the announcement of the result of the second ballot the third ballot was taken and sealed, and it will not be counted until Monday.

It will be necessary to elect eight more white bishops.

After the announcement and the taking of the third ballot the evening's program consisted of hearing the addresses of fraternal delegates from other churches.

Hear Fraternal Delegates.

Bishop C. J. Kephart of Kansas City brought a message from the United Brethren church. The Presbyterian denomination was represented by Dr. Frank C. McKean of Des Moines, Dr. Herbert L. Willett of Chicago, president of the Chicago Church Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Indications are that the report of the special committee to investigate the plan of unification with the Methodist Episcopal church south will be unfavorable to the proposed plan.

PRESBYTERIANS HIT INTERCHURCH SPENDING PLAN

New York, May 15.—Criticism of the Presbyterian new era movement and the interchurch world movement by the presbyteries of Pittsburgh, Seattle, Chilliothe, Ohio; St. Louis, Philadelphia and Washington, and a recommendation that the Presbyterian church withdraw from the last named $300,000,000 project, will be heard at the annual meeting of the Presbyterian general assembly in Philadelphia next week, according to J. B. Wootan, publicity director for the Presbyterian church in the United States.

The Seattle presbytery in its strictures on the interchurch world movement, he said, declares "the expenditures of the interchurch world movement are excessive, needless and destructive, as evidenced by its large costs of rental, its great multitude of employês, its numerous and expensive conferences and its excessive cost in publishing and distributing printed matter, etc., all of which assumes to involve to the extent of $1,000,000, in addition to its normal administration expenses, the boards and authorized agencies of the church."

It also expresses its disapproval of other methods and expenditures.

"Cave Man" Suitor and Girl Found in Michigan

Stephen left, vowing he would have her, father or no father. Last Saturday she disappeared and her father obtained a warrant for Stephen, charging kidnaping. Word was received yesterday that Stephen and Agnes were arrested in Muskegon, Mich. She said he threatened her life if she refused to accompany him.

WILSON AHEAD OF PUBLIC OPINION ON NAVY: DANIELS

'Inherited' Weak Fleet, Is Secretary's Claim.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—Secretary Daniels' testimony today before the senate naval investigating committee was devoted to answering Rear Admiral Sims' charges that the navy was not properly prepared for war in 1917 and that adequate steps toward complete preparedness had not been taken after the world war started. He reviewed naval records of the Roosevelt and Taft administrations and his own recommendations from 1913 to 1917, and said:

"President Wilson and congress were in advance of public opinion in 1913, when three dreadnaughts were authorized, as against one in 1912."

Navy Too Small for Years.

"In view of the war needs," he continued, "I grant you that the navy was too small in all these years, but the record is complete refutation of the criticisms you have heard regarding securing personnel, ships, and munitions before the United States entered the war."

After the European war broke out, Admiral Dewey, then head of the general board, submitted a plan for preparedness that was approved and carried out "as far as the funds granted by congress would permit," Mr. Daniels said.

Personnel Shortage Inherited.

"The shortage of enlisted men charged by Admiral Sims, like the shortage of officers," Daniels said, was "inherited by the Wilson administration." Former Secretary George Von L. Meyer of the Taft administration came in for criticism in this connection, Daniels charging that Meyer failed to provide a single enlisted man toward overcoming the shortage that existed when President Taft took office. It was not until the Wilson administration that any effort was made to establish a real naval reserve, he further charged.

Shortage of officers was due, he said, to the fact that for many years prior to 1916 there had not been enough midshipmen appointed to the naval academy.

Daniels reiterated his statement made before the hoose naval committee that unless the United States should become a member of the league of nations it must build a navy at least equal to any other in the world.

FOES OF DIVIDEND TAX FOR SOLDIER BONUS VICTORS

$50 Quarterly Over 3 Years, Plan.

Washington, D. C., May 13.—On a tie vote, with one member absent, Republican supporters of a stock dividend tax to finance soldier relief legislation in the house ways and means committee today lost their fight for a 10 per cent levy, retroactive to last March 15. The majority members of the committee divided seven to seven.

The fight, proponents of the tax said, would be renewed next week, when the Democrats of the committee meet with the Republicans to take final action on the relief bill, the drafting of which was completed today by the Republicans. They predicted that most of the Democrats would join with them in adopting the project.

Sales Tax Eliminated.

As finally framed by the Republicans, the new bill differs little from the original measure. The sales tax has been eliminated, and the four other forms of taxation extended to three years instead of two.

A further fight in committee against the cash bonus, the maximum limit of which is now fixed at $500 for service in this country and $625 for overseas service, is threatened. Besides the bonus, the bill offers four options, the value of each to be 40 per cent grater than that of the cash provision.

The bonus would be fixed at a rate of $1 a day for service in this country and $1.25 a day for overseas. The optional benefits are paid up insurance, home aid, reclamation of land for farms, and vocational training aid.

Here Are Proposed Taxes.

Taxes proposed to add $500,000,000 a year to goverment revenues for the next three years, would become effective next December as follows:

A new surtax levy on incomes exceeding $5,000; 1 per cent of the amount between $5,000 and $10,000; 2 per cent on that between $10,000 and $26,000, and 3 per cent on that exceeding $26,000.

A levy of 2 cents on each $10 of exchange transactions in stocks and bonds, and deals in futures of grain and products.

A tax of 25 cents for each $50 on real estate deals.

Increase of 15 per cent in existing taxes on tobacco and cigars.

Payments of the bonus would begin July 1, 1921, and be made in quarterly installments of $50 each.

A FLOWER FOR EVERY GRAVE.

The time in which Americans may pay their debt of honor to their soldier dead abroad is growing short. Memorial day is but two weeks away, and provision is still unmade to place a flower or a wreath upon more than 60,000 of the 70,552 graves of our countrymen who gave up their lives in our service.

Floyd Gibbons cables the news of preparations made by THE TRIBUNE'S staff abroad in coöperation with the commander of the American Legion in Europe to have at least one American visit every one of the graves of American fighting men scattered in 457 localities in six foreign countries. It is a small tribute of effort in appreciation of the great tribute of life.

But it is a tribute which should soften the sorrow of the mothers, fathers, wives, sweethearts, and friends of those who are gone. It is a tribute which each one of us who remains to life and happiness should take pride in assisting with our dollars or pennies, that those who reverently pause beside the graves may leave flowers upon them.

If we fail in this small token, Memorial day can bring to us only shame. Seldom is the decision between pride and shame such a simple thing. It can be made today, but the day is nearing in which failure to make the choice will leave us only the one alternative—shame.

SEEKING LAWS TO CORRUPT THE PRESS.

The evil of government interference in private business and industry has come to a point which commands attention. The newspaper situation offers an illustration of this growing evil of which we can speak authoritatively.

Some newspapers, theoretically dedicated to the public welfare, are wrangling, and long have wrangled, at Washington and Ottawa for special legislation designed to enrich them at the expense of others. Such efforts and such legislation are a menace not only to the newspapers but to all legitimate business, because of the precedent built up and the substantial foundation of prosperity torn down.

The first efforts of a part of the press to this end put money in the pockets of some publishers at the expense of the paper mills. The mills therefore ceased to expand and the pendulum swung to the other extreme. As a result the newspapers began to seek special legislation designed to benefit proponents and cripple competitors. The New York Globe furnishes an example.

The Globe, although technically a metropolitan daily, has well defined limitations. It has been unsuccessful in competition with other metropolitan newspapers in the race for circulation and advertising. Assuming the rôle of the downtrodden, therefore, it goes to Washington and, with the pretense of conserving print paper, asks that a limitation be placed upon the size of newspapers. The size sought is half way between the average size of the Globe and its successful competitors. If this size can be made standard the Globe will lose nothing, but may hope that its successful rivals will be reduced and that their advertisers will be forced to take space in the Globe. Other papers of small circulation wish the burden placed upon those of large circulation. Papers without comics seek legislation against the use of comics by others. Papers without want ads seek to limit the want ads of their rivals. Papers without country circulation wish to limit others to the city. In each and every case the law sought is for the purpose of assisting the failures at the expense of the successful.

Deplorable as is this exposé of the unscrupulousness of some publishers, the public may see a worse danger in the fact such newspapers will reward their legislative benefactors by subordinating editorial policy to expediency and political reward. Even newspaper proprietors in congress are using their official positions to lobby for their pocketbooks.

Intelligent readers will recognize that newspapers which seek special advantages by special legislation are corrupt and will gladly repay legislators who assist them by assisting such legislators with misrepresented facts or subsidized editorials. But a large part of the public may not distinguish between honest and corrupt publishers, because the facts are not widely known.

In such case the entire influence of the Fourth Estate will be jeopardized and the reputations for reliability built up through years of painstaking effort will be threatened with the others.

Honest, efficient business, standing upon its merits, does not need special legislation. Proponents and perpetrators of special legislation lay themselves open to suspicion.

SOLUTION OF THE FARM LABOR PROBLEM.

An ultimate solution of the problem of farm labor shortage is suggested in a new bulletin of the United States department of agriculture. The bulletin is the work of specialists in farm management. It is designed to show how the greatest crop results may be obtained by proper application of a minimum of labor. The idea is almost rudimentary, but the illustrations are interesting. For instance:

One man with a twenty-eight inch horse-drawn gang plow can do 75 per cent more than with a one-bottom sixteen-inch plow. One man with a corn binder can do 50 per cent more than if he cuts and shocks by hand. A hay loader reduces by 25 per cent the time required to put on a load. Farmers who use manure spreaders haul and spread in less than half the time required by those who haul by wagon and spread with a fork. Saving of man power by use of tractors, combined harvesters and other improvements is vastly greater.

No doubt it is trite to suggest that adoption of improved agricultural machinery will reduce the farmer's need of labor. But the triteness vanishes if we look beyond the self-evident fact.

The farmer complains that his laborers are going to the city because of high wages, short hours, and greater possibilities of entertainment. He fails to see that many of the factories which are attracting these workers are turning out machinery which will take the place of the men upon the farms. If such labor saving machinery is produced, improved and adopted in sufficient quantities it will help materially to solve the farm problem. It will do more than that.

Many American factory products compete successfully in the world markets with the products of other countries produced at lower wage rates. They are able to do so because of the higher skill of American workmen, the better machinery used and the more skillful management of the plants. If this situation can be developed in our factories it can be developed on our farms. Eventually they will be placed upon an equally high plane of productivity per unit of labor. Better machinery, better management, and better marketing facilities will do it. It is the part of the city to provide the one, and of the farmers to bring about the other.

SOCIALISM MEANS DESPOTISM.

An authoritative verification of THE TRIBUNE'S assertion that Socialism means despotism appears in a recent issue of the London Daily Herald, a newspaper organ of British radicalism edited by George Lansbury, a leader of the Labor party.

From an article in praise of the bolshevik régime in Russia, entitled "The Bloodless Front," we quote the following:

> No Socialist can logically object to the principle embodied in the words, "He who will not work, neither shall he eat." Discipline—iron, rigid discipline of the workers by the workers—is needed in Russia. It will be needed here whenever the workers come to power. The Socialist state calls for more discipline than any other.

And from another part of the same article:

> We have no love for coercion of any kind, but we cannot visualize a modern state without it. Our choice is for that compulsion which aims at transforming the chaotic anarchical struggle of today into the ordered coöperative state of tomorrow. Our brothers in Russia are slowly but surely reaching their goal, and their failure and successes will show us the road we must travel.

Thus we get down to brass tacks. It is seldom that happens in radical discussion. Usually we have a pink gauze of sentimental idealism cast over the realities of the Socialist project. Here at least we have an assertion of its central truth, that it must rely upon the enforcement of an iron compulsion, not merely when the state is engaged in the exceptional effort of war, but day by day in the peaceful activities of men and women.

Thus the tyrants of Egypt built the pyramids in the blood and sweat of an enslaved people.

Of course, the Socialist holds that his particular variety of despotism is going to be benevolent. All forms of despotism have justified themselves as necessary alternatives to anarchy and therefore benevolent. The Socialist fanatic covers his ugly facts with pretty phrases such as the "Coöperative State," "discipline of the workers by the workers," etc, etc. But capitalist society is coöperative, all society is coöperative or it would dissolve into chaos. As for "discipline by the workers for the workers," what does it come to in the actual practice of bolshevism which Lansbury approves? A group of dictators sustained by military force, by a guard essentially like the Pretorian Guard which sustained the despotism of the Roman emperors, a body of soldiers maintained by better pay, better food, better clothes than the workers have.

Tyranny slips off the ermine and crown of the king and puts on the smock of the worker. But it does not change its nature, though it calls its subjects comrade. The more it changes the more it is the same thing.

GUARD OUR WILD FLOWERS.

The springtime lure of the out-of-doors is calling thousands upon thousands of city cliff dwellers into the open places in these days. It would be well if they could be brought to understand that the delights of forest and flowers which attract them are theirs to guard rather than destroy.

It has grown to be too much of a habit for picnicking hordes to raid the haunts of the wild flowers with the hands of vandals. These flowers are a chief source of their delight. They should be protected for another day, not destroyed for the pleasure of an hour. They can be found and enjoyed without the necessity of being destroyed.

Such delicate, fragile, ephemeral beauty as theirs withers and fades with tragic quickness if torn from its natural roots. For the most part they can reproduce only by being allowed to blossom and advance to seed. Many species of beautiful wild flowers have already been almost eliminated by the raids of thoughtless persons. As others are restricted the beauties which lure us to the out-of-doors will grow less and less.

A movement has started to discourage the sale of wild flowers. It should be supplemented by flower lovers refraining to pick the blossoms which they find.

Editorial of the Day

THE LETTER CARRIERS.

[Seattle Post Intelligencer.]

The people generally will join in the hope that congress will find time before adjournment in June to grant the request of the letter carriers for increased compensation. Hearings have been held by the congressional joint committee on postal salaries and every phase of the question discussed. The final report and recommendations of the committee shortly will be presented to both houses of congress, but unless action is taken within the next two or three weeks no relief will be possible this year.

The justice of the claim of the letter carriers for more pay cannot be doubted. Perhaps no other classification of federal employés was so hard hit by the increase in the cost of living. Thousands of letter carriers throughout the country remained in the service from patriotic motives, while others were forced to seek more remunerative employment to support their families. Unless congress acts affirmatively on the request for increased salaries, the most efficient and highly trained men will be obliged to seek other means of making a living. The result will be a demoralization of the delivery service which will affect the entire country.

If congress finds that it will not have time before adjournment to consider a permanent reclassification of salaries, it should enact a special law granting an increase to the postal employés which will be commensurate with the increased cost of living. That, at least, would stop the resignations from the delivery service which are now tending to lower the standard of efficiency.

POETIZING.

This morning when I woke I lay a-bed,
Changing some verses written ere I slept,
Till all my thoughts in that one channel swept;
And such a hunt went forward in my head,
Such careful hurry, while the sought words fled
Ever before me, and like phantoms kept
Almost within my reach, I could have wept
To think I should put others in their stead.
Then I grew calm, and rose and combed my hair,
Dark-brown and glossy, dragging to my knees,
And in the act ignored my mind's despair,
Remembered work my hands must do, set these
To their plain tasks, when lo! from out mid-air
The kindly words arriving, brought me ease.

Similarly, since few respond to your request for authentic cases of hair bleached white in a single night, let us reverse the request, and how many examples can be found? "Mr. Purchas in his Pilgrimage relateth, whilst the Portugals were busie in building a fort in the Kingdom of Decan, belonging to Asia, there came a certain Bengalan to the Governour, which had lived, as he affirmed, three hundred thirtyfive years. His Teeth had sometimes fallen out, others growing in their places; and his Beard, after it had been very hoary, by degrees returned into his former blackness." Or consider the case of one who was alive in 1605 (Fryar Joano dos Santos tells the story), of whom the Bishop of Cochin had sent men to inquire, who by diligent search found that he was then 380 years old, and had married many times. They said his Teeth had thrice fallen out and were thrice renewed; his Hair thrice hoary, and as often black again.

Then there was a Scottish Minister in Northumberland named Michael Vivan, a person who may give just matter of Admiration both to the present and future Ages. Dr. Fuller mentions him and so does Wm. Winstanley. Thomas Atkin, writing from Windsor, Sept. 28, 1657, reported him as then of 110 years age, "preaching, and in my poor judgment making an excellent good Sermon. After Sermon, I went with him to his House, where I proposed these several following Questions to him: Whether it was true the Book reported of him, concerning his Hair? He answered me distinctly, and told me he understood the News-book reported his Hair to become a dark brown again, but that is false; he took his Cap off, and shewed me it: It is come again like a Child's, but rather flaxen, than either brown or gray." Oh, Where.

Oh, where are the mothers of long ago;
Who'd shrink with horror at to-day's leg show?
Where is the mother who would tan the hide
Of the daughter who'd think of riding astride?

Mothers, whom the high cost of living distresses,
Why not put your boys in your daughters' old dresses?
When your young girls in breeches have all modesty lost
You'll remember you have paid "the high cost."

You maidens with bare backs, naked breasts and bare arms,
To all manly men have lost your sweet charms,
You are neither dressed up, nor are you dressed down,
With but little more goods than a veil for a gown.

Now don't try to blush, you daughters once fair,
For the sweet modest blush no longer is there.
Oh, where are the fathers, once the family's head?
I am sure I don't know, I guess they're all dead.

But the outfit that you have got, if you have what I am asking for, and it is no good to you and if I could fit my customer with the outfit that you have got, that is too small for you, and it is big enough for him, and I could convince my customer that that is a cheap buy, if that is what he wants, it is up to me to try and make a deal for the both you and he, and I will do my best but make your price as low as possible so I could convince my customer to buy it, if you have got such that I want.

SCHOOLS OF MOTHERCRAFT.

JUST north of Chicago lies Evanston, a beautiful residential suburb and the home of Northwestern university. There is a city there because in the long ago Dr. John Evans and Mr. Orrington Lunt thought a certain oak forest located on the bank of Lake Michigan, twelve miles from the turmoil and smoke of Chicago, would be an ideal home for the new university. It is well paved, clean, and inhabited by intellectual people.

Did it need an infant welfare station? Perish the thought! But the group of young mothers thought they knew better, and were persistent. They argued that Evanston, having been on the "underground railroad" in slavery days, had always had a large Negro population, and the infant mortality rate among Negroes was high. They pointed out a rather large colony of foreign-born located in one edge of town and working in nearby factories. Finally the more conservative lent their consent.

A branch of the Chicago Infant Welfare society, formed in Evanston to support an infant welfare station in Chicago, was supported in opening a station in Evanston. Soon both the need and the good accomplished were apparent. It had its doctor, its clinic days, and its nurses for home visiting. It reached the homes of the foreign-born and the Negroes, as was promised. But its influence did not stop there.

There are plenty of universities, colleges, and seminaries teaching the sciences and arts, but the supply of institutions teaching mothercraft is small. The rule is that when a woman marries and starts her family she knows no mothercraft, however many university degrees she holds. Her mother has given her some instruction, but nobody is satisfied with the baby death rate of thirty years ago. Institutions in which the only guide is precedent are hidebound and nonprogressive.

An infant welfare station is for the purpose of advising with the mothers of well babies on the art of keeping the baby well. They are schools of mothercraft—practical schools.

It was soon apparent that there was a place for a school of mothercraft in this high grade university town. The ladies of the Infant Welfare society counseled with the health commissioner, the mayor, and the city council. The city council, with the approval of the mayor and health commissioner, decided that infant welfare was a function of the city government. The city should maintain the infant welfare stations. The ladies were willing. The city assumed charge of the work and the ladies had to cast about for a new burden. That they will find one goes without saying.

The city will make the station a place to ward off baby diseases and to help mothers who find baby care difficult. But, more important still, they will develop it into a mothercraft institution reaching more or less indirectly into all kinds of homes. Evanston having led the way, other high class residential cities will doubtless follow suit.

EYESIGHT AND HEALTH.

S. T. writes: "I have learned a good deal by reading your column and would like to ask a few questions:

"1. What is the cause of the crystalline lens becoming opaque?

"2. Is there anything one can do to stop it after it has started?

"3. Does it do any harm to use the eyes reading or sewing in the evening if the light is good?

"4. Does kidney trouble affect the eyes?

"I am 68 years old and can see very well without glasses, and I would like to keep as well as I am as long as I can."

REPLY.

1. Exposure to great heat is supposed to be the principal cause. Exposure to glare is another. The theory is that the opaque material is secreted into the lens by the cells of the capsule and that the basic disease is in these.

2. I do not think so. There are those who advocate the use of radium. There are those who claim that drugs used locally clear up forming cataracts, but they do not bring forward convincing proofs. Their claims are very strong and their proofs are very weak.

3. No.

4. Not the lens. Advanced Bright's disease frequently causes retinitis, bringing about dimness of vision.

BABY IS DOING WELL.

C. M. writes: "My baby is 7 months old, and while he is well and strong, also fat, he does not hold his head up well. He seems very bright. I breast feed him, give him a little orange juice, and zweiback in hot water. When he was 1 month old he was operated on for a tumor in his stomach, and was in the hospital for a month. Do you think this would keep him back a little, and that this is the reason he does not hold his head up? He weighs 16½ pounds stripped."

REPLY.

Your baby is doing satisfactorily considering that he was operated on for a tumor of his stomach at one month of age and stayed in the hospital for one month. Continue feeding him and otherwise caring for him as you are now doing.

COLON BACILLI INFECTION.

W. A. W. writes: "My child 4 years old has repeated attacks of fever. No other localizing symptoms. Lasts two or three days. Cause obscure. Intervals of weeks with perfect health. Was told it is pyletis. What are the usual symptoms of pyletis? Is it a disease common in childhood? Is it serious?"

REPLY.

The more usual symptoms are fever, pain, painful urination. It is much more common among girls than among boys. It occurs fairly frequently. Very careful collecting and examining of the urine shows the condition to be due to an infection of the pelvis of the kidney, usually with colon bacilli. The condition is not serious in that it often threatens life. It is difficult to cure and painful in many instances.

WHEN BUYING AN ICEBOX.

E. H. H. writes: "I have been considering the purchase of an icebox and had nearly selected one in which the part where the food is placed is covered with enamel, when a friend of mine warned me against that kind of an icebox, saying the paint is likely to affect milk and other foods. Will you tell me if it is dangerous?"

REPLY.

There is no danger in keeping milk and other foods in an enameled lined ice box or refrigerator. In fact, such lining is advantageous in that it shows dirt easily and is nonabsorbent. The kind of lining is of secondary importance. The great question is what temperature is maintained in the food chamber and at what expense of ice. Do not buy a refrigerator or ice box which will not maintain a temperature of 50. Do not waste your money on an ice eater.

YOU ARE OVERWEIGHT.

Viola B. writes: "I am just 12 years old and I weigh 120 pounds. I have had a good appetite, but I am losing it now. I play hard and I am regular at gymnastics.

"1. What shall I do to reduce?

"2. What shall I eat?

"3. How much should I weigh?"

REPLY.

1 and 2. Eat no candy or sweets of any kind or desserts. Likewise limit the amount of bread eaten.

3. The proper weight for a 12 year old girl varies from 63 to 94 pounds, according to her height.

NO TRAVEL PAY DUE.

Chicago, May 10.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—After I got out of the hospital in France I was put in an entirely new division. I thought that as long as I was to be over there I would be happiest with my buddies with whom I had been for so long, so I asked for a transfer to my old regiment. They let me go back to my own division, but I had to pay my own way. Shouldn't I have been furnished with transportation, and can't I put in a claim for it now?
A. S. E.

Under a decision rendered by the office of the director of finance, Jan. 30, 1919, you will not be reimbursed for expense incurred in travel at your own request. The decision referred to reads: "The act of April 20, 1918, providing that enlisted men of the army may be reimbursed for actual expenses of travel incurred while traveling under competent orders, not embraced in the movement of troops, is permissive and not mandatory in its operation and does not require the reimbursement of traveling expenses incurred by an enlisted man upon being transferred at his own request under orders which provided that the expense of such transfer be borne by the soldier."

LEGION NOTES

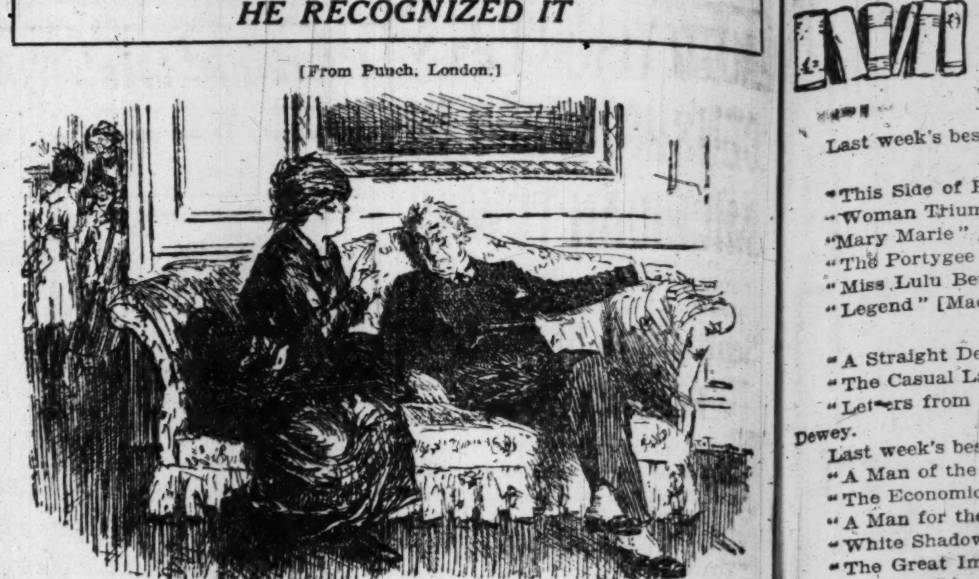
All soldiers of the 1st division are urged to attend the meeting and bunco party of 1st Division auxiliary No. 1, at Knights of Columbus Hall, 165 West Madison street, Thursday at 8 p. m. Maj. Thomas R. Gowanlock will be present and arrangements will be completed for the Cantigny day celebration of May 28.

Town of Lake post will hold a special meeting Tuesday night at Cornell auditorium, Fifty-first and Wood streets.

No attention will be given to anonymous letters. To insure a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

HE RECOGNIZED IT

[From Punch, London.]



Enthusiastic Lady (at musical at home): "Do you remember what this tune is out of, doctor? Used to be all the rage when we were in our 'teens. Tum—tum—tum—tum—tum—tum—tum—tum?"

Eminent Dyspepsia Specialist: "The words are familiar."

WATCH THE PAPERS.

Chicago, May 14.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Would like to know if a certain nuisance could be stopped, that of papers flying over the streets. This comes about from a row of stores on the southwest corner of Sixty-first street and Prairie avenue, the owners of which, instead of burning or otherwise, allow the papers to be blown by the wind and cover the street with old and dirty papers. O. L.

Areaway in the rear of stores at Sixty-first and Prairie avenue was free from paper when inspected. We found no cause for complaint. Agent of building has been notified to instruct janitor to be more careful in handling the paper. THOS. H. BYRNE.
Superintendent of Streets.

REPAIRED TEMPORARILY.

Chicago, May 14.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Early in the winter the asphalt pavement just west of the intersection of Fifty-fifth street with Cornell avenue was opened for repairing water or sewer mains. After the repair work was completed the opening was backfilled with crushed rock and earth, but no attempt made to replace the asphalt removed. About a month ago the débris used for back-filling settled, leaving a hole two or three feet wide and from two inches to a foot in depth over the full width of the pavement. Would you kindly bring this matter to the attention of the city officials so that the hole may be repaired at once. L. H. L.

This pavement has been restored to good temporary condition. It will be permanently repaired as soon as possible.
THOS. H. BYRNE.
Superintendent of Streets.

HOW DO THEY DO IT?

Chicago, May 14.—[To the Friend of The People.]—We also are one of those unfortunate families who are compelled to give up a goodly portion of our needed sleep each night on account of the continuous crowing of the pet rooster that is owned at 1511 South Springfield avenue. Believing that we need our sleep far more than the family next door needs that rooster, we are appealing to you for aid. MRS. S. S.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served to thoroughly clean coop and space occupied by chickens, and to lime wash walls and ceiling of chicken coop. Also, to abate the nuisance of noise from rooster. JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

ASSESSMENT FOR PAVING DUE.

Chicago, May 13.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please inform me as to the pavement of Addison street west of Cicero avenue, and of streets south of Addison. A. B.

Work was started last year on the contract for paving Addison street, between Cicero and Long avenues, with asphalt, and will be completed during the summer. The first installment of the assessment is due and payable this year, under Warrant 47269.

The work of paving the system of streets with asphalt, Eddy street and Cornelia avenue, between Cicero and Long avenues, etc., will start this year. EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary Board of Local Improvements.

NOTIFY WHEN SUBSCRIPTION EXPIRES.

Chicago, May 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. When a newspaper subscribed for for one year by mail is continued for three months longer without being authorized by subscriber, is subscriber liable for the three months' bill?

2. When a wife signs a contract to buy a set of books, after repudiating contract although it has a clause saying contract cannot be canceled, can husband be held liable and made pay amount due? Wife signs in her own name, as wife.
D. R. S.

1. In general, yes. 2. Yes, if the contract was so worded as to be binding on both buyer and seller when it was signed.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ALIENS CAN ACT LEGALLY HERE.

Sadorus, Ill., May 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—An alien who has been in this country sixteen years, who came from Greece, was married about a year ago to an American citizen. He has since bought town property and now he and his wife wish to deed this property to another person. He has never received his papers from the United States, although he has application in for same. Will a deed they make be legal? We are inclosing you a stamped envelope for your reply. H. J. S.

Yes. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

"OBJECTING TO "OLD WOMEN'S TALES."

Chicago, May 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—There was an article in THE TRIBUNE of May 2 headed, "How the North Treated the South," a reply to Keynes.

The original subject seems to have been a comparison between the treatment given the south after the civil war and that which is being given the defeated countries of Europe. The intention evidently to throw odiom on the north—notwithstanding the fact that the United States government, not the north, dealt with them.

The writer rehashes the stories of old women whose imagination added new items every time it was repeated to whatever basis there was to any story at all. As our government in no case approved lawless acts, no blame should attach to it. No government is morally responsible for lawless acts of criminals that it cannot prevent, such as holdups and stealing of autos, etc., now so common. One point needs explanation, that which refers to government of southern states being turned over to Negroes, etc.

The author may not know that the southern leaders were requested to take hold of reconstruction, but were prevented by the bitterness of the southern women, who forbade their men mixing with Yankees. Gen. Grant did appoint one of their favorite generals (Beauregard, I think) to be collector of customs at New Orleans and he was spit upon by a well dressed woman because he accepted office from a Yankee. Nothing else could be done but appoint whoever could be persuaded to take office and competent to do the work. Probably in all the south there may have been as many as half a dozen Negroes appointed, one of whom was Moses, who was afterward governor of the state of South Carolina. History has not recorded that any government has ever treated its vanquished enemies as leniently as ours treated the rebels. No terms were exacted by Gen. Grant in the surrender of Lee—but to go home and obey the laws. No lives were taken in punishment for the treason, no cruelties perpetrated, no money demanded for damages. CHAS. E. BAKER,
Formerly Capt. 64th Regt. Ohio Vet Vol. Inf.

SUGGESTING IMPORTATION OF WIVES.

Chicago, May 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Perhaps your cartoon in Sunday's paper suggesting that the surplus women of Europe should be brought to the United States was not intended to be taken seriously—but "why not?"

According to the census we have too few women. But this does not begin to tell the story. The women we have are of remarkably poor quality. Too many live in cities, and I would venture a guess that 75 per cent of the native born city bred women are physically and mentally unfit to bear and rear children. What a barrier this is to the continued greatness of our country!

Let free passage be provided for every healthy young woman who can be induced to come over. If money is needed to do this, levy more taxes, sell the navy, sell a few states. Ships, lands, gold are as nothing to the greatness of a nation compared to the value of people—men and women.
DONALD DAVIDSON.

THANK GOODNESS, THEY'RE SETTLED.

Omaha, Neb., May 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Let's settle the following questions for all time:.

Regarding the proposed jaunt of our esteemed representatives of the common people, I, for one, am perfectly willing to let them attempt it if they have the nerve to try. Shipwrecks have occurred and we may read of another one. At least we can hope. If one does happen along it will give us ordinary dubs an opportunity to guess again on the men that are supposed to represent us.

At the same time let's do away with political parties and elect a real American to represent real American people. Judge K. M. Landis, as president, would run the trouble making Reds and rotten politicians bowlegged trying to hide themselves.

Regarding the bonus, give the enlisted men, the regulars and volunteers, a bonus of $1,000 and the let the drafted man go scratch. AMERICAN.

WHAT WE'RE AIMING AT.

Danville, Ill., May 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The two leading political parties blame each other for the delay which has occurred in ratifying the peace treaty. The G. O. P. blames the president and he blames the senate. The public is disgusted with its public servants. If those we have cannot agree on such vital subjects of national and international importance when there are such small differences between them as actually now affect the acceptance of the treaty by the majority and which prolongs further delay involving the national honor abroad—the voting public should see to it during the election this fall that they are voted out and those who can are voted in.
R. DANA MARTIN.

LAND SETTLEMENTS FOR SOLDIERS.

Chicago, May 11.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—A practical, liberal land settlement bill that could meet the approval of the national officials of the American Legion would go the farthest of any measure yet conceived toward the increase of food production and national wealth, as well as toward the satisfaction of the hopes of about a million of the ex-service men of the country. A nation-wide poll of the posts of the American Legion should be made for a list of such of its members as desire to enter upon home building on farms under such favorable, long time terms of payment as the government could afford. Let these young men in their prime get to work on ground that they own and they will never want to leave the farms. Transferred from military and metropolitan diversions into productive life, they will prove a potential agency in paying off the national debt.

"POEMS BY A LITTLE GIRL" [Stokes] is one of the most remarkable books of the season. That is a daring statement to make, I admit, but only superlatives suggest themselves when one reads the exquisitely poetic creations of little Hilda Conkling. Hilda is the daughter of Grace Hazard Conkling, herself a poet of charm and beauty, and these poems have been set down by her mother just as she created them. There has been no self-consciousness of putting them down on paper, no molding over of a clay once fashioned into form. Her mother, who spends much of her time writing, and who therefore creates no suspicion in Hilda's mind when her pencil rushes over the page, writes the poems as Hilda says them—usually without a hesitating moment. When she reads them over Hilda immediately recognizes the change of a word and insists that it be exactly as she said it. Instead of the result being an imitation of grownup verse, it is the very throb of the heart of poetry—something that is eternal and beautiful, and somehow a very real expression of childhood, though any poet of whatever age might have been proud of her fancies and her delicate sense of words realizing emotions. Amy Lowell has written a preface, with her rare critical certainty.

In "Mary-Marie" Eleanor H. Porter has again tilled the fertile soil of the little girl character who knows not what she does, but does it thoroughly. Mary-Marie is a "divorced" child, living half the time with her mother, as Marie, and the other half with her father, as Mary. The book is her diary of that life, with an appendix twelve years later, written in exactly the same schoolgirlish style (it could never be said of Mary-Marie and her college education—even the half one that she had—"See what a college education does for me!") Her discovery of her diary in a dusty attic averts a similar tragedy for her own little girl. "Mary-Marie" has had the largest advance sale of any novel in the history of publishing, 120,000 copies sold before publication. So it is evidently what the public wants. A certain kind of unreal propaganda in novels is always popular—propaganda for gladness or for the preservation of the home is the most popular of all. "Mary-Marie," like her antecedent, Pollyanna, will probably become an historical character in America! As for "Mary-Marie" and her place in American literature, there's a grim jest in the fact that the two Porters—Eleanor H. and Gene Stratton—are the two most popular American woman writers, and that such a rare artist and truth seeking recorder of American life as Willa Sibert Cather should be known to but the few.

In the same mail with Mrs. Porter's treacle dipped plea for less divorcing came Gilbert K. Chesterton's "The Superstition of Divorce" [John Lane], a series of ardent papers begging the world to stop looking with crossed eyes at the question of divorce. "This is a pamphlet and not a book," Mr. Chesterton declares in his conclusion—frank propaganda for the preservation of the economic unit of the family, for the honorable fulfilling of a vow, and for the sacredness of marriage. Written in haste and at a high tension of conviction, the book has the qualities of G. K. C.'s always delightful articles in the New Witness, in which about half the book appeared, but it also has the unswervingly sound literary foundations upon which Mr. Chesterton can build any superstructure of either propaganda or fantasy. He is always worth reading, no matter what his subject is, and no matter how ephemeral he himself thinks the book or the article.

"Time and Eternity" is the title of Gilbert Cannan's latest novel. It is a good title. It might shelter under its great cloak a fine and noble love story A tale of England in wartime, it might be a story of the boon of eternity bought with a handful of time. Instead, it reminds me of a gruesome tragedy that they sang at the opera last winter, Il Tabarro, the Cloak, which was thrown back to disclose to the woman the sagging body of her murdered lover. It is the tale of a mess of time bought with eternity. Gilbert Cannan used to be a good writer. Now he is nothing but a digger in maggot crawling clay whose hands are sick with the things that cling to them.

The death of William Dean Howells takes from American letters one of the most genial and delightful men whose privilege it is to interpret Americans to themselves and to the outer world. The sheer kindness of him is something which one never could forget who had ever known it. I saw him only once, but the memory of that interview has always been a clear and wholly charming one. He was then—it was about three years ago—an old man physically, a little slow of movement, just a trifle unsteady, but mentally as alert as a young man just starting his literary career, as eager to talk of books and people. He had, with his quickness of judgment, a fine mellow tolerance and unlimited kindness—rare qualities in an artist of whatever age. I found, after I had left, that he had succeeded in interviewing me much more thoroughly than I had interviewed him. He had found in me a reincarnation of his own youthful ambitions. That is one of the wonders of life. Though success come, with its golden hands bruising ever so little the sensitive eagerness with which youth looks on life, there is always some one just as eager, just as glamoured by the dream of accomplishment. As Eunice Tietjens says in one of the finest of the poems in "Body and Raiment," "The dream goes on." William Dean Howells recognized the dream in many youthful, eager hearts.

"Duds" [Harpers], by Henry C. Rowland, the story of the perilous hunt of Capt. Phineas Plunkett, U. S. A., for German loot smugglers, has gone into another printing. It is a tale with a real mystery in it.

"Blacksheep! Blacksheep!" [Scribners] is a story after the manner of Meredith Nicholson's early successes. It has all of the thrill and the dash and the excitement of "The House of a Thousand Candles," and is just as easy to read and just as worth reading as that popular success. If you like a story with criminals gayly criminaling and automatics sputtering and everything, "Blacksheep! Blacksheep!" was written especially for you.

Shrouded in the anonymity of Anthony Pryde, some young English writer has a jolly good job of writing a thriller in "Marqueray's Duel" [McBride]. It is a combination of "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," Elinor Glyn, and the whole school of young English authors who dash off a novel with the same light skill and charm that made François Villon an historical character. Marqueray, a young man whose manners are better than his morals, and whose charm is a combination of them both, fights a spiritual duel with himself and an actual one with the lady's husband. Hence the title. Phyllida, the lady, has that same frank conversation about her indiscretion that made, of the waif in the famous Locke novel one of the memorable characters of light fiction. There is a housekeeper whose reflections on the ways of men and maids are as amusing as they are outspoken. Something happens every minute of the time, and it is all very smart and very entertaining, and most certainly very up to date. Mr. Pryde has had such a success in England that he will probably unwrap the veil about himself and we'll discover that he is H. G. Wells, or Arnold Bennett, or W. L. George, or another of the beacon lights to English literature having a literary holiday.

A friend of F. Scott Fitzgerald took me to task for saying that he has just married Rosalind. "Impossible," said he, "for Rosalind was a Lake Forest girl. He was desperately in love wihh her, and he nearly went to pieces when she married just as he said in "This Side of Paradise." Another friend of the youthful genius, this time a girl—I have never known of a young person who has left such a trail of adoring ladies in his wake—said that even at the age of 17 he was a vivid personality. "I remember meeting him at a house party in Minneapolis," she said. "The rest of us were just young things, dancing what we fondly believed to be the ltest steps. He came, debonnairily talking about Castle house, and with the very last word in dances. He had spent three days there to equip himself perfectly for the house party. It was, even then, his philosophy of life that everything was possible to him who realized his own powers. He wasn't conceited. He was just sure of himself. He is probably the only young man in the United States who could get away with what he did. He would go to a dance, find, unerringly, the prettiest girl in the room, and with perfect sang froid and a lovely boyish smile go up to her and say, 'Please fall in love with me.' And we always did."

"Measure Your Mind" by M. R. Trabue, Ph. D., and Frank Parker Stockbridge, is a scientific statement of the good old fashioned puzzle picture, with scoring points for one's mental facility in solving it. It is literally what it says, a compilation of mental measuring tests, those which have been used during the war and in great industries, with some which have been especially designed for this volume. For the lay person, the book is a jolly puzzle. It should be a complete home entertainer for the hostess who is always looking for the latest popular science for a conversational cocktail for her guests.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

WHEN IN DISGRACE.

By William Shakespeare.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes
  I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
  And look upon myself and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
  Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
Desiring this man's art and that man's scope,
  With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
  Haply I think on thee and then my state,
(Like to the lark at break of day arising
  From sullen earth) sings hymns at heaven's gate,
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

CARRANZA PLAN TO BE DIAZ II. IS UPSET BY REVOLT

Effort to Trick Mexico with Bonillas Fails.

born in the country, is more warlike than many of his generals bred in the cities, would never permit any one to give him the title of general. Knowing, undoubtedly, that the chief trouble with Mexico is the incurable eruption of generals with which the republic is afflicted, he did not care to add another boil to the diseased body of the nation by assuming the title of general.

His followers always referred to him as the "first chief"; they never called him general. During his campaigns Carranza wore the uniform of a buck private.

The Trouble in Mexico.

Now, on the eve of his retirement from office, he took part more or less directly in the presidential campaign and he used his influence to bring about the election of a civilian.

"The trouble with Mexico," he told me in an interview, "has always been, and still is, militarism. Few of our presidents have been men drawn from civil life; always generals. And what generals! No, this thing has got to stop, for the good of Mexico. My successor ought to be a civilian, a man of modern views, and progressive ideas, capable of preserving domestic peace and directing the economic development of the nation. It is time that my country should begin to live the healthy, normal life which other nations enjoy."

Calls Carranza Ideals Absurd.

The ideals cherished by Carranza could not be more praiseworthy, but, at the same time, nothing could be more absurd and dangerous than the means employed by him to carry out his plan. Therefore, while I applaud his views on militarism, I applaud also his downfall.

To invest the presidency of the republic with the civil character that befits it, it would have been necessary to choose a candidate of eminent qualities, a man with a long record of distinguished public service, a man of unquestioned popularity.

And what did Carranza do? He did precisely the very opposite thing. He selected one of the most obscure of Mexicans. He hit upon Señor Bonillas, his ambassador at Washington, a man who has spent most of his life away from his native land and who even married abroad.

DISSENSIONS A FACTOR

There is another important factor in the situation—the character of the Carranza government in the closing days of its régime.

I am well aware of the fact that when a revolutionary party triumphs in a country like Mexico, dissensions are bound to occur in its ranks eventually. These dissensions are inevitable.

The "deserving patriots" are legion. They all want their reward, and the country does not have enough wealth to go around and satisfy every appetite. The lucrative offices are few in number and there are dozens of candidates who consider themselves competent to fill them.

There is, moreover, a situation peculiar to Mexico. In every country one can find the disinterested revolutionary type—the ascetic agitator, who expects to get from revolution only the ideal satisfaction of victory.

Of course, in every revolutionary movement there are shameless self-seekers; but together with these there are noble and disinterested visionaries who sacrifice themselves for the common good and who, after the triumph of their doctrines, continue to live like red saints, feeding on the bread and water of their enthusiasm.

No Outstanding Patriot.

Among the Mexicans who occupied the highest public offices after the revolution I searched in vain for the Don Quixote, for the type that appeared in the French and Russian revolutions, the disinterested patriot who thinks only of the common weal without regard to his own advantage. I failed to find him. Those I met are men of hard practical sense who never lose sight of personal profit.

I was surprised to see the large number of rich revolutionaries in Mexico. There may be some poor revolutionaries in Mexico—I hope there are some, for in my own country I was once a poor revolutionary—but if there are any such in Mexico their number is so scarce that they can be counted on the fingers of one hand, with some fingers to spare.

The Masses Are Misled.

The majority of those revolutionaries are undoubtedly the sons of millionaires. They claim that before the revolution they were simple peons, ambulant venders, subordinate employés, or mere vagabonds. Such claims must be forced attempts on their part to hide their influential origin and so to flatter the popular masses.

If what they say were true, their present wealth could be explained only by some unexpected inheritance recently received from relatives who had heretofore ignored them. Otherwise it would be utterly impossible to understand how men who six or seven years ago were ambulant milk dealers, venders of dry vegetables, or Mexican hats, hungry rural school teachers or mail carriers, can honestly have acquired fortunes estimated at several millions of dollars, especially since these men have wasted considerable time in revolution.

Women In on the Ground Floor.

It is equally difficult to explain how so many wives of generals and colonels who half a dozen years ago were poor women of the peon class, how so many lady friends of generals and colonels are now able to display expensive jewelry which remind people of the gems bought years ago by the leading Mexican families now in exile.

But let us not insist on these details. Suffice it to say that the prominent leaders of the Mexican revolution made the revolution for a fixed purpose. They do not understand sacrifice for the common good.

Carranza had to consolidate his new government. After the first few years he was forced to limit the number of his favorites; whereupon those who were left outside the golden shower of his favors became the bitter enemies of the first chief.

Mere Youths Are Generals.

When I observed closely the inner circle of intimate friends who gather around Carranza in his presidential palace I was struck by their youth. The respectable Don Venustiano, with his white beard and light blue spectacles, looked like the head master of a boarding school for boys. Generals of 27 and grave ministers of 29 or 30 followed with veneration and gratitude the old first chief.

In reality one of these youths was the real ruler of the Mexican republic during the last few years, the real power behind the throne—Juan Barragan, 27 years old, the chief of Carranza's staff.

Those who had a petition to make would immediately think, "I shall have to see Juanito Barragan about this."

"Johnny" a Part of Carranza.

On account of his youth and amiable character, everybody spoke of Barragan as Juanito, "Johnny" Barragan. A simple law student and the son of a well to do family, he followed Don Venustiano when the latter rose against Huerta.

Carranza always showed a certain weakness for this youth, who accompanied him everywhere as a beautiful and decorative adjunct to the presidential entourage.

It has been stated recently that Barragan was executed by the revolutionaries of Mexico after Carranza's flight. I hope the rumor is not true. Why kill him?

He was the Apollo of the great revolution. Tall, handsome, despite his childlike features, the girls of Mexico consider him the best looking man in the republic—in fact, in the entire world. He was almost a national glory and received honors accordingly. With the bright blue of his uniform and his gold braid he was a dazzling sight. He seemed to have just stepped out of a toy box, freshly varnished. He bought himself a new uniform every week. Twenty-seven years of age, fine health, an amiable character, and the master of Mexico!

Barragan a Spendthrift.

Barragan's enemies said that he owned a whole row of houses in the principal avenue of Mexico City. Impossible! He could not have had any money left for such investments after throwing it away by the handful as he did.

During the last few years it has been a fine business for singers and actresses to go to Mexico! Thanks to the amiable chief of staff, an actress could visit Mexico and return to her native land with savings amounting to one or two hundred thousand dollars.

Barragan's power extended even to the university. During my visit to Mexico, the government assigned me to that institution, which was invited to entertain me and direct my excursions over the country. This courtesy did not surprise me. It is because I am a writer, I thought.

But shortly before I left Mexico, through the indiscretion of a functionary, I discovered that a certain famous foreign dancer had also been consigned to the university during her journey in Mexico a year before! Was I offended? Of course not! It was the doing of amiable Barragan.

He received all petitioners with a bountiful generosity, as though he would die rather than fail to serve them. He never said "no" to any one. He was capable of surrendering Don Venustiano's head if he was asked for it with real insistence.

And Carranza, plain in dress, grave in appearance, a man of strict morals and clean life, when he observed the elegant uniform and the gold braid of his chief of staff, seemed to rejoice as though he were contemplating his own image in a looking glass. On other occasions, when the president would hear of Barragan's successes with the ladies, he would smile with the delight of a kindly grandfather.

Too Busy to Say Good-By.

I left Mexico City without bidding adieu to the Apollo of the revolution. His excellency, Gen. Don Juan Barragan, was spending whole days with the telephone receiver at his ear, giving orders, with his eyes fixed on the map of Mexico.

The followers of Obregon already had taken the field and "the handsomest Mexican," as the marriageable señoritas and visiting actresses say, had just assumed the duties of a strategist and was busy directing the movements of the federal troops.

Poor and amiable boy! I can see now why the Carranza régime collapsed so readily.

CAUSE OF CARRANZA'S FALL

The real and immediate cause of Carranza's downfall was his obstinate attempt to impose upon the country the presidential candidacy of Bonillas. If it had not occurred to him to insist on this solution and he had allowed the presidential campaign to follow its natural course, letting Gens. Obregon and Pablo Gonzales fight it out, he might have completed his presidential term in peace. And he probably would be revered as an idol today by his old subordinates.

The reader will probably ask why Carranza hit upon a candidacy so unpopular as that of Señor Bonillas. To answer this I can offer only conjectures, or, rather, I must repeat what I heard in Mexico.

Tell About Bonillas Affair.

As the majority of Mexicans are firmly convinced that Carranza is a tricky politician because of his reserve and deep laid machinations, they give the following explanation of his conduct in the Bonillas affair:

Bonillas was to be a mere tool in the hands of Don Venustiano. He had selected him for his very insignificance—because he did not belong to any party and because he was wholly unknown in the country. Bonillas would thus owe his position entirely to his protector and would not be likely to "darse la vuelta contra el"—in the language of the country, or, as the English say, to "bite the hand that fed him."

This business of darse la vuelta is a Mexican game which must be taken into account, for the country is a famous hotbed of political treason and there is always fear that the friend of today may become the enemy of tomorrow. If you help some one to get along in the world in Mexico you are almost sure soon to receive a kick from him. He will boot you to show his self-respect and independence.

With the anonymous Señor Bonillas there was no occasion to fear such a kick. A creature of Carranza, he would remain faithful to his chief and he would continue to surround himself with a circle of friends selected by his protector to be his advisers and guardians.

Shortsighted critics did not attribute this purpose to Carranza. They thought that the candidacy of Bonillas was a stratagem invented for the occasion.

"We know the viejon barbon," they said, alluding to Carranza's white beard. "He has launched the candidacy of Bonillas for the mere purpose of irritating Obregon. Obregon will raise against the government and a long war will follow. Carranza will then declare that it is impossible to hold elections and will continue in the presidency indefinitely."

The Game of Politics.

Others, more farsighted, came nearer to the truth, in my judgment, when they discussed the situation.

"Carranza," they said, "really wishes to be succeeded in the presidency by Bonillas. Under the direction of Carranza, and with a legislature composed of Carranza deputies, Bonillas will see to it that the constitution is revised, eliminating the article which forbds the reëlecton of the president. After the article is eliminated Don Venustiano will become president again and he will get himself reëlected indefinitely."

The method is not new. Porfirio Diaz did that very thing. He began his political career by rising against the reelection of presidents, and after he became the chief magistrate of the republic he yielded the place for a brief priod to one of his own henchmen, had his own constitution amended, and thus opened the way for his thirty year rule.

I believe that Carranza really wanted Bonillas to succeed him; but I cannot refrain from judging that in this, Don Venustiano rendered his protégé very poor service.

Has Sympathy for Bonillas.

Of all the personages who figure in this last Mexican revolution, Bonillas is the man who inspires my deepest sympathy on acount of his misfortune. His rôle has been that of certain good though simple minded characters of the comedy, who inevitably pay for the faults of others, and who, despite their reluctance to get mixed up in quarrels, receive all the blows.

Why did they not leave him alone? He was living so peacefully in Washington as the diplomatic representative of Mexico. His post seemed destined to become perpetual. If Obregon were to succeed Carranza the general would surely keep Bonillas as ambassador to America because they are both from Sonora and have been friends since their childhood.

No matter who might be elected president, Bonillas would be kept in his post, respected as a good man who serves his country the best he knows how, and who, residing abroad, could hold completely aloof from all domestic political quarrels.

But alas, Don Venustiano conceived the unhappy idea of selecting Bonillas as his successor, and of stirring the ambassador's ambition, dragging him away from the sweet environment of his family and the noble tranquillity of Washington.

Ten months ago the Mexicans were unaware of the existence of Bonillas. A few knew that a gentleman by that name lived in the capital of the United States and they even suspected that he had done great things for Mexico, although they were not quite sure what these things were.

And lo! all of a sudden the government launches the name of this man—a name that arouses no echo in public opinion—as if Bonillas were a providential personage, destined to save the country.

Have Keen Sense of Humor.

The people of Mexico City have a keen sense of humor and show a veritable genius for inventing nicknames. Moreover, the Spanish Zarzuela companies, the experts in light and comic opera, play a great deal in the theaters of the Mexican capital, so that the public of that city has acquired the same keenness for repartee which characterizes the people of the popular quarters of Madrid.

Among the songs written for the Zarzuela theaters of Madrid there is one which has become extremely popular, and is sung in all the theaters and music halls of the Spanish-American countries. The song tells the story of a poor shepherd girl who has been abandoned and wanders over the face of the earth not knowing where she was born nor who her parents were. She knows nothing about herself except her nickname, which is "Flor de Te," or "Tea Flower."

"The Tea Flower."

The malicious people of Mexico City immediately christened the Carranza candidate who had come from foreign parts, the candidate who came nobody knew whence and who was going no one knew whither.

"Viva Bonillas! Viva Flor de Te!" "Hurray for Bonillas! Hurray for 'Tea Flower'!"

And from that moment everybody lost respect for Don Venustiano's whiskers and for the terrifying face he puts on when he is in bad humor.

In the next article I shall relate the tragi-comic incidents through which were born, grew, and died—through the candidacy of "Flor de Te"—the immediate cause of the revolution.

The next article of this series will be published tomorrow.

MIDDLE WEST TO FORE IN HONORING NATION'S HEROES

Apathy of Rest of U. S. a Surprise to Paris.

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, May 15.—Boys from the east, boys from the south, and boys from the west are buried in France, but up to date the bulk of the contributions for decoration of the American graves in France come from the middle western states of Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. The Paris Memorial day committee is receiving cabled reports of the progress of the campaign in the United States and is most gratified with the results from the "heart of the nation," but inclined to wonder at the tardiness of the response from other sections.

Shall we cover them with flowers? The Tribune and associated newspapers have raised more than $12,000 to be used to decorate the graves of America's heroes who lie beneath the sod of France this Memorial day.

The fund is increasing at the rate of about $1,000 a day and it is hoped that at least $25,000 will have been subscribed by May 25, the day fixed to cable the money to the Paris office of The Tribune.

45,000 Graves to Suffer.

There are about 70,552 graves to be decorated, and the cost for each grave will be at least $1. Not many flowers could be purchased for a dollar here, but in France the blooms are cheaper, and the rate of exchange will add to the amount forwarded when the American gold is transformed into French francs.

What is needed is contributions from the great percentage of our people who passed through the war practically unscathed. So far bereaved mothers, fathers, brothers, and sisters and sweethearts have subscribed the bulk of the money.

Wants Permanent Fund.

The Northern Trust company and its employés sent $75.40 yesterday as a memorial for Corporal Leo J. Hanley, a former employé, who was killed in action on the Metz front on Nov. 10, 1918.

The Taylor Coal company, inclosing its check for $25, wrote that "our company has the honor, but the great sorrow, of having four of our boys buried there."

"A Grateful Citizen," inclosing his check, suggests that the fund be made perpetual for the purpose of decorating the graves every Momorial day.

The employés of the Vassar Swiss Underwear company inclose a check for $9 and this expression of sentiment:

"Our faith in him who died afar,
On Flanders' fields has kept;
And this we know through deeds of his,
His soul in God has slept."

PARIS, May 13.—

Row upon even row they stretch,
A white and shining multitude;
Line of crosses on the soil of France,
To mark the plighted brotherhood
That knew no barrier, no breed,
When heroes side by heroes stood

The soft and misty skies bend low.
A whispered murmur or regret
Films the pale moon, so still they stand,
These crosses in the night, and yet,
That silence echoes round the world—
Do we forget? Can we forget?

They are our children who lie here.
So still they lie—so still the plain
Where poppies redden in the sun,
We feel our grief to be in vain.
They are not dead—these sons of ours—
They live while memories remain.

There is not a single word which can express the thousand and one emotions that tear at one's heart at the sight of an American soldiers' cemetery in France. I went to one the other day. In either direction stretched row after row of white crosses, each marking the spot where somebody's son or brother, husband, father, or lover lies.

What a marvelous amount of devotion is consecrated in this vast field of foreign soil!

Overhead the sun was shining from a soft blue sky, misty with trailing clouds. From somewhere a bird sang. Under foot the buttercups, daisies, forget-me-nots, and violets made a vivid contrast in their setting of green turf with the dusty yellow gay road that led with many windings to the point whence I looked upon the army of sentinels to our honors in France.

As I looked the significance of Memorial day struck me more forcibly than ever before. These men are our men. Our memory of them is their life. As long as they are not forgotten they are not dead. They have gone out ahead of us on a splendid mission, ac companied by all the clamor, beauty, and horror of war, but the fellowship of them remains with us. If we don't forget.

NATION HONORS ALL WHO DIED FOR ITS HONOR

Dedicates Memorial at Arlington Cemetery.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—Veterans of the Civil, the Spanish-American and of the World War, members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps assisted today in the dedication of the $825,000 memorial amphitheater in the national cemetery at Arlington.

The principal speakers were Col. D. M. Hall of Columbus, O., commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic; Secretary of War Baker, and Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

The memorial, erected by the government in honor of the men who fell in all the wars fought by the United States, was proposed by the Grand Army of the Republic. Today's ceremonies were under its auspices.

Last Rest for Yanks.

Gen. March, chief of staff, said the southwestern part of the cemetery, near the site of old Fort McPherson, had been set apart for Americans who fell in the world war.

"Twice since 1861," Secretary Baker said, "the sword of Washington has been drawn from its scabbard and each time the spiritual children of the revolution have rallied to the defense of free institutions."

Secretary Daniels said the "greatest glory of the broad Potomac is that upon its slopes lived and grew to world greatness two of the most illustrious soldiers in the annals of history—Washington at Mount Vernon, and Lee at Arlington."

Proclamation by Wilson.

President Wilson issued a proclamation of dedication and that was read during the ceremonies. It said:

"The dedication of the national memorial at Arlington closes and commits to history a great episode in the making of a nation. Gathered in this national cemetery and elsewhere are most of the men who fought out the constitutional question, insoluble by other processes, and now the government has set this great and beautiful building to stand like a sentinel on the banks of the Potomac and to view for all time the capital of a reunited nation.

"Time has thrown its softening influence over the controversy; time has eliminated from our memory the bitterness which that controversy aroused, but time has only served to magnify the heroic valor of the captains and men who fought the great fight.

Nation Arose United.

"As the nation arose, united, it found itself blessed with a great tradition. In these later days that tradition has nerved the arms of millions of Americans called upon to vindicate upon foreign fields of battle the principles of political liberty.

"Who shall say whence the strength came of these matchless men? From every corner of our great country they came with one thought; that of devotion to the pure purpose for which their country called them.

"They lived among our allies and faced the foe as soldiers from the new world should, conscious of their strength, confident of the cause, alike unselfish and unconquerable. And I like to think that in their hour of triumph, unseen but potent, there stood beside them the spirit of the great dead, the spirit of those who originally rescued America from the political tyranny of the old world and dedicated and kept her free and just.

Can't Attend Ceremony.

"I cannot attend the ceremony of this dedication, but my heart is there and with my fellow countrymen everywhere I join in grateful recognition of the virtues which this memorial commemorates and in reverent thanks to the God of nations that He has made it possible for us in this day to show the world that America still is baptized in the spirit of the founders and builders."

Earlier in the day the veterans, headed by a troop of cavalry, a battalion of marines and blue jackets, passed in review before the president, who stood on the south portico of the White House. Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, U. S. army, retired, was grand marshal of the parade.

"HANDS OFF"

Indianapolis, Ind., May 16.—A policy of "hands off" for the American Legion as an organization in all disputes and controversies between employers and employés or between capital and labor is outlined by Franklin D'Olier, national commander of the legion, in a letter mailed today to Thomas Goldingay, state adjutant of New Jersey.

The letter defines the attitude of the national headquarters of the legion with respect to instances in which members of the organization are reported to have taken sides in strikes and similar controversies, and deals with questions which are to be taken up by the national executive committee at its meeting in Washington next Tuesday. The letter reads in part:

"I should say that as an organization the American Legion should adhere closely to the policy of avoiding the taking of steps in any controversy between employers and employés, although individual members, as individuals, have the right to do so. But as an organization the legion should avoid such things."

BUSSES SHAKING DOWN HOUSES IS OWNERS' PLAINT

Sheridan Road Protests to State Board.

Members of the Sheridan Road Property Owners' association told the public utilities commission in Springfield yesterday that the busses of the Chicago Motor Bus company are gradually shaking their houses to pieces. They filed a complaint asking that the bus company be forced to "provide adequate, efficient, and cleanly service" and to comply with the special ordinance under which they operate, especially in regard to the weight of the carriers.

Busses Weigh Too Much.

"Not one bus is operated that does not weigh from 400 to 2,000 pounds more than the weight specified in the ordinance," said Attorney Edmund Cummings, legal representative of the association. "Under the special ordinance the Lincoln park board, under which they operate, the busses are limited to 10,500 pounds. The excessive weight of the machines, coupled with their flat wheels, is shaking the property owners' houses to pieces along Sheridan road."

Mr. Alter asserted that the plastering in his home at 6156 Sheridan road is being shaken loose and has fallen in spots.

Busses Called Filthy.

"The busses are filthy and most of them are crowded to capacity," Mr. Alter said. "They weigh too much and a good many of them break down. They rumble and squeak past our homes, making so much noise that we cannot hear ourselves think if we sit on our porches. We hope to get relief before summer comes at least."

Others who accompanied the delegation to Springfield were Fred Bullen, Robert Eastman, and William R. Edwards.

Officers of the bus company asserted they knew nothing of the complaint and would not discuss the charges made against their service.

Indiana Odd Fellows May Buy Land for Sanitarium

Goshen, Ind., May 15.—[Special.]—Petition soon will be filed with the Indiana grand lodge of Odd Fellows by members of the I. O. O. F. in northern Indiana, asking that 600 acres of land adjoining Lake Papakeecha be purchased for a tuberculosis hospital. The project was launched at a meeting held here.

$20,000 FOR EYE

Woman Hurt at Loop Theater Performance Gets Record Indemnity.

MRS. WILLIAM FOX.

[Lewis Smith Photo.]

The Zurich Insurance company yesterday paid Miss Grace Rheams, in private life Mrs. William Fox, $20,000 for the loss of the sight of her right eye.

Miss Rheams was attending a performance at the Palace theater on Feb. 3 when one of the actors, shooting at bells upon the stage, hit something that sent a tiny bit of metal into the first balcony where Miss Rheams sat. It struck her in the eye. Miss Rheams' attorney is Louis Brandes.

The largest amount ever paid previously for the loss of an eye was $13,000.

Miss Rheams, who lives at 608 Belden avenue, was unsmiling over the large settlement.

"You don't think, do you, that $20,000 is too much for being blind in one eye?" she asked. "It's the worst thing that can happen to anyone—blindness. The insurance company was generous, but it should be. The accident was no fault of mine and I am the sufferer."

BACK TO FARM MOVEMENT HAS ITS BOOM DAY

More than 350 Chicagoans Look for Jobs.

The "back to the farm" movement grew apace yesterday when more than 350 men applied at the offices of the Illinois Agricultural association at 130 North Wells street for positions. More than a third of the men were placed before 12 o'clock, when the bureau closed until Monday.

Most of the men were sent to northern Illinois, where, according to William Thompson, who is in charge, there is the greatest need of men. Among those who applied were numbers of schoolboys who worked on the farms during the war, and who are anxious to spend the summer vacations in the country. Arrangements have been made to send them to farms throughout this and other midwest states as soon as the school year closes.

Meredith Issues Plan.

E. T. Meredith, secretary of agriculture, has issued an appeal to all universities and schools to induce the students to spend their vacations on the farms, particularly at harvest time.

According to a statement issued by J. N. Hagen, federal director of labor, of Bismarck, N. D., there is a great shortage of labor throughout the Dakotas. He appeals for 300 single men for the territory around Bismarck alone. In addition he wants 150 married couples for the same district. Wages of $75 a month are offered single men, while the married couples will receive $110 a month.

Not All Needed Now.

Not all of these men are wanted at once, as the harvest season, for most crops, does not begin until June. Those who wish to go to work in localities where the crops are harvested earlier can get positions in North Dakota after the crops in their section are harvested.

CITY NEWS BRIEFS

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of Traffic Directors and Counselors was organized at the Morrison hotel.

THOMAS B. FERRIS, 72, a machinist of 2426 Warren avenue, was probably fatally injured when struck by a car said to have been stolen. Frank Barbian, 20, 545 North Wells, was arrested.

CHARGES SURFACE LINES HIDE FUND OF $5,731,069

Declaring that a sum amounting to $5,731,069.96 has accumulated in the past thirteen years without being accounted for in the books of the Chicago Surface lines, Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Cleveland yesterday requested the public utilities commission to ask an explanation from the traction officials. Mr. Cleveland further charged that a slush fund had been maintained for political campaigns, and asked an inquiry into these expenditures also.

Examiner Bartlett, before whom the hearing on the valuation of surface lines property in their plea for higher rates is being held, said the discrepancy charge would be considered before the Monday session.

Yesterday figures were submitted by David C. Caldwell, expert accountant employed by the city, and A. L. Drum & Co., hired by the surface lines. The former estimated the value of the car lines property, not considering depreciation, to be $174,433,000. The latter placed the valuation, figured on a basis of what it would take to reproduce the lines, at $193,370,612.

Urbana, Ill., May 15.—[Special.]—George William Woodward, 50, was killed by a taxi while riding a bicycle here today.

"BRIBED" POLICE OFFICIAL SNARES BOOZE RUNNERS

Youngstown, O., May 15.—[Special.]—Apparently perfect arrangements for the delivery and sale of ten thousand cases of bonded whisky suddenly went to pieces today when detectives met the first consignment of the liquor, in charge of fifteen men who supposed they were immune from arrest because Safety Director David Scott had agreed to permit the liquor to be transported in consideration of a bribe of $50,000.

What they did not know was that Scott had installed a dictograph in his office before conferring there with two representatives of the liquor crowd and that the first payment of $2,500 on the bribe had been turned over to a secret witness.

Two strangers approached Scott early this week with the bribe bait. He pretended to fall in with their scheme and arranged for a conference. All the conversation by means of the dictograph was recorded.

GAMING DEVICES NO EVIDENCE OF GAMBLING, JUDGE

Mere possession of roulette wheels and other gambling devices does not in itself constitute violation of the law, according to a decision rendered by Judge Stewart yesterday. Evidence must be produced to show that the gambling paraphernalia is actually being used and that money has changed hands before persons may be prosecuted. On this basis John Mackin, 4518 Sheridan road, and several others arrested in the Briggs house with a choice collection of roulette wheels, "jockey" sheets and other accessories of chance, were discharged yesterday.

CON CON MAY BAR INHERITANCE OF VAST FORTUNES

Confiscatory Tax Urged by Lee Mighell.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., May 15.—[Special.]—"The right of inheritance is limited by the public welfare. Vast fortunes shall be confiscated to public use by a graduated inheritance tax."

That is the declaration which Lee Mighell of Aurora, a delegate of large means, desires to place in the industrial section of the new Illinois constitution. Amos Miller of Chicago, John Brenholt Jr. of Alton, and Mighell have been appointed to prepare an industrial article for the constitution, to conform with the demands of Chairman Reed of the miners' union.

Union labor did not ask for anything so sweeping. It asked only the right to organize, strike, collect, and disburse strike benefits.

Proposal Is Sweeping.

The Mighell proposal limits profits of employers, requires them to carry life and accident insurance for employés, prevents strikes in food and fuel industries, and suggests other innovations.

Here are some of the provisions:

"Children never shall be employed in a manner to retard their physical, mental, or moral development, and the comfort, health, safety, and general welfare of all employés shall be guaranteed.

"Every child shall be educated and trained to become a self-supporting citizen, and the rights of young or inexperienced persons to learn a trade or useful occupation as apprentices never shall be restricted or abridged by any person or organization.

"All employés in mines, factories, and other dangerous industries shall be insured at the expense of the employer as to death and accidental injury.

No Restricted Production.

"Efficiency and initiative in all branches of industry shall be encouraged and adequately rewarded, and production shall not be restricted by concerted action of either employers or employés.

"Public officers or employés may organize and petition the government or its representatives for relief, but never shall interfere with the continuous operations of the governmental functions through threats or through concerted cessation of work.

"The right of all people to continuous and uninterrupted supply of food and fuel is a primary right and such right shall never be obstructed or be interfered with by the concerted action of persons or organizations. Impartial tribunals shall be created to insure the public welfare and a speedy and equitable adjustment of all industrial disputes connected therewith.

Capital's Return Limited.

"Capital shall have only such part of new wealth produced by industry as shall induce it to continue in and develop the business. The balance shall go to labor and the public.

"The right of employés to participate in every decision which directly affects their welfare or the part of the undertaking they are to perform shall be recognized.

"The community is the most essential party to industry and shall have adequate representation in every industrial decision."

There has been a disposition in the committee on industrial affairs and labor to smother any definite declaration on labor. Mighell and Brenholt said today they are opposed to that program. It is understood that Miller, who is in Chicago, wants the subject decided upon the floor of the convention.

HIST DARK PLOTS STIR HAMILTON CLUB ELECTORS

The Hamilton club's annual election of officers takes place tomorrow.

There is intense rivalry between the candidates. The papers have referred to the rival tickets, but anyway——

For president—Shillman T. Meservey or Robert W. Dunn.

For first vice president—John C. Everett or William G. Edens.

The campaign has been furious. Take the episode involving the Hamiltonian, official publication of the club.

The edition was late in getting into the mails. Then a postal clerk glanced through the magazine. Wowiee! He found a sample ballot. A meeting of the directors of the club was called. The federal laws had been violated.

"We learned an error had been made by the printing company," said Mr. Dunn last night. "Just a simple error."

"Was the sample ballot marked in favor of your opponent?"

"No. The one they found wasn't," he said.

The ballots were removed from the magazines and duly delivered by mail.

Then there is episode No. 2. During the last three weeks several picture postcards of America's greatest Niagara have been delivered to Hamiltonians. Each carried a message like this.

"Am having good time—wish you were here—sorry you can't return for election—Meservey good man—wish I could vote for him." Some of the cards were signed "Bob."

"I never sent them," said Robert W. Dunn.

GIRL MISSING AFTER PARTY; LAKE DRAGGED

Miss Annabel Belfield of 6326 Lakewood avenue disappeared from her home yesterday morning between 3 o'clock and dawn. She was believed to have thrown herself in the lake and the police dragged the water at the foot of Rosemont avenue.

Miss Belfield had returned from a north shore health resort, where she had recuperated after an attack of influenza. A party was given at her home in celebration of her return and she retired shortly before midnight.

When her parents went to her room yesterday morning they found her nightgown over the foot of the bed. They believed she might have gone out unclothed, but later discovered a black dress was missing.

FAT MEN LEAD AS LAST LAP IN CONTEST STARTS

Lose More than Eleven Pounds on Average.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The end of three weeks' work in the contest between Dr. John Dill Robertson and twenty-five fat women on one side and twenty-five men under my direction on the other shows twenty-one men still in the race and only thirteen women left of the original twenty-five.

These thirteen women, who were weighed in on Friday at the Dwyer School of Physical Culture, showed a loss of 32 pounds for the last week, making a total loss for the three weeks on the woman's side of 133¼ pounds, or an average of 10¼ pounds apiece to date, as against the total loss to date of masculine poundage of 250¼ among twenty-one men, or an average of 11 2-5 pounds apiece.

Three Men Quit.

Three men dropped out or have been missing the class the last few days—Messrs. Schilt, Gluchlich, and Baker—and three women were reported missing at the last weighing of the doctor's class.

Miss Nellie Leonard, of course, walked off with the honors in the feminine class with 20 pounds loss, Mrs. Susie Jones and Mrs. Zipperer both running her second with 16 pounds loss to date. Mrs. Francis Seegar rated next high with 12 pounds loss.

In addition to the weight loss among the men, there is a remarkable waist reduction shown, too. An average of 5.1 inches. W. F. Ford boasts a nine and one-quarter inch slenderer waist than he could three weeks ago. But he has worked for it.

Star Loses 22 Pounds.

M. G. Evans, male star, stands highest in my class for weight loss, registering twenty-two pounds less than the day of enrollment.

"The fine thing about it," says Mr. Wallace, who has given these men an hour daily workout in the three weeks' time, "is that the men all feel so fine. There isn't one of them who doesn't feel a few years younger than he did three weeks ago. And they look it, too."

To Jimmy Kilroy goes the medal for being in the best athletic trim. Jimmy works hardest of any man there. Maybe he's planning a Carpentier bout! Jimmy wasn't very fat, to be sure, but he needed to get rid of that seven and one-half pounds, just the same, and he's going to work off some more.

Just One More Week.

There's just one more week in the contest. It will close next Saturday with announcements on Sunday of the winning side and the best records made. The best individual records made during the coming week will be given special attention. So don't slack up, any of you, now! Stick to the diets as conscientiously as you possibly can and do the daily exercise.

I hope you'll be with us this morning at 10 o'clock. We're going to have a grand and glorious time out in the country, where we expect to bury a few pounds as the result of the five mile hike. Remember, Tribune building, third floor, 10 o'clock sharp.

ARMY SCHOOL AT CAMP GRANT NEEDS 1,000 MEN

Courses in Ten Subjects Are Offered.

One thousand students are wanted for enlistment in the model school at Camp Grant, according to an announcement sent out yesterday by war department officials in Washington. The students will be required to enlist for three years, but will not be required to serve in armed branches of the service until after the expiration of the school term, which is three months.

The school will open on June 1 with intensive courses in ten subjects. They are: Automotive, electrical, building, textile, metal, highway construction, and topography, music, machine, business, and agriculture.

Faculty to Be Mixed.

The faculty will consist of officers and civilian instructors. Facilities and equipment for conducting an experimental demonstration of both the school work and the recreation features of army training have been provided.

The school is going to be a regular university in khaki, as the enlistment lithographs indicate. There will be glee clubs, bands, orchestras, dramatic clubs, and athletic activities. There will also be an amateur theatrical company under professional supervision, giving shows, and special classes on the drama will be conducted for those who qualify.

Development Is Sought.

Development of virile, well balanced personalities, loyal to the best American standards of conduct and character, is the definite purpose of the entire program of the school. In announcing the school, the authorities at Washington state that they wish the desired number of recruits to arrive at the camp as soon as possible, as it would be better for the students to have a few weeks' instruction in military training before entering upon their scholarly duties. They also said that students may pick any branch of the military service for the remainder of their enlistments, with the exception of air service, motor transport corps, and chemical warfare service.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

On May 11 a donation of $5 to the memorial fund was received to be credited in "memory of Arthur L. Bonner." Mention of it in the list was accidentally omitted.

Lid Stays Down, Chief Says; Bars 500 Transfers

The hopes of 500 policemen who sought transfers to "easy" territories were blasted yesterday when Chief Garrity stood before a waste basket and calmly tore their written requests into bits.

"These applications are the result of the last aldermanic election," explained the chief. "At that time rumors were circulated that certain districts were to have the lid removed. I can understand vary easily why some men want to be transferred."

The chief declared there will be no prying up of the lid. He said it would be tighter than ever.

'SONG OF LARK' MOST POPULAR PAINTING HERE

Breton Canvas Stays the Favorite.

A reproduction of "The Song of the Lark" appears in the rotogravure section in this issue of The Sunday Tribune.

BY EYE WITNESS.

Chicago's four favorite pictures in the order here given are:

"The Song of the Lark," by Jules Breton. Painted in 1884.

"The Silence of Night," by William Wendt. Painted in 1910.

"Flower Girl in Holland," by George Hitchcock. Painted in 1887.

"The Home of the Heron," by George Inness. Painted in 1893.

All these works hang in the Art institute—doubtless within ten or twelve minutes' walk from your office and five minutes from your club.

They are not the pictures that the more than a million persons who go to the lake front gallery in a year pretend to like, or merely say they like because the cognoscenti tell them they ought to like them, but the pictures they stand in front of, buy postcards and prints of, and then come back to see.

Nor is the estimate of these picture loves fanciful or the result of guesswork. It is based on:

(1)—Sales of postcards and other photographic and color reproductions of dozens of the Institute's most famous pictures. Last year they sold 300,000 such postcards, and 17,000 color prints, ranging in price from 35 cents to $21.60. In six years they have sold 1,224,000 of the postcards. On a recent Saturday 3,000 postcards were sold. The point is, they provide a sound basis for calculation.

(2)—On tallies kept by guards and attendants of the size of groups in front of notable pictures on typical days.

(3)—On summaries—covering long periods—of the comments of all sorts of conditions of people, for from such are the Institute's visitors drawn.

Not Sensational.

Stirred up afresh in this matter by the suggestion of "judging a town by its picture loves, the heads of the Institute and of various departments of it went over their statistics and their digests of opinion for THE TRIBUNE last week, rechecking and verifying everything. Among the investigators were Director Eggers, Secretary Tuttle, Vice President Logan, Mr. Hough of the publicity department, and Mrs. Heath, who looks after the postcard and color print sales. They questioned guards as to the drift of recent comments overheard and went over the accounts of sales of reproductions.

Their opinion was that the results obtained are not only authentic and representative, being based as they are on 00 pictures viewed by 1,040,000 persons in a year, but also that there, decidedly, is nothing to be ashamed of in the preferences the estimates reveal.

All the artists who thus have captivated a community are moderns, but only one of them—William Wendt—is living. All save one—the Frenchman, Breton—are Americans, though Mr. Wendt is an American by adoption, having been born in Germany. Of the four themes, one is of Normandy, one of Holland, one [the Inness] of America, presumably, though it might be drawn from any swampy glade in a pastoral region anywhere, and one [the Wendt] is more or less idyllic.

Favorite of Them All.

"The first favorite of them all, without a doubt," is the statement of Secretary Tuttle of the Institute, on the popularity of "The Song of the Lark." It was also a favorite at the World's fair, whence it was transferred to the Institute. It has hung there ever since, but was not formally presented to the foundation until 1917. It is part of the great Henry Field memorial collection given by Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page in memory of her first husband. Its popularity was immediate, and that popularity has endured for twenty-seven years. Jules Adolphe Breton painted "The Song of the Lark" at Courrières in 1884, when he was 57 years old. He died in 1906, at the age of 79. This canvas is 44x33½ inches. It is far and away the biggest seller in postcards, though one of the postcard reproductions of it is so bad that it ought to be suppressed. There are three other Bretons in the Institute.

"The Silence of Night," 40x55 inches, was painted by Mr. Wendt in 1910, when he was 45 years old. He is known as "the California painter," but the institute people—soft pedaling the German origin—call him "a Chicago man." He has, indeed, worked much here, but now lives in Sichel street, Los Angeles. He received a public school education, but was self-taught in art. He came to America in 1880 at the age of 15. He has painted in England, France, and this country, and has exhibited in the Paris salon, the Royal academy, London, and in the principal American galleries.

"Flower Girl in Holland."

The favorite ranking third among the four favorites is the brightest piece of color among them. "Flower Girl in Holland"—not "of Holland"—as most people miscall it—was painted by George Hitchcock in 1887 when he was 37 years old and in midcareer. He lettered it "Op. : . ." The artist was born in 1850 and died in 1913. This canvas measures 31x58¼ inches. It was presented to the Institute by the late Potter Palmer in 1888. It is the only Hitchcock in the galleries.

The fourth favorite—it was the third until a few days ago when the Wendt instantly took second place—is one of the most notable gems of that room of twenty-one gems—the Inness collection, which was persented to the institute in 1911 by Edward B. Butler, himself a painter, now that he has retired from business. George Inness was born in 1825. He died in 1894.

THE TRIBUNE AIDS THE LEGION

The Tribune has joined forces with the American Legion in seeking new members in the Legion's membership drive. In the picture above Miss Marriott Smith, The Tribune Friend of the Soldier, is shown in the Legion booth at the city hall, explaining the meaning of the American Legion and how to become a member, to some former service men.

Find Woman Witness in Dorsey Chambliss Case

A woman witness, recently found by the state, will be ready to testify against Dorsey Chambliss, negro ex-policeman, and Mrs. Emma Ross when they are placed on trial before Judge Lewis tomorrow morning. They are charged with mistreating Bertha Wiebeck, the 17-year-old white girl, who came here from Kansas to earn a living. She died a few months later, after being rescued from a house of ill fame.

TEXTILE MILLS WILL INCREASE PAY OF 300,000

Boston, Mass., May 15.—Wage advances effective May 31, it is said, will affect nearly all the 300,000 textile operatives in New England. This will make the wage level about 100 per cent higher than four years ago and approximately $1,000,000 will be added to the weekly pay rolls of New England mills.

The grant of 15 per cent at Fall River will affect about 35,000. New Bedford will add almost 35,000 more, while the American Woolen company's fifty mills, employing about 34,000 persons in New England, New York, and Pennsylvania, was the first to act among the woolen interests.

Other woolen manufacturers said today they also would grant about 15 per cent advance.

Rapid Progress in Construction of Rosehill Mausoleum Addition

The practical and far-sighted business man prepares for every emergency in life. No doubt, upon investigation, you will wish to consider this most important subject.

This addition consists of twenty-two beautiful MEMORIAL ROOMS arranged to meet family requirements.

Erection of the walls is going on rapidly and every effort is being made to complete the building at an early date.

We have found from experience that no building can long endure severe climatic changes without provision for heating, ventilating and proper care.

These features have been provided in our Mausoleum, the perpetual maintenance of which is safeguarded by a Trust Fund exceeding $125,000.00.

As the number of rooms available is limited, an early selection is advisable. In the present building there remain but few family sections and single crypts.

A representative will be at the Cemetery each day to show visitors through the Mausoleum and give further details.
Trust Funds which assure permanent upkeep of Rosehill Cemetery now aggregate $1,400,000.00 and are increasing daily.

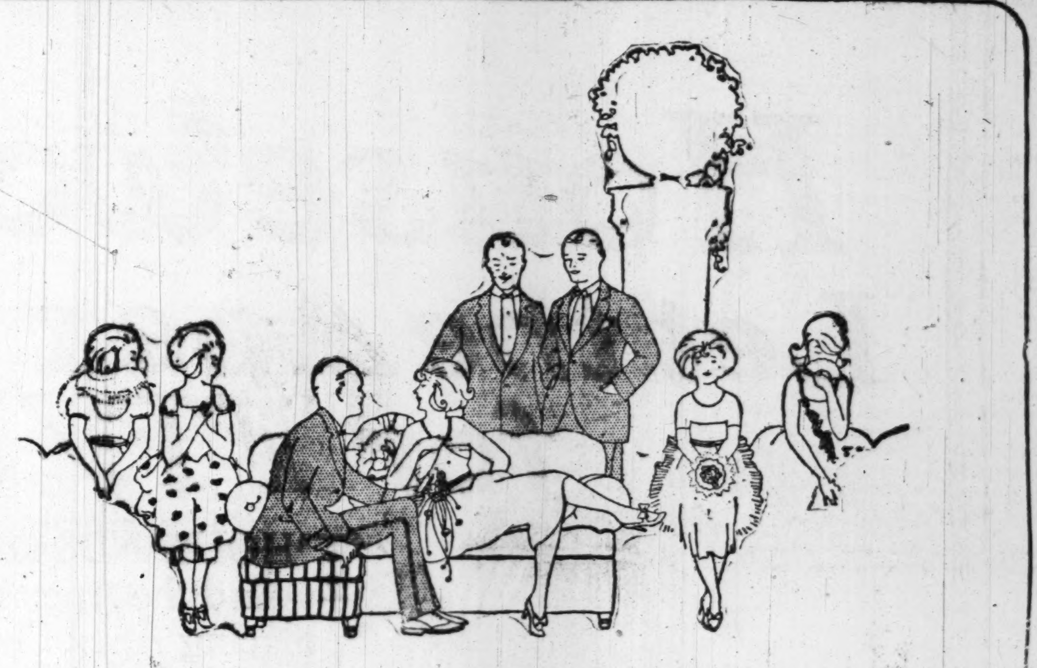
THE ONLY COMMUNITY MAUSOLEUM IN CHICAGO



Entre Nous

By Anita Allison

Mind you, this is strictly entre nous, not to be breathed to a soul—not even to B. L. T. But it appears that Chicago's debutantes when disporting in the gay temples of Terpsichore, are not always, so to speak, strait-laced.

Coy Eighteen, forced by parental mandate to embark for jazzland properly barricaded by the whalebone stay, outwits her censors by doffing the corset before the first fox-trot, checking it blithely with her dolman.

I have it direct from a north shore mamma, who, elevating her lorgnette at Madame Grundy's rumor, investigated the checkroom of one of our most haute monde emporiums of the danse and discovered thirty corsets parked.

But after all who can blame a mere slip of a girl if she prefers to limit her underthings to Futurist?

For who of us doesn't know this garment as the most vital accessory to the dance?

Futurist fits the figure snugly, yet softly, giving such perfect freedom to the body that its wearer may dance far into the morning without the merest suggestion of fatigue.

This fact alone has sent hundreds of girls and women shopping-bound in search of this dainty undergarment. Errant fancies of the dancing deb notwithstanding, Futurist beneath the corset is a new-found comfort, luxury and joy.

Futurist comes in a host of textures: batiste, marquisette, nainsook, crêpe and luscious silk in flesh or white.

It is also made for misses (sizes 12 to 18) and for little girls and boys (sizes 2 to 12). For women there are also new Futurist knickers and vests.

You will find Futurist on sale at all the better stores and shops—Stevens', Mandel's and Field's in the Loop, for example. It is fashioned in round or bodice tops as you prefer.

When planning a wardrobe for this summer's vacation jaunt, no matter whether you are destined for the seashore, mountains or northern woods, be sure to include a plentiful supply of Futurist. It is the most comfortable and at the same time the daintiest garment you can imagine.

If you have the slightest difficulty securing just what you desire, drop a line to Anita Allison, 310 West Erie Street, Chicago.

GRIDIRON STUNT WINS BALL GAME FOR PRINCETON

Spilling Second Sacker Beats Harvard, 3-1.

CAPT. TRIMBLE.
[Photo O. J. Turner.]

Princeton, N. J., May 15.—[Special.]—Some big league ball players might get a few points on roughing it in a game of baseball by watching the Princeton Tigers perform on the ball field, only the same kind of stuff might not go with a big league umpire. However, the Tigers put it over today and made it largely responsible for their victory over Harvard, 3 to 1.

Such things are not usually seen in college circles, but the Princeton squad seems to have a bit more spirit and fire in it than the usual college outfit. This admirable spirit, perhaps, helps them a lot in all their playing, though it carried them a little too far on one, if not two, occasions, but as long as such things go with college umpires, why not use them?

Spoils Double Play.

STRUBING.
[Photo O. J. Turner.]

In the fifth inning of the combat, the Tigers filled the bases. They needed one run to tie or two to go ahead. One man was out. Capt. "Morrie" Trimble smashed one down to the Harvard shortstop. The Crimson infielders were laying back for a double play and it looked like they had it in their hands.

The Harvard shortstop tossed to the second baseman, forcing one runner, but that runner, Lee, was quick witted enough, desperate enough, and high spirited enough to know that if he could spoil the completion of the double play, one run would score and tie the count. So he disregarded the rules of interference and smashed into the Harvard second baseman, knocking him off his pins and spoiling his throw to first.

Umpire Allows Play.

I expected to see the umpire allow the double play because of interference, but he did not, and the Harvard players protested only slightly and resumed play. A base hit followed and an error, and Princeton had three runs over the pan. Those three were all they got, and if that double play had been completed they would have had none.

With Axel Warburton on the rubber, the Harvard boys had a hard time landing on the ball when a hit would mean business. Warburton, a good sized fellow, right handed, and possessing a swell side arm curve ball that he could control, seemed to pitch with a little more finish than any collegian I have looked at this spring.

Curves Third Strike.

Once with the count three and two on the batter, he soaked a curve over the plate for the third strike, and the batter could hardly believe the ball had gone over. Warburton walked only a couple of men, and once one of his curves dug into a batsman's ribs, but in all tight places he was as steady and true as a big leaguer.

But the support given him was great. A large part was done by Capt. Trimble at short. Doubtless he may have a big league trial almost anywhere he chooses, if he wants to, after ending his career here in baseball and football.

Story of Great Play.

Here's a play one seldom sees even in the big leagues. One was out in the eighth and a Harvard man on first when a pinch hitter came up. He poled one of those low, loopy Texas leaguers over short, and it looked like a ten to one shot it would be a hit against any defense.

Capt. Trimble went back at breakneck speed, just like I imagine he goes down the gridiron to receive a forward pass. He finished with a leap into the air and captured the ball, then rolled headlong for a somersault. But he never forgot there was a runner on first, and, rolling up to his feet, he made a perfect peg away back to his mate at first and had the ball there before the Harvard runner could get back. If Charley Hollocher or Buck Weaver pulled it in Chicago it would be worth a half column or more.

Tiger Rooters Show Form.

The Princeton boys play real baseball, possibly no more than they do at Michigan and Illinois, but considerably above the average. A battle with the Wolverines or Illini ought to be worth seeing.

CORNELL VARSITY AND FRESHMEN WIN IN REGATTA

Princeton, N. J., May 15.—Cornell's two crews triumphed in the triangular regatta today. The varsity oarsmen swept across the finish line one-third of a length ahead of Princeton and one and three-quarters lengths ahead of Yale, and the freshmen won by five lengths from Princeton and eight lengths from Yale. Princeton won the junior varsity race from Yale. Cornell did not compete.

The varsity race was timed in 9:16, the freshman race in 9:18, and the junior varsity event in 9:30.

Cornell deserved the victory in the varsity race. Had it not been for the fact that the No. 4 oarsman in the Cornell boat caught his oar on one of the half mile marking posts, the Ithacans would have won by at least a length. Princeton staged a magnificent spurt in the last quarter of a mile, but could not make up the lead gained by Cornell in the first mile and an eighth. As it was, Princeton's drive fell short by a third of a length.

Princeton led Yale all the way in the junior varsity event. Cornell's freshman eight won decisively.

NAVY OARSMEN WIN AND LOSE

Annapolis, Md., May 15.—Eights of the Naval academy and Syracuse university were contestants today in two bitterly fought two mile races on Severn river, a scant margin of seven feet separating the winning crews in each instance. The Syracusans captured the varsity race in 10:20 1-5, while the Middies were timed in 10:21. In the second varsity race Navy won in 10:37 2-5, with Syracuse four-fifths of a second slower.

Greb Takes Beating at Hands of Tommy Gibbons

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 15.—Harry Greb, Pittsburgh's classy boxer, took the licking of his life tonight at the hands of Tommy Gibbons, the St. Paul flash, in a ten round bout at the ball park, Forbes field. Greb only succeeded in gaining a narrow margin in two rounds, the fifth and sixth, while Gibbons piled up big shades in seven of the other chapters. The third was even. Gibbons looked 100 per cent better than when he was last seen in action here, while Greb looked somewhat out of condition.

Bully for Old Purdue.

Friend Harvey: Referring to the report of the Chicago-Purdue dual track meet recently, I think the credit should have gone to Miller of Purdue, who won 20 points. Chicago was no doubt "handicapped by the absence of Higgins," but Miller threw the javelin ten feet farther than the conference record.

We have been doing cellar stunts at Purdue for a number of years until the alumni were sick and tired of it, and we are trying mighty hard to reach the conference standard, so we need Help! Help!, not disparagement.

Purdue won eight firsts and Chicago seven. In three events the performances were better than in the Illinois-Michigan meet and seven marks were better than the Yale-Princeton meet. M. S. G.

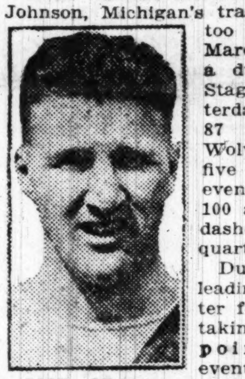
MICHIGAN WINS FROM MAROONS IN TRACK MEET



COOK, Michigan.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Even without the services of Carl Johnson, Michigan's track team was too good for the Maroons, winning a dual meet on Stagg field yesterday afternoon, 87 to 48. The Wolverines won five of the field events and the 100 and 220 yard dashes and the quarter mile.

Dunne was the leading point getter for Michigan, taking eleven points in five events, won two firsts, and Otis equaled his performance by winning the mile and two mile. Cook won both sprints.

The day was cold and most of the performances were poor. Otis took an easy mile in 4:38 and then came back in the two mile, winning from Maynard by more than fifty yards after he had trailed behind the Michigan man for seven laps.

The 220 brought the best race of the day. Cook won by a step from Harris. Summaries:

One mile run—Won by Otis, Chicago; Jones, Chicago, second; Moore, Chicago, third. Time, 4:38 2-5.

FABER BREAKS LOSING STREAK OF SOX, 2 TO 1

Bests Boston in a Tight Pitching Battle.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

URBAN FABER.

Boston, Mass., May 15.—[Special.]—Playing with the skill of champions, Gleason's White Sox breezed home ahead of the Red Sox, 2 to 1, in the opener of the series today. The score is a fair indication of the closeness of the nine rounds of diamond endeavor which included spectacular fielding, rank errors, great pitching, and even thirty minutes of rainfall that came near ending the matinée without a decision.

Spurred on by beautiful hurling dispensed by Urban "Red" Faber, the Chicagoans played flawlessly on defense. The pitching was a feature in itself, but without steady and even spectacular support "Red" might have suffered defeat. The plays that ided him in times of trouble were catches by Jackson and Felsch and a stop and throw by Weaver.

Pennock Fights Gamely.

Herbert "Lefty" Pennock, who opposed the victors, gave Faber a great argument during the first seven innings. In fact, he had a slight edge during that time, holding the White Hose scoreless despite two cracks in his defense. In the eighth, however, Pennock, after a thirty minute hiatus due to the rain, lost his effectiveness and the Sox nicked him for a run.

Faber also suffered slightly from the enforced rest and the Boston gang tied it in the home eighth, but after the Gleasons shoved over the deciding tally in the ninth, "Red" was good enough to prevent any damage by the hostilities in their final stand.

One Run on Four Hits.

When the pastime was resumed in the eighth the Chicagoans had only three singles to their credit. Faber led off in the eighth with a two base knock over Menoskey's head. J. Collins flied out, and E. Collins singled, putting Faber on third. Weaver soaked a single to left, and Faber scored, but E. Collins was cut down at third, Weaver going to second. Jackson then beat out a scratch hit, but Felsch ended the round with a fly to center.

Pennock was responsible for the Red Sox run in the eighth. He singled with one gone. Hooper pushed a short fly to right center and Felsch made a dandy run for it but the pill fell at his feet. McNally fouled to Schalk. Menoskey grounded to first and got a hit when the ball bounced over Jourdan's head, Pennock scoring and Hooper taking third. The inning closed when Hendrix forced Menoskey.

Error Is Helpful.

The White Sox winning run in the ninth was coined from two hits and an error. McMullin singled to center after Jourdan had been retired, Schalk hit safely to the same spot, and McMullin headed for third, and continued to the plate when Hendrix made a bad return throw. Schalk reached second on the play and died there, Faber fanning and Pennock tossing out J. Collins.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

Who is the most valuable player on the Cub team?

The Answer.

JOHN J. KNIGHT, 911 Church street, Evanston, a chief salesman—Barber. He hits when they need 'em and fields a wonderful game. You can't beat him.

C. L. LUDLOW, 4457 Magnolia avenue, a paper dealer—I think Killefer is. He is in the game every day. I don't believe they could get along without him.

W. F. FARRELL, 533 Briar place, an executive—Deal is. He is the best all around player on the whole team—in the whole league, in fact. He hits the ball, plays a wonderful, easy game, and throws better than any third sacker I have ever known.

EDWARD COSTELLO, 1230 Penn street, a metal maker—Ed Deal is the best third basemen in the league. He uses his bean. Delivers hits when they need 'em and makes the hardest chances look easy.

J. FULTON, 1246 Barry avenue, a painter and decorator — Hollocher. He has been knocking 'em dead this season. A good man to keep up the morale of a team. A remarkable player, too.

Notes

Boston again today.

Looks as if it would be up to Alex the Great to make it seven straight.

Two Braves were set down on strikes in the ninth inning. They were Sullivan and Boeckel.

Terry starred frequently in capturing Texas league flies. He robbed Pick of a hit in the third and again in the eighth.

Vaughn would have had two hits to his credit but for Maranville, who sneaked back into deep short and stole a hot one from Hippo in the seventh.

Powell made a dashing play to pinch Barber's long hit in the sixth inning. There was nobody out before that happened, and what followed would have scored Barber easily if his swat had gone safe.

Manager Mitchell reduced his roster another notch yesterday when he released Pitcher Theodore Turner to the Toledo club. Turner has much stuff but has to learn to tame it. He was obtained from Bloomington last fall.

NOTES

Boston, Mass., May 15.—[Special.]—The two clubs will rest tomorrow, resuming operations Monday.

Eddie Cicotte, who was left at New York suffering with tonsillitis, is expected to report here tomorrow.

The gamblers are still doing business at Fenway park. Several hundred of them were gathered at their customary hangout in the right field pavilion.

Of the seven hits off Faber, only three were clean drives to the outfield. Jackson's single in the eighth was the only fluke among nine White Sox swats.

As the Boston club does not possess a canvas covering for the infield, it was necessary to sprinkle several bags of sawdust on the diamond before play could be resumed after the rain.

DODE PASKERT.

Industriously bunching their hits on Dana Fillingim while Hippo Vaughn was performing at his best, the Cubs annexed their sixth straight victory yesterday at the expense of Boston's Braves by a score of 5 to 1.

Vaughn allowed the enemy only three singles which were so unneighborly that they would have averted a shutout if one of them had not been followed by a boot by Deal on a chance to retire the side in the seventh.

In addition to clustering five of their nine swats in the fourth and fifth chapters, the Cubs ran bases with considerable abandon. Their feats in this line were featured by Paskert's steal home in the fourth inning. It probably was the cleanest theft of the kind ever perpetrated, for Dode did not even slide into the pan. He was safely on top of it when the ball left Fillingim's hands.

Makes It Fifty-Fifty.

Paskert offset this brilliant stuff by a skull play in the eighth when he allowed himself to be doubled up off third on Deal's line drive to Mann, instead of scoring another Cub tally on it. That made it fifty-fifty for Dode.

Vaughn's support was not as good as that given the Brave hurlers, and Hippo himself was inclined to be generous. He gave the visitors as many passes as they made hits, but in the pinches he was stingy. Fillingim gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth and let Bailey fall victim to one of Zeb Terry's several fine catches in various parts of short right field. John Paul Jones worked the eight against us and would have yielded a run if the Cubs had played the game right.

Cubs First to Scorfe.

The Cubs scored first in the fourth. Flack busted it open with a double over third. Hollocher sacrificed, and Paskert pestled a long fly which squirted off Powell's fingers after a brilliant try for it. Barber scored while Dode reached second, then went to third on Barber's out and stole home while Fillingim was indulging in one of his laziest windups.

Deal led the successful sortie in the fifth with a single. Terry sacrificed and Killefer walked. Vaughn pumped a low fly safely into short left and Deal scored on it. The throw home let Killefer to third and Hippo to second. Flack popped out to Powell, whose throw home would have doubled up Killefer, but Gowdy let the ball slip out of his hand in making the tag and the run counted. Hollochers' double scored Hippo.

Error Permits Score.

The Braves did not get a man to second base from the third round until the seventh. Then Sullivan led off with a walk. Holke smashed a liner over short and Paskert held it down to a single by a great stop. Boeckel rapped to Hollocher for a double play which put Sullivan on third. Maranville's high bounder toward third oozed through Deal's digits, letting Sully register. Gowdy bounded the side out.

On Local Golf Links

THE first members' play event of the season brought out a throng of 350 golfers at Olympia Fields yesterday and resulted in some highly creditable scores. Two courses were played on. Five hundred were out for supper and last night's social program. A mixed foursome is scheduled today. R. H. Grimm was winner of the first prize for low net in the eighteen hole medal handicap. He had a card of 87—16—71. C. J. O'Connor won second honors with 99—27—72. Other leaders of the field were: H. Wilkinson, 103—28—75; Ralph Hoagland, 81—6—75, and T. A. Knapp, 93—18—75, who finished in a tie for third low net.

Hoagland played the best gross round of the season. His card of 81 had no hole in more than a five. A new member, F. H. Walz, completed a curious record. He has played the course only four times, yesterday being the fourth, and each time has gone around in the same total of 86.

HAWTHORNE.

Four players tied for first place in the match play against par, and three tied for the fifth honors at Hawthorne. Those who tied for first were W. P. Glenn, M. E. Kelly, P. E. Kern, and H. F. Jackson. Tying for fifth were W. C. Chipps, F. C. Cawthon, and J. F. Grosvenor.

INDIAN HILL.

Match play in the May tournament was started at Indian Hill, with the following results in the first flight: R. C. Lord beat C. L. Strofle, 1 up; E. M. Cummings beat A. D. Edwards, 6 and 5; R. H. Harrison beat B. McLeod, 3 and 2; H. O'Brien beat Grant Ridgeway, 2 and 1; R. C. Butler beat M. P. Noyes, 5 and 3; B. F. Cummings beat Harry Parrish, 1 up; A. Koch won by default.

Johnston, 110—30—80, tied for first. In the ball sweepstakes W. L. Shepherd was first, F. Jeiss was second, and H. A. Kimball, Carl Doricos, and O. M. Carter tied for third.

BOB O'LINK.

A "get together" handicap tournament, in which old and new members competed, inaugurated the season at Bob O'Link. Following the golf event a stag dinner and smoker was held. Winners of the prizes were:

Low gross, old member, J. I. Bush; low net, old member, A. R. Peterson; first low gross, new member, K. W. Curtis; second, F. A. Cukaden; first low net, new member, C. A. Irving; second, C. C. Fogarty. Low net foursome—J. P. Marsh, W. E. Faxson, C. C. Fogarty, and W. C. Gillette.

INDIAN HILL.

Edward M. Cummings, medalist in the qualifying frame of the May tournament, registered another victory in the first match round by defeating A. D. Edwards, 6 and 5. R. O. Lord and B. F. Cummins won home green matches, the former over C. L. Stroble and the latter over H. F. Parrish. Other matches in the first flight resulted as follows: R. H. Harmon defeated E. G. McCloud, 3 and 2; H. V. O'Brien defeated Grant Ridgway, 2 and 1; R. C. Butler defeated M. P. Noyes, 5 and 3; A. C. Koch won by default from E. C. Thomas. Only one match was concluded in the second flight, J. E. Bradstreet defeating E. W. Ellis, 3 and 1.

JACKSON PARK.

With a card of 76—15—61, C. Young won the G. L. Sprafka trophy at Jackson park in the eighteen hole medal play, handicap contest. C. Holman, 74—11—63, had the low gross score and finished second in the net column. Other leading scores: W. Moran, 75—8—67; J. P. Wright, 79—10—69; G. Geanes, 90—20—70; B. Smith, 76—6—70; T. J. Monahan, 80—9—71; B. Quin, 80—8—72; J. A. Bender, 82—10—72; A. W. Baum, 78—6—72.

M. M. GRIDLEY and R. Robert tied for first in the Class A event, featuring play over the Glen View course yesterday. J. W. Tremin [18] and H. B. Riley [15] tied for second with 77 net. C. B. Moore [24] won the Class C event with 74. The qualifiers for the Pumphrey trophy were:

LINCOLN PARK.

The schedule at Lincoln park, which was to have started yesterday, was postponed for another week on account of the soft condition of the regular greens. Nearly 350 players turned out, however, and used the temporary greens when putts were sunk.

HAWTHORNE.

Employes of the Western Electric company held their spring tournament at Hawthorne. Scores must have been "shocking," as the keeper of the records disappeared with the archives and could not be located.

NORTHMOOR.

More than 100 members were out at Northmoor tuning up for the first formal event of the season, which is scheduled next Saturday.

ENGLEWOOD.

Finishing with 99—25—74, E. F. Gaylord won the S. F. Short trophy, which was given to the player registering the low net score in the eighteen-hole medal play handicap competition. W. F. Waller and H. H. Mitchell played the feature match in the first round for the house committee trophy, honors alternating up to the nineteenth green, where Waller won when Mitchell missed a long putt for even terms. O. M. Wakefield and P. B. Miller went to the home green before Wakefield could clinch a victory. The other matches resulted as follows:

W. C. Caldwell defeated B. M. Cheney, 2 up; W. A. Barnes defeated H. C. Boice, 2 and 1; T. M. Erickson defeated R. Barnes, 5 and 3; H. B. Hollings defeated B. M. Carpenter, 3 and 2; A. F. Sandquist won by default from D. P. Jones; R. E. Pritchard vs. F. F. Heppe, postponed

BELMONT.

Belmont featured a four ball foursome, teaming the highest and lowest handicap players against each other, aggregate scores less three-fourths of the combined allowance counting in the reckoning. A. J. McGivern and F. M. Bell, 194—14—180, topped the field. F. B. Gallagher and Carl Heinzen, 207—14—193, were runners up, while L. H. Schafer and G. M. Stannard, 214—19—195, and F. S. Penney and Perry R. Boole, 223—27—196, finished as named.

EDGEWATER.

Charles Evans Jr., and Charles H. Mayo, the amateur-professional team meet Jock Hutchinson and Bob MacDonald at Edgewater on May 29, which is to feature the opening of the home club, played a round yesterday preparatory to further team practice. Neither player extended himself, but some fine drives and approaches were made by each. About 100 members also played informal golf.

Special Steels add Life to the

MAXWELL

These steels are the product of the highly developed Maxwell laboratories, where steels have been studied, analyzed and tested for years.

They are made to Maxwell's own formulae and enable the Maxwell to stand punishment that few cars can meet successfully.

They lessen the task of the engine and make it more responsive, quicker in action and a delight to handle.

These are some of the virtues which have won friends for the Maxwell in ever increasing numbers and give it a longer life than many cars of higher price.

Today there are approximately 400,000 Maxwells on the world's highways. The year 1920 will add 100,000 more.

NEW CHAMPION, SOU'PAW BOXER, RARE IN SPORT

Johnny Wilson, Italian, Jumps to Ring Fame.

Tribune Decisions

Decisions of The Tribune fight representatives are:

At Pittsburgh—Tommy Gibbons beat Harry Greb [10].

At Philadelphia—Tommy Cleary beat Batting Mack [8]; Tommy Murphy beat Martin Judge.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Well, fellow followers of pugilism, we have a sou'paw champion, something that seldom happens in this old game. His name is Johnny Wilson, at least that's the name he goes under in the glove wielding game. The name his parents gave him when he came into the world in sunny Italy was John Francis Panica, but as no one can tell the nationality of a scrapper by the monicker he picks for boxing, the "Wilson stuff" is no more surprising in this case than any other.

JOHNNY WILSON.

The fact that Wilson is a sou'paw is the thing that distinguishes him from other titleholders, although his sudden leap from a second rater to a champion is another matter that should not be overlooked.

O'Dowd Between Two "Lefties."

It seems that the middleweight guys are more prone to display class than the boys of other divisions. So it is interesting to note that before Wilson hopped to his high station there was another sou'paw who was middleweight champion. In this connection, Mike O'Dowd, the fellow who was walloped out of the crown by Wilson, occupied a strange position. He happened to get between a couple of sou'paws and between the two they yanked the crown off his Irish head.

The first of the two sou'paws that O'Dowd came in contact with was Al McCoy of New York. McCoy pulled the surprising feat of knocking out George Chip in one round, winning the title. It was here that O'Dowd entered the picture.

McCoy Loses Title to O'Dowd.

It just naturally happened that he was given a chance at the title—a battle with McCoy—and what O'Dowd did to that champion was enough to demonstrate that Mike was of the stuff of which titleholders are made. They fought in New York Nov. 14, 1917, and Mike knocked out Al in the sixth round. That result did not suit McCoy, so the pair were rematched for a second contest which was staged in St. Paul July 17 of the same year. This time O'Dowd made his superiority stand out more impressively by knocking out Al in three rounds. That finished McCoy, the left hander, as a topnotch battler.

O'Dowd, since winning the title, went along nicely, not encountering any more sou'paws or right handers for that matter who could prove dangerous contenders for the crown—that is, until the other night in Boston when he permitted himself to be matched against this person Wilson in a twelve round decision bout.

Wilson Springs Upset.

Mike was beaten and beaten squarely by Wilson, for the Bostonian made his victory certain by knocking O'Dowd to the canvas in the second round for a four count, and at the end of twelve rounds was awarded the decision. So O'Dowd finds himself in the position of a man who has to thank a sou'paw for enabling him to win the title and curse another sou'paw for taking it away from him.

Wilson's record for his six years of boxing is good. He is 27 years old and has had 108 bouts. He won forty-two by knockouts, won fifty-eight decisions, and lost eight decisions. He never has experienced the sensation of being knocked out.

Wilson's ascension to the championship throne gives us two Italian champions. The other is Pete Herman, bantamweight champion, of New Orleans.

Woods and Waters

by LARRY ST. JOHN

WIGGLE-WORMS AND TROUT.

TROUT fishermen, like farmers, are dependent upon the whims of the weather. By this we do not mean merely that the much-hated east wind may cast an evil spell upon Fisherman's Luck, but rains, locally or at the headwaters, may roil the water to such an extent that fly fishing is out of the question for the man who wants some fish with his fishing.

When such conditions prevail—and they are likely in the forepart of the season—there are just two answers: quit fishing or use bait.

Bliss Perry, in his "Fishing with a Worm," covered the ethics of bait fishing in these well chosen words: "If he will rise to some fly in your book, few fishermen will deny that the fly is the more pleasurable weapon. Dainty, luring, beautiful toy, light as thistledown, falling where you will it to fall, holding when the leader tightens and sings like the string of a volin, the artificial fly represents the poetry of angling.

"Given the gleam of morning on some wide water, a heavy trout breaking the surface as he plunges, the fly holding well, with the right sort of rod in your fingers and you perceive how easy is that Emersonian task of making the pomp of emperors ridiculous.

"But angling's honest prose, as represented by the lowly worm, has also its exalted moments."

A good fly fisherman once said: "I never fish with worms because I never learned how."

The logical way to learn trouting is to start on worms. A good worm fisherman can quickly become expert with flies, but seldom the other way about for worm fishing, as applied to trout, is a peculiar art—like the Three R's it is easy for the young to grasp, but difficult for the grown-up.

A most expert fly fisherman once remarked, rather mournfully: "I try hard but I have no luck with worms; but O, you ought to see the beautiful logs I catch — nothing under 100 pounds!"

I think that's the big difficulty of the inexpert worm fisherman: He lacks the peculiar knack of avoiding snags which an old-time worm fisherman does with uncanny skill.

Worm fishing need be neither crude nor juvenile. In fact, with good tackle it is a fine art. Using a fly rod, reel, enameled line, gut leader, and proper hook it offers much sport and often many fish at times when the fly fishing purist is likely to be "outa luck."

If worms are scoured by keeping them in damp moss for a few days, and are carried in moss or sand, they are not dirty to handle and they are livelier on the hook. Use a hook of fair size—say a number four—to avoid the injury of small fish and let it have a long shank so it can be removed easily.

There are, one might say, several "schools" of worm fishermen. Some insert the hook once or twice through the worm's body; others either thread the worm on the hook, after the fashion of the bullhead fisherman, or put on a number of worms in what they call a "gob." I guess it doesn't make a great deal of difference to a hungry trout, but some free ends should be left to provide the much desired "wiggle."

Assuming that the fisherman is worming in roily water, he should fish fairly deep, close to the banks, and in eddies and backwaters below rocks or other obstructions, the main idea being to let the bait float or roll where food naturally would wash down.

In slow water a sinker may not be necessary, but where there is considerable flow pinch a few split shot on the leader, about eighteen inches above the hook.

Stand in the water if possible—a good spot is just above or below a pool or below a dam—and twitch the bait to the other bank if you can reach it. Let it sink and follow it with your rod. When you get a nibble carefully take in the slack—very necessary if you are fishing with a fly rod—and then strike hard, down stream. Keep out of sight as much as you can and move about as little as necessary. Above all things, avoid walking heavily along the bank where you or some one else is going to fish.

Sometimes a likely looking spot cannot be reached by ordinary methods. A favorite system of getting the bait to a cluttered-up place is to put it on a chip or leaf and let it float there: then twitch it off.

One more hint: Wet your hands before releasing a fish that is not a keeper. It increases his chances greatly of running away to live to fight another day.

SKRIVAN WINNER OF ROLLER TITLE

William Skrivan of Opal A. A. won the ten mile roller race, part of the world's amateur championship tourney, at White City rink last night, finishing a short distance ahead of Charley Meyers, a clubmate. Skrivan's time was 32:11 2-5. Meyers fell on his second mile, but recovered and gradually overhauled the field. Thirty-five skated.

The course was 110 laps of the rink, Howard Beaumont winning the lap prize for setting the pace for forty-seven straight laps.

GARFIELD ALLEY STAR TOPS STATE TOURNEY SINGLES

The twenty-third annual tournament of the Illinois Bowling association finished its second week last night at the Randolph alleys. The schedule calls for two more weeks of play. Frank Shaw, from Mike Boyle's Garfield alleys, was the feature performer, taking first place in the singles and all events. He got 679 pins for his individual effort and for his tournament play he piled up 1,852.

Bill Moritz, although an official of the organization for years, got into the limelight for the first time by landing sixth place in the all events. Leading scores:

HIKE FROM FARM

Kansan Walks to Chicago to Buy Machinery.

On Friday, May 14, Farmer Kirby McRill of Tonganoxie, Kas., culminated an argument with a neighbor over the possibility of walking seventy miles a day by declaring he would show Tonganoxie whether it could be done. Yesterday afternoon Friend Kirby hove into the Polk street station over the Santa Fe railroad right of way, dusty and somewhat tired, but proud of his eight day hike of 567 miles which started right where the Tonganoxie argument left off. He said it was cheaper to walk here, to get some threshing machine repairs for the summer farming, than to pay railroad fare.

Before returning to Topeka, also via the footwork special, McRill has a few little pleasure hikes in mind, from Chicago to farm implement factories in Laporte and Racine.

BALL PLAYERS WARNED AGAINST "JUMPING" CLUBS

Auburn, N. Y., May 15.—A warning to professional baseball players against violating contracts by joining amateur or semi-professional teams, either openly or secretly, was issued today by the National Association of Professional Baseball league, through its secretary, John H. Farrell. Any player who has "jumped" his contract is given until June 1, 1920, to return to the deserted club, it was stated, or be debarred from filing an application for reinstatement for a period of five years. A player willfully disregarding his reservation by a club shall be debarred from applying for reinstatement for a period of three years.

The national board and not the club concerned will act on the application and impose such conditions and penalties as it may see fit.

PURPLE ADDS GOLF TO OTHER FIXTURES ON ATHLETIC CARD

THOUGHTLESS boosters of other Big Ten colleges last winter kidded Northwestern because the Methodist school abandoned baseball and simultaneously drew up a bridge whist schedule of interfraternity matches.

Let them look now at the situation in Evanston, where Arthur B. Sweet, golf professional, is organizing a golf team that bids fair to annex the conference championship which Freddie Stiles of the Purple won back in 1916.

Let them hear that the faculty athletic committee has unofficially expressed itself as favoring baseball for next year. Let them scan the list of new sports introduced in Evanston this year under the direction of James L. Lee.

Sweet was a member of the 1916-1917 team at Northwestern. For the last two years he has been a professional at Edgewood Golf club at La Grange. He was captain of his team at La Grange.

Boxing and wrestling this year have formed an important part of the Northwestern sport program, and the championships held recently marked the Methodist school as the first big university in the west to adopt boxing and wrestling officially on the schedule

PROTEST YACHT MOORING RATES TO PARK BOARD

Yachtsmen who moor in the Jackson park basin have written in protest to the South park commissioners against the basis for charging for anchorage for this summer. One of the principal points made by the boatsmen is a request that their craft be charged for on a suggested scale of 30 cents a foot on overall lengths of boats, instead of a flat rate for all sloops, regardless of size.

Persistence in taxing as announced will have the effect of throttling the sport, according to a letter from Edward Buker, who wrote the commissioners as spokesman for the yachtsmen.

Crane Collegians Takes Meet from Lewis, 47 to 30

Crane Junior college scored a triumph over Lewis institute track and field athletes in a dual meet at Eckhardt park, 47 to 30. Capt. Fitch of the tech college accumulated nineteen points for individual honors. He won the 100 and 220 dashes and 50 yard low hurdles, also tied for first in the running high jump. Crane men were victors in six of the nine events. Lewis swept to victory in a fast half mile relay in 1:49.

THE FRANKLIN CAR

Never Handicapped by Heavy Weight and Rigidity
It is Establishing New Road Records Everywhere

WHAT gets motorists to their destinations most quickly is not track speed, but roadability. Special demonstrations by stock model Franklin Cars all over the country are calling attention to this fact, and the daily performances of Franklins in the hands of their owners are proving it.

Those who have never driven or ridden in a Franklin will perhaps find it hard to understand how Franklins can consistently out-tour cars of racing speed. One trip in any Franklin model will show them.

Comfortable and Safe at All Times

The Franklin does not have to slow down over rough stretches and around sharp turns the way other cars do. Light weight and flexible, it clings to the road, disregarding bad conditions and giving a degree of comfort and safety that is instantly noticeable.

And having no heavy rigid weight to pound out its tires, the Franklin is unusually free from tire annoyance. Recent investigation showed that Franklin owners average only one puncture in every 4,141 miles, with blowouts almost unknown. That's why they so seldom carry spares.

Reliability and General Economy

In fuel, and in general wear and tear, as well, the Franklin is exceptionally saving. Its owners' records show that the average is:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

With the added advantages of Franklin direct air cooling (no water to boil or freeze), it is not surprising that the sales of the Franklin are increasing faster than those of any other fine car.

ASSETS OF BIG 5 PACKERS PLACED AT 1 1-3 BILLIONS

60 Per Cent of It Profit, Trade Board Says.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 15.—[Special.]—Another section of the federal trade commission's report on the meat packers was made public today dealing with profits of the packers. The report declares that the big five Chicago meat packers—Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Morris & Co., Wilson & Co., Inc., and the Cudahy Packing company—showed in round numbers at the beginning of the fiscal year 1919 total combined assets of $1,300,000,000; total combined net wealth (capital stock and surplus) of $535,000,000; had sold during the fiscal year 1918 $3,200,000,000 of goods, and that the several companies have grown to these proportions principally from profits retained in the business, after deducting dividends paid to stockholders.

Made $100,000,000 During War.

"These profits retained in the business," the report says, "have been generally capitalized by the issuing of stock dividends, so that of the present capital stock understanding of the great companies only about 40 per cent represents direct cash contributions on the part of the stockholders."

Commenting upon the war profits of the packers, the report observes that over $100,000,000 was added to the surplus accounts of the several companies out of earnings made in the first three years of the war, 1915 to 1917. During these years profits both in dollars and in rate on investment doubled, trebled and quadrupled.

Net Return of 15 Per Cent.

In respect of the profits announced by the packers of 2 to 3 cents per dollar of sales, the report says that such a rate on sales in an industry like meat packing, which rapidly turns over its products, is the equivalent of a high rate of return on net wealth [15 per cent or more]. Rate on investment [not the rate on sales, nor the rate per head or per pound] furnishes the correct method whereby the reasonableness of the profits may be determined, it says.

The report observes also that the advertisements of the great packers, in respect of profits per head or per pound of beef, are not based on accepted methods of determining costs.

Help Honor the Soldier Dead.

Men and women whoss search for information on safe and profitable investments bring them to this column should be in a state of mind eager to learn from the investment experience of others.

Recently the United States invested the lives of some 75,000 of its finest men in the security of the nation. They died that the institutions of America might live and prosper, unhampered and unharassed by foreign powers. Their sacrifice alone makes the financial investment of today possible and productive. Without this sacrifice American investors would have nothing to invest and nothing in which to invest.

The day is rapidly approaching on which patriotic and thankful Americans will show their appreciation of this investment of lives by memorial decoration of the graves of our dead in France. Only by such proof of appreciation can we command the respect and assistance of the present fighting generation and those in whose mind our safety will lie in the future.

You may give proof both of honor and wisdom by aiding in this memorial. Many of you collected Liberty bond coupons yesterday. Call back the spirit of patriotism which led you to buy those bonds in the days of the war. Let that thrill hold sway for a moment, and send a part of this interest your part in the war—to hallow the graves of those who gave their all.

Contributions should be addressed to Memorial Fund Cashier, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

There Is Where

You Can Gain Life Independence

From a 10-Acre Almond Orchard

Never before in the entire history of California with its fabulous fortunes made in mining, oil and horticulture, has there been presented such a remarkable opportunity for a steady year to year income as is now offered you by joining us in the development of Almond Orchards in the Paso Robles district. Our Association has secured the cream of the almond lands in the heart of the almond country—soil requires neither irrigation nor fertilization. Come to the

FREE LECTURE
at Lyon & Healy Hall, 64 E. Jackson Blvd.
Monday Evening, May 17th, at 8 o'Clock

Spend a delightful hour with us tomorrow evening. Facts and figures will be presented to you that prove that never before have California's opportunities for making big profits been so great at they are today. You have read of the fortunes made in California oranges, lemons, prunes, walnuts, etc. Now learn about the profits in almonds.

SEE the wonders of California as they are thrown upon the screen by beautifully colored lantern slides—the vast silent forests—the deep somber canyons—the glistening mountain peaks—the feathery waterfalls—the beach scenes—the beautiful, clean cities, old missions and miles of motor roads. See how almond orchards are planted and brought into bearing under the supervision of our Field Manager, Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, California's leading almond authority.

LEARN about the wonderful profits that are being made from almond growing in the Paso Robles District. According to the most conservative estimates of almond experts, $2,500 to $3,000 a year is the least that you can expect from a ten-acre almond orchard when planted and brought into bearing under the supervision of Mr. Nehrhood.

YOU WILL BE CONVINCED that this is the biggest dividend paying investment in which you can place your idle funds. Only a moderate payment down—small monthly payments—only half the purchase price paid in cash, the balance taken from the crops of your orchard—these are only a few of the unusual features of this remarkable investment opportunity. If it is impossible for you to attend the lecture, send for a free copy of our beautifully illustrated book, "A Life Income Plus California," or call at your convenience for further information at our office in the Lytton Building.

But do not fail to come to the lecture if you possibly can. You are cordially welcome—you and your friends. Come early and make sure of getting a good seat tomorrow evening—Lyon & Healy Hall, 64 E. Jackson Blvd., at 8 o'clock.

DELIVERY CORN HITS NEW TOP, BREAKS, RALLIES

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

While all deliveries of corn sold at new high figures on the crop early, the best prices were not maintained, due to profit taking. On the declines there was good support from commission houses and the close was ¼@½c higher. Oats finished unchanged to ⅛c up, rye ½@1c higher, and barley unchanged.

As compared with a week ago, corn was 3⅜@7c higher, July leading; oats, ⅜@1⅛c higher on the near and ⅛c lower on September; rye, 1@6⅝c higher, and barley unchanged.

Larger receipts, arrivals being 65 cars, led to local pressure at the opening, but commission house buying absorbed the offerings and short covering carried up prices into new ground. On the bulge profit taking by a local professional started values downward, and with cash corn 1@2c lower and reports that the rail strike might be settled within the next few days, July dropped 2¼c, getting support at $1.78 and at $1.77½ on the way down on resting orders.

Pit Temper Is Bullish.

The general temper of the pit element was bullish and in many cases traders said they wished to see cars delivered to western roads before they would believe claims that 20,000 box cars were to come from eastern lines. Omaha shipped 64 cars of cash corn to Chicago in addition to 70 cars earlier in the week. The east canceled 20,000 bu.

Oats fluctuated rapidly within comparatively narrow limits. Commission houses were on both sides of the market, with some disposition to buy July and sell September, the difference widening slightly. Premiums in the sample market were unchanged to a shade easier, the latter on No. 3 white, which brought 8@9½c over May. No. 2 white in store sold at 7½c over May.

Strength in corn started shorts in rye to covering and made a higher range. Export bids at the seaboard were reported far out of line. Deliveries on May contracts here were 10,000 bu, and at Minneapolis 332,000 bu. No. 2 track sold at May price for full cars and 1c under for bulkheads.

Barley unchanged with a fair demand; deliveries 75,000 bu.

Provisions Lower.

Lower prices for hogs, with selling openly by the Armour interests and only scattered buying, and predictions of a good run of hogs, had a depressing influence on product and losses were 12@25½c on lard, 12½@20c on ribs, and 30c on pork. Commission house liquidation was of moderate volume. Cash trade was fair on domestic account and light on the part of foreigners.

Shipmets of lard and meats of 13,543,000 lbs increased nearly 2,000,000 lbs for the week and decreased 16,000,000 lbs from last year. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 1,084,000 hogs, or 430,000 less than last year. Prices follow:

POTATO ACREAGE REDUCED

Potato acreage has been reduced 5 per cent, and beans 29 per cent from last year's, as given by the department of agriculture. Potato acreage in New York is 3 per cent under last year's; Michigan, 10; Wisconsin, 5; Minnesota, 11; Colorado, 6; Idaho, 5, while California increased 10 per cent. Aroostook county, Me., which produces 60 per cent of the potato crop of New England, will plant the same acreage as last year. An unsatisfactory market for beans has caused the reduced acreage.

HAY SUPPLIES LIGHT

Receipts on Saturday were 16 cars of timothy and 2 cars of prairie on the unloading tracks. Demand was active. Supplies are about the lightest here at this time in the history of the trade. Country loadings are about normal, and three days' supply of timothy is in transit. No. 1 timothy sold at $50.00; standards, $49.00; No. 2 timothy, $46.00 to $48.00; No. 3 at $44.00 to $46.00; No. 1 Nebraska prairie, $35 00; No. 2 at $34.00; No. 2 Kansas prairie brought $34.00, with No. 3 at $30.00 to $32.00. Illinois, $30.00 to $33.00, and oat straw, $21.00 per ton.

COTTON MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 15.—Cotton prices advanced and closed well toward the highest, with gains of 14 to 40 points. There was evening up preparatory to the government report. Shorts were the principal buyers, although trade reports were rather bearish, indicating a decreased consumption in some sections as a result of the mills having a lessened demand for their goods. ·WORLDS·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

As a result of numerous conferences between the railroad officials and W. C. Kendall, chief of the car service commission, eastern railroads are to give the western and northwestern lines 20,000 box cars for moving grain. Delivery is to be made at the rate of six solid trains a day. This will mean 325 to 400 cars a day, and it will take nearly three months to complete the order. Every little helps, however, and there is a somewhat easier car situation in Illinois and Iowa, and an increase in the movement of grain, particularly corn, is expected, although the volume is not regarded as likely to be heavy for any length of time.

It is said country holders of corn are more disposed to sell at around present prices. Farmers are getting $1.90 to $2.00 for corn at interior loading stations and the extent of the movement is largely a question of cars.

At the conference of the committee of sixteen representing eight exchanges that will consider plans Monday for opening the wheat market the representatives will be: Chicago, L. F. Gates, E. D. McDougal; Kansas City, George H. Davis, George S. Carkener; St. Louis, Marshall Hall, E. C. Andrew; Duluth, B. Stockman, Stanley Ferguson; Minneapolis, J. H. MacMillan, H. S. Helm; Milwaukee, H. M. Stratton, Hugo Stolley; Omaha, J. W. Holmquist, O. M. Smith; Toledo, K. D. Keilholtz, David Anderson.

An Omaha house has sold and shipped 125,000 bu of corn to Chicago within the past week, cleaning out its elevators, Chicago being the best market. It was a good buyer of May corn yesterday. A few of the cash houses were moderate sellers of May. There was unloading of corn and oats by a local professional yesterday who is sojourning at French Lick, which resulted in free selling by the pit element and a break after corn had made a new high mark. The latter was taken advantage of by several commission houses which absorbed the offerings and made the close higher than Friday.

Grain receipts at Chicago for the week were 2,168,000 bu, or 543,000 bu more than the previous week, 805,000 bu less than last year and 1,888,000 bu below the average.

Samuel M. Raymond of Raymond's News Bureau, warns the members of the grain trade that he has not authorized the use of his name in the solicitation of business for any kind of publicity. A number of commission houses have been wrongly told of late, he says, that he was largely interested in a special publication.

A Board of Trade membership sold Friday at $10.750 net to the buyer. The recent report of sales at $10,400 should have been $10,500.

A Baltimore exporter here yesterday said all the rye will be taken care of and the May shorts are in bad.

R. I. Mansfield, who returned yesterday from a trip through central Illinois, said all indications point to the largest corn acreage on record in that territory. Tractors are being used and plowing progressed day and night, the latter work being done by the aid of searchlights. He looks for a bumper crop with normal weather. Bulk of the acreage intended for oats and not seeded on account of wet weather is going into corn. Wheat and oats look fine.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Nine Million Pounds of Sugar

So marked has been the increase in the demand for sweets that concerns manufacturing candies, jellies, jams, etc., with a high sugar content, are enjoying extraordinary prosperity. Securities based on these enterprises which are most benefited by changed economic conditions possess elements of strength which make them appeal to the more conservative and far-sighted investor.

We are able to offer an 8% Cumulative Preferred stock adequately safeguarded by a sinking fund in one of the largest and best known concerns of this character in the United States, a concern which last year used nine million pounds of sugar in the manufacture of its product. The offer is exceptionally attractive insomuch as it carries the right to buy a substantial amount of the Common Stock with each share of the 8% Cumulative Preferred.

Open Gateways to Foreign Trade

The five South Atlantic ports—Brunswick, Ga.; Charleston, S. C.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Savannah, Ga.; and Wilmington, N. C.—are at all times open gateways to foreign trade.

These ports are practically free from congestion, having a minimum of labor troubles and favorable weather conditions the year round. There are frequent direct sailings from them to all important foreign countries.

Natural and Near Outlets to South America & West Indies

South Atlantic ports are especially fortunate in the matter of ships to South America and the West Indies, to which they are the natural and near outlets.

There is excellent railroad service to these ports from all parts of the central west, the connecting lines affording prompt movement of shipments at rates comparing favorably with those to northern ports.

NEW YORK BANKS' EXCESS RESERVE UP $23,354,690

The weekly statement of the New York associated banks, issued yesterday, exhibited a reversal from that of the preceding week and made a favorable showing. Excess reserve increased $23,354,690, almost recovering the loss of the previous week and now standing at $28,759,330.

A large increase in deposits, a nominal increase in loans, and a considerable increase in reserve credits at the federal reserve bank were the outstanding features. Net demand deposits increased $86,302,000, although the government decreased its deposits by $49,425,000, chiefly in preparation for paying interest due on Liberty loan bonds. Time deposits declined slightly. Loans increased $20,224,000. Reserves of member banks in the reserve bank increased $38,883,000. Aggregate reserves increased $32,998,000.

Chicago Showing Indifferent.

The weekly statement of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank made a rather indifferent showing. The reserve position was slightly less favorable, but the bank reduced its borrowings from other federal reserve institutions by $10,626,000, this item, represented by loans on paper indorsed and turned over to sister banks, now standing at $19,291,000.

Borrowings of member banks again moved up, this being due largely to the demand for credit occasioned by the transportation situation. The increase was represented entirely by loans secured by government obligations, these increasing $11,945,016; whereas loans otherwise secured declined $4,038,344. The increase in total loans was $7,906,671.

Total gross deposits increased $24,332,372, including a gain of $751,146 in government deposits. The reserve account of member banks increased $12,073,868. Total gold reserves decreased $2,989,090. A favorable factor was a decline of $4,043,339 in note circulation.

The ratio of reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined fell to 40.14 from 40.75 per cent the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, fell to 42.53 from 43.3 per cent in the preceding week.

A break of 10@50c in hog values carried the average to $14.00, the lowest since December, 1919. Receipts at 16,000 were double the number expected, and, with as many more carried over from Friday, packers took advantage of the situation and experienced little difficulty in forcing values down. The best sold at $14.80. Shippers and speculators purchased indifferently.

Receipts of hogs the last two weeks were the largest since last January, which added considerable weakness in the trade. Shipping last week absorbed a third fewer hogs than during the previous week, partly owing to relatively lower prices at outside points.

Together with large receipts the weight of hogs seems to hold up, the estimated average last week at 241 lbs being the same as the previous week and 8 lbs heavier than a year ago.

During the last week both cattle and sheep values declined, the former owing to large receipts, while sheep, in the face of the smallest arrivals of the year, declined. The average price of good beef steers last week declined 35c and lambs averaged 55c lower.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 10,000 sheep, against 20,877 cattle, 38,501 hogs, and 16,635 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 60,000 cattle, 165,000 hogs, and 50,000 sheep, against 61,792 cattle, 192,276 hogs, and 61,986 sheep a year ago.

Many in the trade are expecting a large run of hogs next Monday. E. R. Gentry marked 47,000, F. R. Burrows and F. W. Waddell 45,000, W. H. Overman 43,000, H. H. Moore 42,000, Felix Gehrmann 40,000, and M. Minteer 35,000.

The New York Times.

New York, May 15.—[Special.]—The result of today's two hours of exceedingly dull business in stocks was a firm price front, reflective of short covering. In the case of motor and oil shares, bidders had to go rather high for them in late dealings, but the gains in all directions were not sufficiently substantial to denote any change of speculative conditions.

Week Belongs to Bears.

The week developed nothing in the way of amelioration for industry, which has been brought into a decidedly uncomfortable position by poor railroad service, and as there was little constructive news from any quarter bears on stocks were left firmly lodged.

The railroads are the pivot of both the present business and speculative situation. The street sees that, so long as it is not possible to move goods freely to market, there is slight hope of reducing bank loans in commercial lines.

Credit Status Unchanged.

The bank statements held forth slight hope of credit easement in the near future, especially as the belief is general that the east will be called upon to assist the agricultural centers for some weeks to come. There is something like $165,000,000 of interest money just paid out by the government to return to the banks, but as this will be distributed throughout the country the effect will be small at any one center.

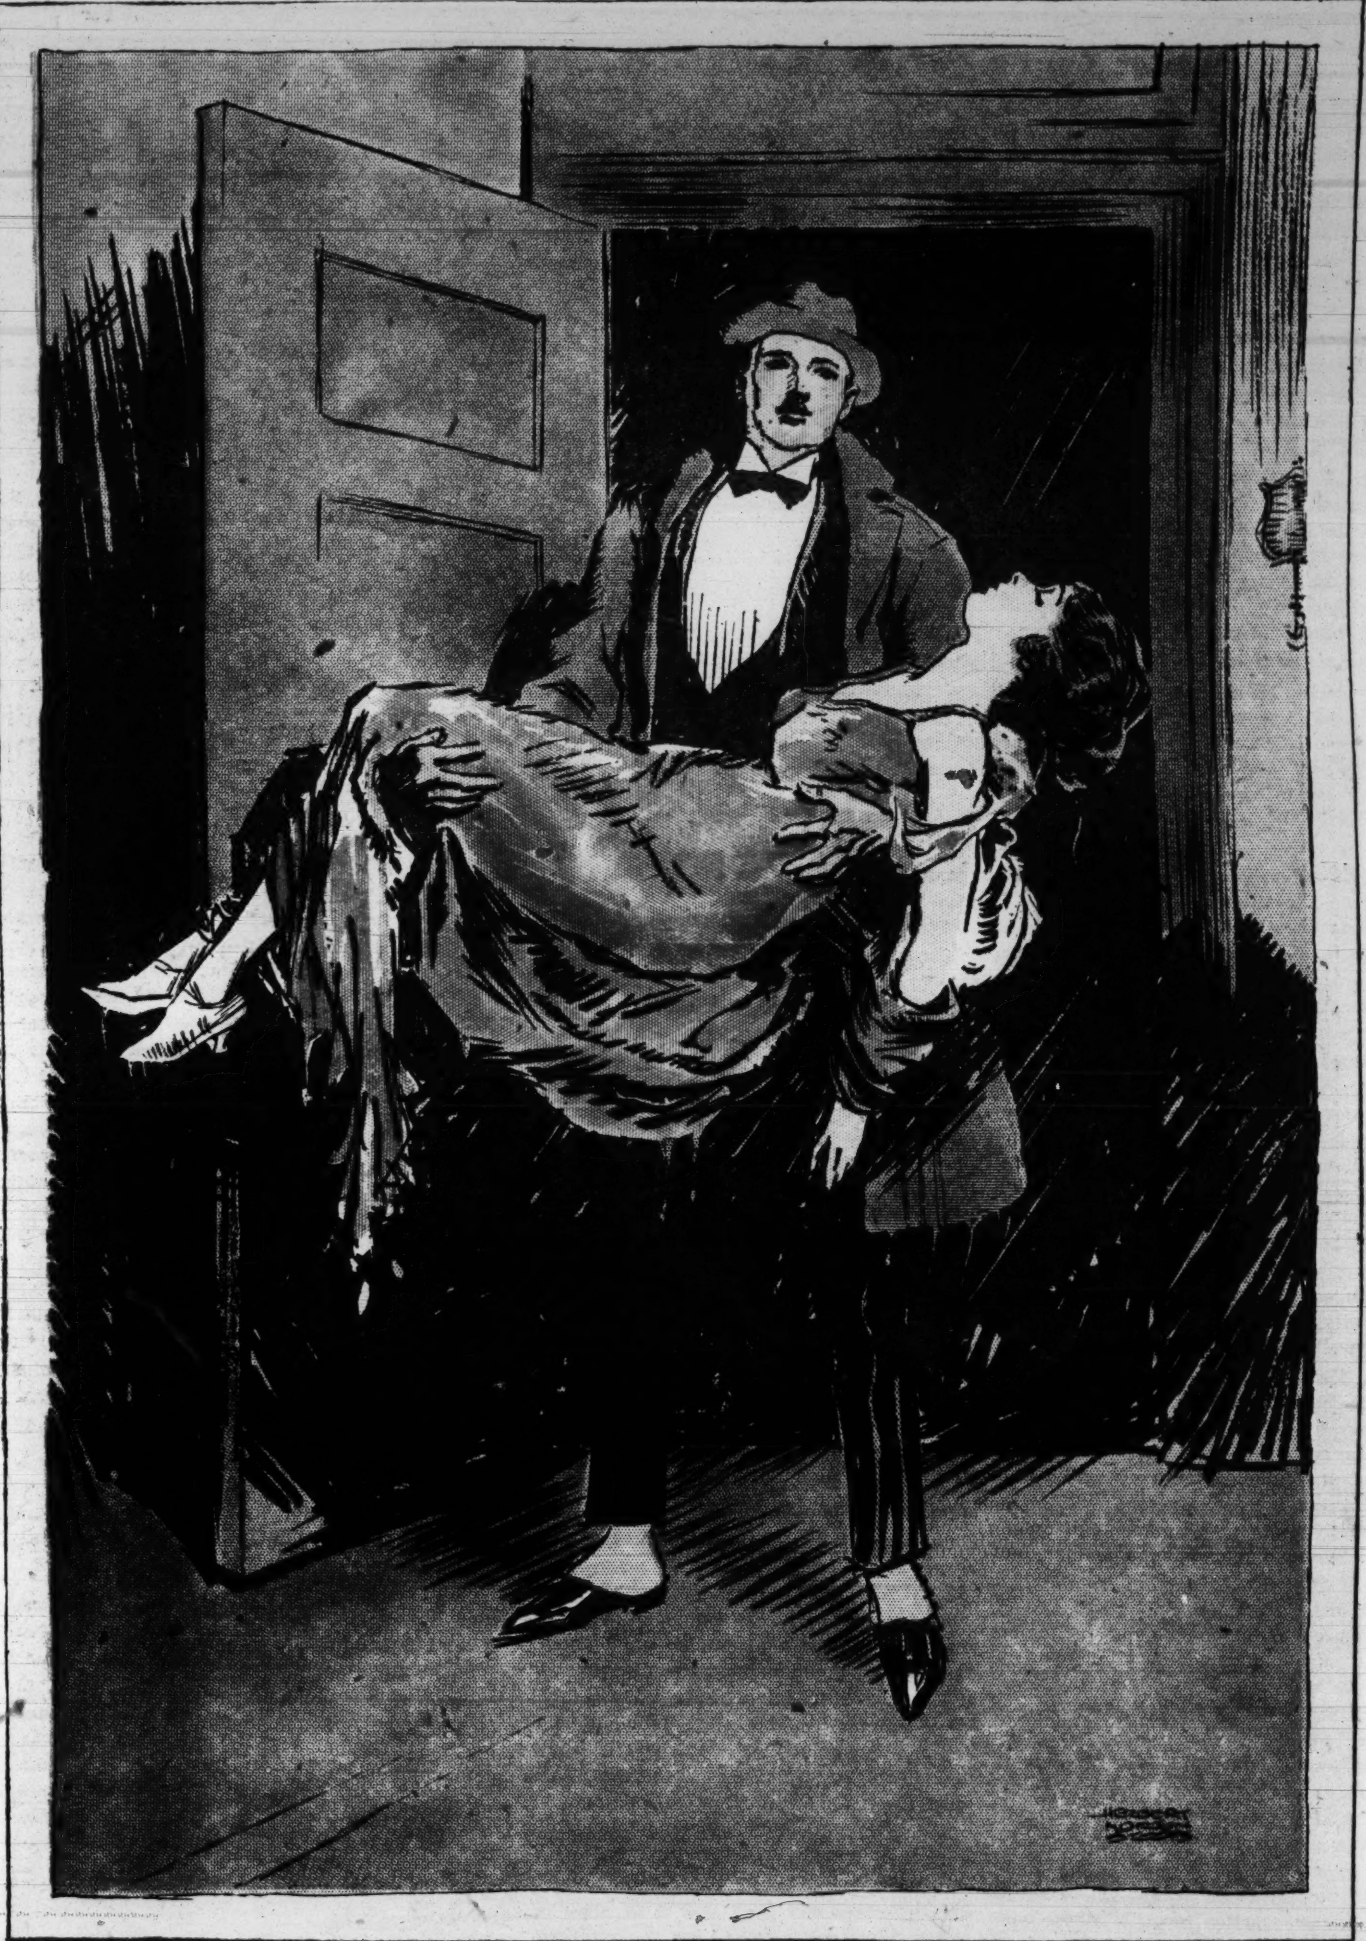
Van Valkenburgh's Full Hour by ELIZABETH JORDAN

Of One Who Lost His Faith in Romance, and the Amazing Thing Tha Came Out of the Night



He was still in an abyss of self-contempt when he reached Mack's and carried her through the entrance hall.

"I BEG your pardon."

It was the pitch and modulations of the speaker's voice that checked Van Valkenburgh in his stride. For the voice was strikingly musical and its accents were unmistakably those of a well bred, cultivated woman of his own social class. In mechanical but immediate response to this realization, Van Valkenburgh raised his hat and stood bareheaded in the winter storm, vainly striving to see through the rain and darkness something more than the dim outline of the person who had addressed him.

As if to meet his need, a sudden flash of lightning lit up the white oval of a woman's face and the soaked folds of a mackintosh, billowing in the high wind. He had only a glimpse of a pair of wide, wonderful, anxious dark eyes, of waved black hair on a head uncovered, like his own, to the storm, but the glimpse was enough. Yes, the person who had stopped him was a lady, young, almost a girl, obviously bewildered, perhaps just emerged from some nearby house, and seeking a taxicab or some direction as to streets or car lines.

He heard himself utter a noncommittal, "Yes?" and found himself looking very hard at the now dim white oval of the face.

"I beg your pardon," the voice repeated, "but can you tell me where I can—can find ——" It hesitated for an instant, then rushed on, almost hysterically—"some place where I can go—where they would take me in?"

For an instant Van Valkenburgh frankly stared. In the next he had justified his club reputation as a chap not easily surprised. Ten feet from him and his companion the wide, hooded doorway of a building facing the street offered momentary shelter from the wind and rain. With a gesture he ushered the speaker into it and followed her.

"That question needs a bit of thinking over," he said pleasantly. "I believe there are several so-called 'homes' in New York, but they're not in this part of the city—and I'm afraid they close at midnight. It's almost an hour past that, you know."

He was talking as casually as if he were meeting her at a tea, but with a definite object. He desired to study this girl a bit and to classify her more definitely. The instinct which had made him bare his head at the mere accents of her voice was still strong in him, but the caution life had taught him was no less strong. For all he knew, Van Valkenburgh told himself, this might be "some new dodge." Then, looking down into the misery of the dark eyes raised to his, he reproached himself for the thought.

"I might stay here till morning." The voice from the darkness was speaking almost eagerly, as if under a sudden inspiration. "It is quite sheltered. And when daylight comes perhaps I can find my way——"

Van Valkenburgh was momentarily startled out of his poise.

"Good heavens, no!" he exclaimed. "We can find something better than this." Some influence, subtle, but strong, emanating from the girl beside him, made him add, very gently, "Don't imagine I'm not going to help you. I'm merely trying to think of the best way. And even an old New Yorker," he added, more lightly, "doesn't always know just where to turn in an emergency."

His voice caught on the last word. He had already observed that his companion was hatless. Now, as another flash of lightning silhouetted her figure against the background of the storm, a fold of the mackintosh swung back and he made the incredible discovery that she was in full evening dress. He had only an instantaneous visualization of this before she had clutched the garment and drawn it close.

A shabby girl homeless on the streets at night might, of course, be—anything. A beautiful woman, with a voice that made one's heart turn over, and the manner of an empress, might be—many things. A creature of this storm, with that voice, that face, that gown, and that mackintosh, could only be one thing—a mystery.

Van Valkenburgh disliked mysteries. They did not fit in with the ordered routine of his present life. Ten years ago, perhaps even five, when he was still in his eager 20s, the blood in his veins would have quickened at the nearness of a possible romance or adventure. Tonight it did nothing of the sort. Indeed, only half an hour ago he had declared to a skeptical circle of chums at his club that there was no longer such a thing as real romance in life. There was drama in plenty, he conceded—drama of a grim, horrible, or inspiring nature, as the case might be. But it had frightened romance out of the world. Men and women were adjusting their nerves to the reconstructive struggle of the future—a struggle that must largely or wholly eliminate the romance and chivalry of the past.

His friends had not agreed with him, but that fact had not disturbed him. Now he was hurrying from the club to his bachelor home, only a block away, and this episode of the storm was merely an interruption of his progress, to be ended as efficiently but as briskly as possible. The finality of this decision was in his voice when he spoke again.

"The homes I mentioned," he ended, "are a mile or two away, and, frankly, I'm afraid they wouldn't take you in at this hour."

"Probably not." She seemed to shrink a little away from him, as if rebuffed by his tone. "But it does not matter," she added. "I have decided to stay here till morning. Pardon me for detaining you. Good night."

His formality departed as suddenly as it had come upon him.

"O, I say," he cried, boyishly, "You can't ship me off like this. You tacitly asked me to help you, and now I'm going to do it. I admit I've been rather slow about it, but—the circumstances are a bit unusual."

"Yes." She made the admission very simply. Then, though he waited, she said no more. He hastened to fill the awkward pause.

"There is a good hotel within a block of us," he said—"the Morley. It is as respectable and as quiet as its English namesake. I know the manager. I will take you there, and he will put you up for a few days until you—until you have made your plans," he finished rather lamely.

"But—I have no money!"

"No?" Van Valkenburgh's manner waived this unimportant detail. "Then he will trust you until you have."

"O, I can't let him do that. And—and I haven't any—any—plans."

Van Valkenburgh frowned down at her consideringly. He began to feel as if he were in a dream—a very puzzling and confusing dream. Surely this incredible conversation could not be occurring, under these incredible conditions.

"You are very good to try to help me," she said formally, "but I see now that there is nothing you can do. Good night."

Under the sleet that was biting at his face he felt that face burn. He must seem like a helpless, tactless, inefficient chump to this "nice girl." In this instant he definitely and finally classified her as a "nice girl," and none of the after events of the night, unexpected as they were, shook this conviction. As she spoke he had been looking, not at her, but at the ground, mentally trying to orient himself. Now he saw something that startled him into a quick exclamation.

"Look here," he cried, incredulously, "are you wearing slippers?"

"Why——" for a moment she was as startled as he was. She looked down at her feet with the air of one making a discovery. "Why—yes," she said, slowly.

"And your feet must be soaked and you must be half frozen in that thin coat. Great Scott, what a blockhead I am!"

He seized her elbow, urged her out of the shelter of the doorway, and, disregarding her protests and the backward drag of her body on his arm, hurried her along the street.

"I've thought of just the place," he eagerly explained. "I knew it would come if I gave my mind lots of time. We'll go to Mack's All-Night Chop house. It's only two blocks away, and Mrs. Mack is a comfortable, motherly sort of person who will lend you clothes and things and see that you don't catch cold after this exposure."

Under his grasp he felt the arm of the girl suddenly relax.

"If she will lend me a cup of coffee," she said, faintly, "and a sandwich——"

His arms were quick, but not quite quick enough. The next instant she had collapsed, and with panic in his soul he was lifting from the soaked pavement the huddled, unconscious heap that but a moment before had been at his side. He was a strong man with an athletic record, but for a moment he felt actually dizzy as he hurried on, carrying his burden. Normally he might have been self-conscious, fearful of observation even at that time and in that storm, and of misconception of his position. But neither he nor the situation was normal at the moment. He was stunned by a sudden glimpse of the truth. This girl—a girl in his own class, a "nice girl," was freezing and starving. In her extremity she had appealed to him; and he had let her starve while he tried to analyze her and her position.

He was still in an abyss of self-contempt when he reached Mack's and carried her through the entrance hall and into a small, now deserted reception room, in whose wide fireplace a few late embers winked sadly at him. Through its open door he saw with relief that only a few of the tables in the main dining room were occupied. The storm and the lateness of the hour had combined to empty the place. He settled his still unconscious charge into a huge leather chair before the fire and hastened into the office. There the son and partner of the proprietor, alone at the night desk, greeted him with an affable nod. Tom Mack was a big, round headed, red faced, silent young man who said little and thought more than his associates suspected.

"Hello, Tom," said Van Valkenburgh quickly. "Where's your mother?"

"In bed," young Mack explained with some natural surprise.

"Get her out, will you? Quick."

"What's the idea?"

"There's a lady here who needs her."

Tom shook his head. He was used to eccentricities on the part of his patrons, but this demand for his mother at 1 o'clock in the morning was a new one.

"Not on your life," he murmured, good humoredly.

"It's important." Van Valkenburgh was speaking more excitedly than he realized. "Ive brought a lady here who's had an accident."

"O!" Tom pursed his lips. Simultaneously he slowly and reluctantly drew himself out of his comfortable swivel chair. "That's different. Where is she?"

"In there." Van Valkenburgh indicated the reception room. "Get your mother down and bring in some soup and sherry and things."

"Thought you said she was hurt." Young Mack looked as if he had been imposed upon.

"I'm afraid she is. She's had a fall. Incidentally, she's starving."

"Humph! Well, we can handle that all right, anyhow." Tom was following him into the stiff little waiting room. He stopped to give an order to a sleepy waiter. "But we'll have to get along without mother," he added, as he joined his guest a moment later. "She's got the 'flu.' She's been in bed for two days."

"Well, get some woman—any woman. And a doctor."

Van Valkenburgh was staring down at the still unconscious figure in the big chair. "And, for God's sake, hurry," he added urgently.

"All the women have gone home. But we don't need no women. She'll be all right in a few minutes."

Young Mack was holding the girl's wrist. Now, with an accustomed air, he lifted her eyelids, peered into her eyes, and nodded.

"We'll get her warm and feed her. That's all she needs. Take off those slippers while I make a good fire."

Even as he spoke he was piling kindling and pine logs on the dying embers of the fire, which promptly blazed up, bringing into sudden relief the three figures in the dim room.

"Friend of yourn?"

Young Mack asked the question casually, his eyes on the logs he was expertly arranging. Van Valkenburgh hesitated, then briefly explained the circumstances. He had not intended to do so, but Mack was the kind of man to whom one told the truth. The big fellow stood up and again regarded the limp figure in the chair, dusting the ashes from his hands as he did so.

"She's mighty easy to look at," he commented.

The other nodded. She was "easy to look at." Indeed, he now told himself, she had the most arrestingly lovely face he had ever seen. Moreover, it was vaguely familiar; yet he could not remember where, if ever, he had seen it. He recalled himself to the need of the moment. The patient's continued unconsciousness was seriously alarming him.

"Get the soup! Get the sherry! Get a doctor!" he repeated. The tension of his nerves revealed itself in the tones of his voice.

"Now, now, Mr. Van Valkenburgh, be easy," Tom soothed. "The lady'll be all right in a few minutes; but I'll hurry up the eats."

He disappeared. Left alone, Van Valkenburgh drew the big chair closer to the blaze. He had already removed the wet mackintosh and the soaked slippers. Now, very gently, he chafed between his warm hands the icy feet in their thin silk stockings, and as he did so his heart melted in pity while his amazement grew.

Everything about the girl breathed an atmosphere of wealth and luxury. Her gown was a wonderful thing, shimmering, iridescent. Around her neck was a necklace of pearls, small but perfect. On the third finger of the small, bare helpless white hand was an emerald and diamond ring that, sold, would have supported the owner for a year. Yet the girl who wore these things had no money and she was starving. The renewed realization of that grim fact cut sharply across his consciousness. When would that chump Tom bring the hot soup?

He brought it at once. Indeed he was offering it now, and Van Valkenburgh resolutely resumed command of the situation.

"Here, give me the sherry," he directed. As he spoke the eyes of the girl opened and rested on him. He caught his breath. They were wonderful eyes—deep brown pools with the sunlight in them. Taking the glass, he held it to her lips. She swallowed a few drops, then shook her head.

"Now the soup," he translated, and, sitting on the arm of the big chair, he fed her spoonful after spoonful as if she were a child.

Under the combined influence of the heat and warmth the color began to come back into her face. She tried to speak, but he shook his head at her.

"Don't talk," he said. "You're all right. I brought you to Mack's, the place I spoke of. Mrs. Mack is in bed with the influenza, but her son here will see that you are made comfortable for the night, and in the morning we'll get a nurse to look after you. I'm afraid you've caught cold."

The brown eyes looking into his filled suddenly and dropped, but the girl did not speak. He found an inexplicable comfort in the change in her expression. She had lost her look of panic. Spoonful by spoonful, much as an obedient baby might have done it, she drank all the soup.

"She oughtn't to eat much more tonight," young Mack suggested. "I've ordered some cream toast and a chop. She can have them. By mornin' she'll be all right an' ready for a real breakfast."

Both his hearers accepted his medical understanding of the situation. The girl spoke for the first time.

"Thank you," she said. "You are very kind."

Van Valkenburgh nodded. The toast and chop were brought in by a waiter, whose manner intimated that he was used to all sorts of goings on, and that it would take more than the scene before him to hold his interest. Van Valkenburgh cut the chop into small bits and she swallowed them as she had swallowed the soup, her eyes, with their now look of trust—yes, that was it, trust—returning often to his face.

Under the combined influence of his ministrations, her helplessness, and her trust in him, an odd change took place in Van Valkenburgh. Up till now his principal emotions had been surprise and compassion. He had expected to see that the girl was made comfortable, and then, till morning at least, to drop her from his mind. But now an added instinct stirred in him, an instinct of protection, new born and poignant. It was that look in her eyes which had given it birth. He understood the look perfectly. It was precisely the look of a lost and frightened child of 2 or 3 might turn on its rescuer.

Well, for some reason she was a lost and frightened child. Perhaps she had fled from some danger—real or fancied. All sorts of surmises crossed his mind, each leading, however, to the highway of one broad conclusion. He would not leave Mack's that night. When she was taken up to her room he would doze till morning in the big chair that now held her. Thus he would be near; he would know she was all right.

It was at this point in his reflections that he suddenly became conscious of a new presence in the room. All three members of the little group had their backs to the door, and all three started sharply when a loud voice from the threshold addressed them.

"Well, gents," it said, "I guess you'll have to explain what this means."

The speaker was a big, square faced, keen eyed man with a cigar held at a sharp angle in a corner of his mouth and his hands in his pockets. He gazed at them not truculently, but with a look of almost tolerant understanding, as one who held the winning cards in the game. Van Valkenburgh's eyes flashed from the newcomer to the girl's. Her expression showed neither fear nor recognition of the stranger, but merely an extreme surprise. There was also, he observed, a certain hauteur in it—the astonished hauteur of one not accustomed to abrupt intrusions.

"Do you know this man?" he asked, quietly.

Her answer was as quiet. "I never saw him before."

The man in the doorway laughed, not sardonically, but with his odd air of tolerant understanding.

"That's all right," he said, "but you're seeing me now, miss, so get ready, please, and we'll get out of here."

Van Valkenburgh, still watching the girl, saw her shrink back in her chair.

"No," she cried. "No, no!" He laid his hand on hers.

"Don't be frightened," he said. "You're not going to leave if you don't want to; be sure of that."

The tolerant air of the man in the door gave place to a look of determination. He shouldered his way into the room with a sudden assumption of cool but absolute authority and placed himself between Van Valkenburgh and the girl.

"Now, see here, my young friend," he said. "I been tryin' to let you down nice an' easy. See? Because I ain't sure but what you're on the level. See? But I'm goin' to take this lady away from here—an' if I have any trouble doin' it, things is goin' to be mighty unpleasant for you. See?"

He uttered the final words with his face close to Van Valkenburgh's, evidently expecting that gentleman to give ground before him. But the latter did nothing of the sort. Instead, he raised his hand and quietly but firmly pushed the face out of his line of vision. It purpled with anger as its owner lunged toward him.

"Whoever you are," said Van Valkenburgh, "don't act like an ass. Don't start any trouble in the presence of this lady."

The man stopped abruptly in his advance.

"That's right," he muttured. "I'll tend to you later." He added the last words with meaning and turned to the girl, who was still cowering against the back of her chair, as if to get as far away from him as she could.

"Come along, miss," he said, not unkindly.

She threw out both hands as if to ward him off. "No," she cried again. "No, no. I don't know you. I never saw you before." She appealed to Van Valkenburgh, who was watching her closely. "I'm afraid of him!" she cried. "Don't let him take me away."

Van Valkenburgh smiled at her. It was the first time he had done so, and she seemed to find the smile wonderfully reassuring. Her eyes, still clinging to his face, suddenly brightened, took on their look of brown pools in the sun. The ghost of a smile twitched the corners of her lips.

"He shall not take you away," Van Valkenburgh comfortably repeated, "but he may tell us, if he likes, why he wants to and where he expects to go."

She caught his hand.

"You won't leave me?"

"I won't leave you until you are quite safe."

Van Valkenburgh's manner had not changed, but a change was going on deep within him. He had been impressed by the stranger's voice and manner when he addressed the girl. He thought he now understood the situation, and the explanation that had come to him chilled his soul and numbed his heart. It all seemed clear. The poor girl's mind was clouded. She had escaped from some institution, or, more probably, judging by her apparel, from some private sanitarium. That would account for everything, even for the fellow waiting by her side to take her back to the establishment in which he was an attendant. Doubtless he owed the man an apology. With a gesture he motioned him from the room and followed him into the hall.

"Look here," he said, rather awkwardly, when they were out of earshot. "I think I'm beginning to understand."

The other nodded.

"I'm glad of that."

"I suppose," Van Valkenburgh reflected aloud, "we'll have to take her back."

"I will that," the other agreed.

"I said 'we,'" Van Valkenburgh corrected firmly. "Please understand once and for all that I will not let the lady out of my sight for one minute until she is—safe."

He felt like a traitor as he spoke. Free for a few hours, she had appealed to him. She had come to regard him as her one friend, and now he was to return her to—what? His mind and emotions were in a whirl of confusion and sympathy, shot through with personal pangs whose intensity amazed him.

"Do you suppose we'll have a bad time getting her back?" he asked wretchedly.

His companion gave the question a moment's thought.

"I dunno how she'll act," he said at last. "You see, I've never set eyes on her before."

Van Valkenburgh drew back and stared at him.

"You've never seen her?" he repeated, slowly. "What the devil do you mean?"

"What I say," the other patiently reiterated. "I've never set eyes on her—but I'm pretty sure she's the one I'm after," he added firmly. "There can't hardly be two of them."

For a second the earth slipped from under Van Valkenburgh's feet. Then he had been wrong in his theory—all wrong. O, thank God for that! His enlightenment deepened the general mystery, but left him inexplicably, dizzily happy. Through his rapture of relief he realized that his companion was still speaking, and now he caught the final words.

"So, of course, I can't be dead sure this is

The PASSING of JOHN BALES by Oney Fred Sweet

An Admiring Friend Remembers a Vow and Manages to Have It Kept

THE writing desk in the office of the Pioneer hotel in Prairie Junction is a fancy affair. The ink wells have a habit of running dry and the pens are not kept in the best of condition, but rising above the back of the desk against the wall is a mirrorlike bit of architecture full of panels that contain the advertisements of firms that were in existence when the proud inn was opened some forty years ago. The lettering of these business cards was wrought by a transient artist, evidently impartial toward any one of the rainbow's colors.

And though time has brought many changes among the firms up and down Main street, the names that represented the community's commercialism in a past decade still decorate the writing desk panels. Should a stranger wish actually to make use of the directory, he would no doubt first be attracted by the panel devoted to "J. Bales, Livery Barn." The transient artist went beyond mere lettering in this panel. Perhaps John Bales made worth while his extra effort, perhaps the wielder of the brush had a penchant for subjects equestrian. At any rate, in this panel there appears—for forty years has appeared—a vehicle drawn by two horses, their lifted hoofs all these years remaining smartly in mid-air.

There is a silk hatted driver on the seat of this pictured equipage. And languishing back in the carriage is a woman holding aloft a dainty little parasol with lace about its edges. Just escaping the steeds is a lad rolling a hoop.

John Bales must have passed on this piece of propaganda, though, knowing the man, one would have said that he was not the sort to tolerate a silk hat on his premises. His establishment was on a side street—the street leading up from the depot toward the courthouse square. On one side of his place was an implement shop, its sidewalk littered with plows and hay rakes; on the other, a harness shop. The vicinity, in fact, was a Mecca for men who farmed many acres of rolling prairie—red faced men with chapped lips and eyes washed out by the weather.

John Bales' office was just at the left of his barn's great entrance—merely a shut off place with a small stove that roared red hot to meet the demands made upon it because of the room's lack of lath or plaster. The office walls were covered with yellow tin signs expounding the merits of certain liniments and spavin cures, sale bills, the lithograph of a once famous minstrel troupe that had toured the section, nails from which were suspended bits of harness. And about the stove there was ever a group—men who had retired from their farms, men who had never quite come across their niche in life and found time on their hands, horse buyers, horse traders, race track followers. Conversation sometimes shifted but it always came back to the one topic—horse.

John Bales had been a power on this side street. Big of frame, gruff of voice, wide hatted, heavily mustached, he had joked at the expense of others with never any one daring to combat his banter. He had been known from one end of the county to the other. Bashful youths, hiring a buggy for a Sunday afternoon drive, quailed under his sarcasm.

You knew one of Bales' livery barn horses wherever you saw it on street or obscure country road. There was shimmer to his buggies, a certain dash to the whip that stuck straight in the socket. Scores of courtships commenced and culminated through these buggy rides taken at so much per hour. And in winter the barn let out cutters that slid over the snow to the accompaniment of jingling bells.

"Haven't a rig left; they're all out," John used to say, pompously. Or, witheringly, "You'll have to settle with me before you start." Or, warningly, "Be careful how you drive that nag; I can always tell how fast you been going."

At the time when Peterson first began to loaf in the barn office, Bales was in the zenith of his glory. Peterson was a shy, quiet old fellow who, after considerable nagging from his wife, had moved into town from a farm in a far corner of the county. The transplanting had made of him a pathetic figure, and he had taken to the atmosphere of the livery barn like a fish flopping in a pan of water; the place smacked, at least, of the environment his nature needed.

There had been no introductions. Even after becoming a full fledged member of the club, Peterson never waxed loquacious. But that first day when he, Peterson, had edged into the barn and hesitated about appropriating one of the seats near the stove, Bales had gruffly asked him to go out and help unhitch a team that had just come in. It had meant his initiation, and there had been a glow within him as his fingers had twisted familiarly with buckles and straps.

It was not long before his daily presence about the place came to be taken for granted. His companions in leisure accepted him, inasmuch as the big chief had accepted him, and Peterson was very grateful for it all to John Bales, the big chief. His spirit had found a haven. His wife and the rest of the town might go to meetings and entertainments and make calls; he had a hangout for seven days in the week where his own language was spoken.

And then, well—yes, you could put your finger on the very day that things began to take a turn. It was on the day that the man who ran the implement shop next door had shipped in a "horseless carriage." The thing "wasn't practical, of course—merely a novelty." Watching it start up Main street, stop for adjustments, start again, John Bales experienced not the least quiver of foreboding. He was interested in it in a purely detached sort of way, as he might be interested in a balloon.

"Yes, they got the contraption here yesterday," he laughed to a patron. "Wait just a minute 'till the sorrel gets through eatin' her oats and I'll get the rig ready for ya. Nope, the roan mare ain't in. Traveling man's driving her over to Shellrock."

Even when there were enough automobiles in town to make up a string of them as a feature of the Fourth of July parade, Bales regarded them tolerantly. There are men whose whole existence is wrapped up in their business, and John Bales was one of these. He was home only long enough for his meals. The implement man next door had bought his third car, and one day he asked John Bales to take a ride with him.

"No, nope," Bales had replied, jokingly. "They'll never get me in one of those things—never."

It would be rather more difficult to put one's finger on the exact day when John Bales awoke to what had actually happened. He was still a character, but quaint now rather than powerful. You saw him going to and from the barn for his meals, methodically as ever. In summer you saw him seated at the side of the barn's great doorway, his chair tipped at the accustomed angle. But you noted, too, a lack of activity around the place. Folks had ceased going buggy riding for pleasure. Even the loafers had fallen away—all except Peterson.

"Only a fad," sighed Bales as a new big car whizzed past. "Like roller skating. Everybody was crazy about that here one winter. Who goes roller skating now?"

"Yah, just a fad," agreed the faithful Peterson.

"They'll never get me into one of those things—never," vowed Bales to Peterson. And there was no joking in his tone.

And then there came a day when it seemed as if everybody in town and for miles around owned a car of some make or other. The language of the people had changed. It was all cylinders, and carburetors, and self-starters, and tires. The side street was filled with noises from sputtering engines, and bursting tires, and tooting horns. Times had degenerated from the occasional horse that shied on the highway to few or no horses on the highway at all. Bashful youths who had once saved up to hire a buggy for a Sunday afternoon now had their own machines. And it seemed—it just seemed that the cars tried to be their noisiest when they passed the old Bales' livery barn.

Stronger men than John Bales have been crushed by the world's shabby treatment. He made no complaint. He simply drooped little by little. There was a tragic note of tenderness in his voice when he spoke to his two remaining horses. He answered Peterson gruffly at times, the old fellow's rare comments seemingly arousing him from thoughts no longer in the present. Peterson understood. His own heartstrings had been twisted when his wife had talked him into quitting his farm. An eloquent silence grew between the two old men. Together they stuck by the barn and let the rest of the world go by.

One morning as Peterson arose rheumatically from his breakfast table, his wife, who was at the telephone, turned rather sharply and said:

"There's no use in your going down to the livery barn. Old Man Bales died last night."

Peterson wavered, sank back in his chair.

"We'll have to send flowers," continued Mrs. Peterson, hanging up the receiver. "It's the proper thing to do."

"Flowers?" queried Peterson.

"Of course. Out of sentiment. Don't you know what sentiment is?"

Peterson didn't know as he did, but he had an idea that the sorrel and the roan down in their stalls ought to be watered and fed, and he pulled on his cap and took his routine walk to the livery barn.

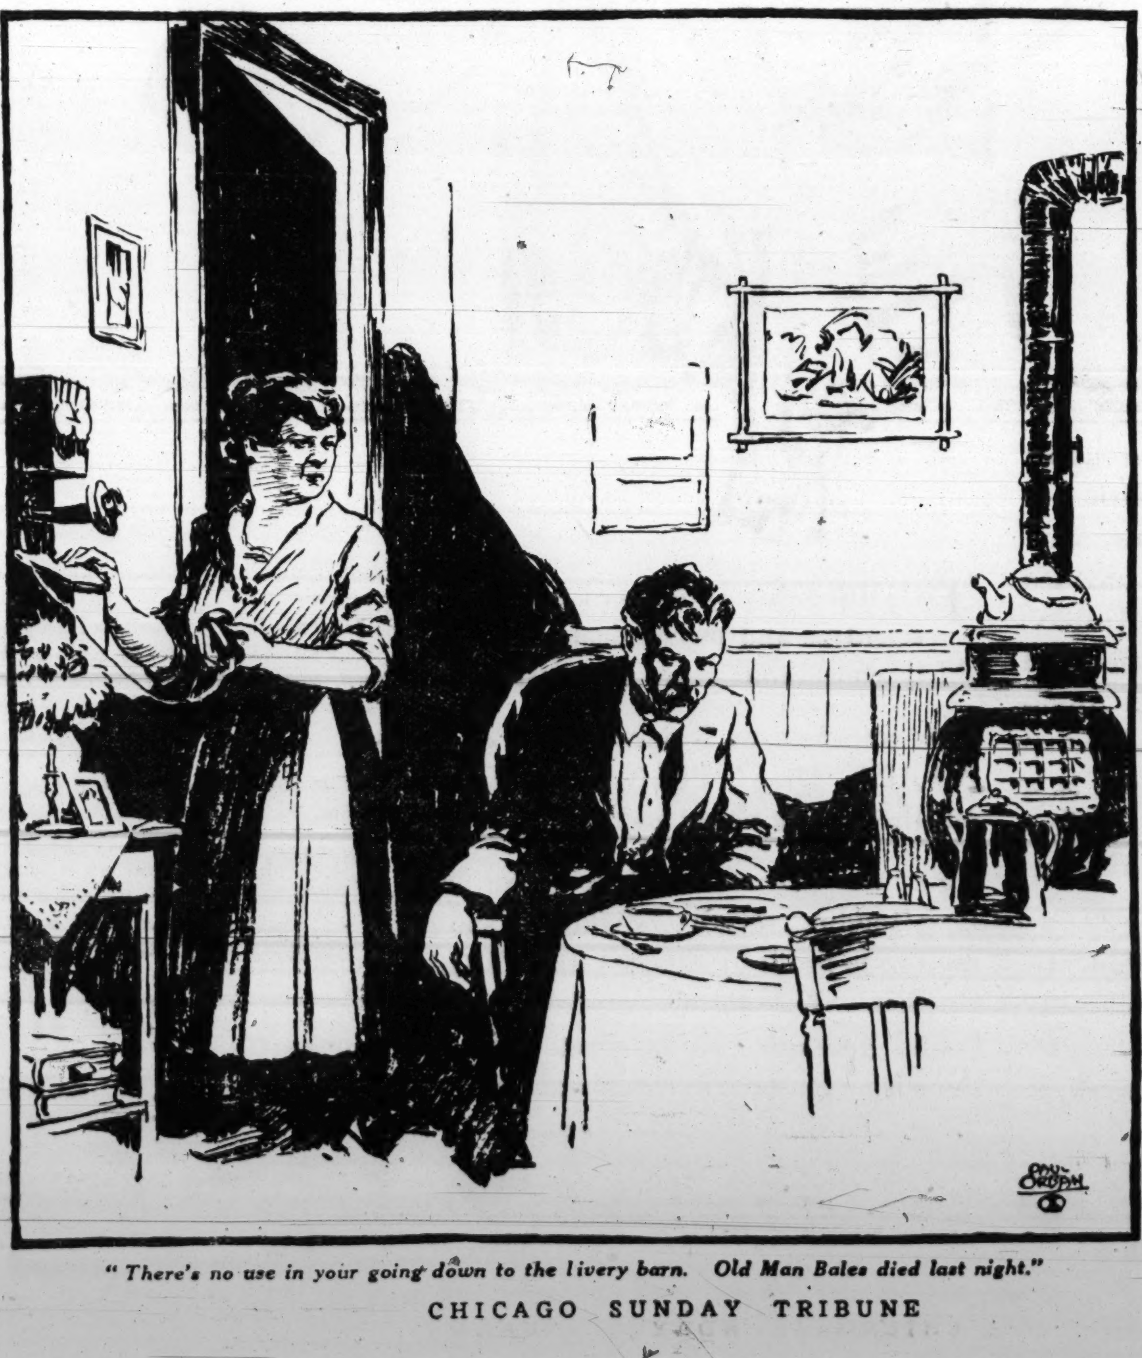
The funeral was held on the afternoon of what was supposed to be a spring day, but with it was considerable of reluctant winter's chill. Peterson told his wife that he didn't believe he would go to the services—that he wasn't used to going to places like she was.

But he changed his mind, to an extent. He did draw up in front of the house just before the procession started for the cemetery. Perhaps his maneuver had been an afterthought, perhaps he had reached a decision only after hard debate, for the hearse—from years out of use—was just as he had extricated it from the cobwebs and dust at the rear of the barn. It was being drawn by the sorrel and the roan and he, Peterson, was driving. And it was a determined Peterson, an authoritative Peterson, who ordered the driver of the automobile hearse, waiting in front of the house, to return the mechanically propelled car to its garage.

And there is such a thing as the most humble of persons sometimes becoming so firm from their convictions as to cause others to concede them command, unquestioned.

And Peterson, driving slowly at the head of the procession, found himself indifferent to anything that folks might think of his action, found solace for a portion of the ache that was in his heart, in recalling, as he drove along——

"They'll never get me into one of those things—never."



"There's no use in your going down to the livery barn. Old Man Bales died last night."

the one. I'd been watchin' her an' I was just goin' to take her in when she spoke to you. So I waited to see what'd happen. Now we'll run her over to the station an' see what the sergeant says!"

"We will, will we?"

Van Valkenburgh uttered the words between his set teeth. For a moment he hardly saw the stolid figure before him, he was so blinded by a primitive rage that thirsted for the blood of this blundering fool of a "plain clothes man" who was on the scent of some quarry, and who was perfectly capable of running in his—Van Valkenburgh's—protégée, simply because she was unlabeled.

"I watched you two till you brought her here," went on the satisfied voice of his companion. "I felt sure you didn't know her, so I followed the two of you, and when I seen her in the light I thought she answered the description——"

What more the plain clothes man thought was never revealed. In that instant Van Valkenburgh had him by the throat. In the next he had forced the fiercely fighting figure into a small private dining room off the hall, had choked it pretty thoroughly, had hurled it headlong against the room's most distant wall, had closed and locked the door from the outside, had pocketed the key, and was quickly walking back into the waiting room, very short of breath but extremely well satisfied.

"I had to lock up that ass," he briefly explained to young Mack.

Mack nodded. "I don't like his looks m'self," he agreed simply.

"Telephone for a taxi, quick. Tell them to rush it. As soon as it comes I'll get the lady away from here, and after we've had a fair start you can release that fool."

"His name's Casey. What was he tryin' to do?" asked Tom.

"Arrest her, on the general chance that just possibly she was some one he was looking for."

"P'raps she is," Mack suggested.

"Possibly," Van Valkenburgh admitted. "But they've got to prove it before they get her, not afterwards. See here," he broke out, "are you going to stand by us or aren't you?"

"I am," Tom confessed. "I don't like his looks," he repeated, "and I do like the lady's."

For this sufficient reason he sent an urgent order over the telephone which, however, Van Valkenburgh missed, owing to the increased activities of Casey, who was now battering the door and bellowing forth alternate appeals and threats.

Van Valkenburgh discovered that during his brief absence his protégée had again put on her now dry slippers.

"That's good," he commented approvingly, picking up the mackintosh and holding it for her to slip into. "We're going to leave this place."

She got up at once. The wonderful brown pools of her eyes met his inquiringly, but still with entire trust.

"Just you and I?" she asked, uncertainly.

"Just you and I."

She drew a deep breath and buttoned the garment with uncertain fingers. Then, turning abruptly to face him, she exclaimed, "While you were gone I almost got it!"

He was interested.

"Got it? Got what?"

"It almost came." She was greatly excited. Her beautiful face was illuminated as if by an inner light, which, however, died out as suddenly as it had come. "I almost had it—and then—it went," she ended in an odd, flat tone.

"Cab's here," Tom reported, appearing on the threshold. "Better get a move on," he added urgently. "That chump's tryin' to break down the door. Good night, miss," he added, formally.

She gave him her hand. "Good night," she said—"and thank you. You have been very kind."

For an instant she left the hand in his big one, and Mack stared down at it as if it were a treasure given him to study.

"I'll hold that chump 's long's I can," he said at last, and, so to speak, gave the hand back to her.

Van Valkenburgh hurried her out on the street and into the waiting taxicab.

"To the Clarendon," he briefly instructed the driver. His plans were made. He must, of course, throw Casey off the scent. So he would leave the cab at the Clarendon, enter the hotel, depart from it by another door, pick up another cab, and continue these maneuvers until all trace of him and his companion was lost. In the meantime he would try to think of some woman friend to whom he could venture to confide his charge under such unusual conditions. O for a mother, a sister, or an elderly aunt into whose safe care he could intrust this tragic waif until the mystery surrounding her was cleared up! He smiled down at her, and again, hesitatingly but surely, she smiled in return. How absolutely and utterly she trusted him! Nothing in his past life had ever touched him so deeply as that trust.

Then the girls' eyes fell away from his. Instead of leaning back in the cab she now sat forward, staring ahead of her in a confused, puzzled fashion. Indeed, there was more than confusion in her face; there was actual anguish. After a long interval it cleared again, grew radiant.

"I have it!" she cried. "It is Fourteen East Sixty — East Sixty—no—yes — East— East Sixty-seventh street!"

She was so violently excited that he was alarmed. He repeated the address soothingly.

"Fourteen East Sixty-seventh street. Is that where you want to go?"

"Yes. Yes—yes—yes!"

Her excitement was increasing. He stopped the cab and gave the number to the driver, not knowing whether to feel relieved or puzzled by this new development. The promptness with which he acted partly calmed the girl, but her whole manner remained changed. She was still deeply agitated, but holding herself under control. She did not speak, but leaned forward in the darkness, straining her eyes to detect through the wind driven sleet the street figures on the lampposts.

"What time is it?" she asked at last in a voice so low as to be almost a whisper.

He looked at his watch.

"A quarter after 2."

She groaned irrepressibly.

"They will be frantic," she muttered, and strained forward again as if by doing so she could quicken the speed of the car.

They were on Fifth avenue now, slipping past the forties, the fifties, the early sixties. At Sixty-seventh street the car swerved sharply to the right, and a few minutes later faced about, stopping abruptly at the entrance of a private residence on the south side of the street. Notwithstanding the hour, the big house was lighted up, and past the drawn shades at the windows several figures moved restlessly.

Before Van Valkenburgh could open the cab door his companion had done so, and had passed up the broad stone steps like a streak of light. He sprang after her and rang the bell. Even as his finger touched the electric button the door swung open. A plump butler quivered before them, revealing a small pink jelly mold of a face, whose expression promptly changed from one of keen anxiety to one of respectful rapture.

"Miss Sylvia!" he stammered, incoherently. "O, Miss Sylvia!"

Van Valkenburgh's protégée had recovered something of her poise. She nodded to the stammering servant.

"Thank you, Bromley. I'm quite all right," she said, and hurried past him into the hall.

Her escort, forgotten by them both, called down an order to the driver of the taxicab.

"Wait," he briefly directed, and with great presence of mind followed his erratic charge into the wide hall. He was just in time to see her catch in her arms a girl much like herself, but four or five years older—evidently a sister. For a moment the two clung together, sobbing, watched benignly by an elderly and professional looking gentleman who hovered in the near background. After an instant's hesitation this person advanced to Van Valkenburgh with outstretched hand.

"Evidenly it is you, sir, who brought Miss Sylvia Wetmore safely home," he said, cordially. "Let me be the first to thank you. I am Dr. Armstrong, the family physician."

Van Valkenburgh shook hands with Dr. Armstrong and introduced himself as cordially.

"I am glad to have been of use," he added, "but, if you will allow me to say so, I am still rather at sea."

"No doubt, no doubt. It must have been very confusing. Come in and let me explain."

Dr. Armstrong motioned him to a room off the hall and hospitably indicated an easy chair near a fire, himself dropping into an opposite one. "Will you smoke, or can I have Bromley bring you anything?"

Van Valkenburgh declined the invitation with a word of thanks. The sisters had vanished into a room at the end of the hall, from which he heard faint echoes of their contralto voices. In the hall itself and from the stairs leading to lower regions came the sound of footsteps and whispers, evidently those of servants asking and answering one another's questions.

"First, tell me, please, just what happened," invited the physician.

Van Valkenburgh obeyed.

"You're certainly entitled to an explanation," admitted the doctor, when he had finished, "and it can be given in a word—shock."

"Shock?" Van Valkenburgh repeated the word rather dazedly.

"Yes, shock. Miss Sylvia Wetmore was suffering from a temporary but complete loss of memory, due to severe nervous shock."

The young man opposite him remained silent, waiting for more light.

"She was in a train wreck with her mother five years ago," the physician continued, conversationally. "Both were pinned in their stateroom when the train caught fire. Sylvia was rescued, but not until she had seen—and heard—her mother die. For weeks afterwards she did not know what or where she was. She soon recovered, but she has had several recurrent attacks, each shorter and coming at longer intervals than the last. The one before this occurred more than a year ago. We thought she was past them, as, of course, she will be eventually, for she is young and in superb health. But just before dinner tonight the sisters, who live here with an aunt, received word that their only brother had died very suddenly, of pneumonia, out in Denver.

"The shock and the storm, together, I suppose, were too much for Sylvia. While her sister, Margaret, was telephoning for me, Sylvia slipped down into the basement and out of the house, picking up one of the maid's raincoats in the lower hall. The girl saw her do it, but didn't have enough presence of mind to restrain her. The sisters were intending to dine with friends. All we could do when I came was, first, to learn whether she had gone to her friends' house, and then to send out a general but secret alarm and caution the police not to let the matter get into the newspapers. Both the girls are so well known in society, and the position of the family is such——"

Van Valkenburgh thought of Casey with a throb of remorse. The blundering fellow had been on the right track, after all, and his refusal to explain his position or give his credentials had been his thick-headed effort to be discreet. Just the same, Van Valkenburgh was glad he had saved Sylvia Wetmore that suggested interview with the sergeant. She had not been starving, either. She had merely been utterly exhausted by hours of wandering in the nightmare in which she had found herself.

Dr. Armstrong rose. "Let me thank you again," he repeated warmly. "And now, if you will excuse me, I will see how my patient has come through the experience."

Van Valkenburgh rose reluctantly, and then, despite himself, lingered. It was hard to go without seeing her, to break the last tie between them, but at least he knew who she was. He also understood the haunting resemblance he had noticed. He had seen the face of Sylvia Wetmore not once but many times, in snapshots from Palm Beach and other resorts. He could call the next day to inquire about her, and even if he were not admitted to this house of mourning, surely among the friends he and she must have in common there were those who later could bring them together.

Suddenly he caught his breath. She was before him, pale, tired, indescribably appealing, indescribably lovely, holding out her hand. Hardly knowing what he did, he took it and held it close between both his own.

"Thank you for bringing me safely home," she began bravely. "Without you—what might have happened!"

Her breath caught as for an instant she contemplated that black abyss.

"Don't think about it any more," he urged. "It's all over now, you know. What you need is rest. I'll say good-night——"

She put her hand on his arm, but the intimate little act was performed as unconsciously as a child would have done it. Obviously her mind was absorbed in what she wished to say to him.

"Wait a moment," she urged. "Sit down," she added, slowly; "I want to make you understand what you have done for me. If I don't do it now, perhaps I never can. And—I want you to understand."

He obeyed her in silence, taking his place beside her on the big davenport she indicated before the open fire. She went on speaking at once, bending forward a little, her eyes on the blaze, and not on him, as she talked.

"I don't know what sent me out," she began. "Some impulse to get away from the excitement and grief of the others, I suppose. All the servants loved Charlie, too, you know—Dr. Armstrong told you?" she interrupted herself to ask.

"Yes." He uttered the little word so gently that it held all the sympathy he did not otherwise express.

Her face twitched.

"I knew what I was doing—then," she went on—"at least I think I did. But suddenly I found myself standing quite still, wondering where I was going—where I was—who I was——"

She broke off again and looked at him.

"Have you ever in your life," she asked suddenly, "awakened in the middle of the night, in a strange place and in pitch darkness, and for a few seconds been unable to remember where you were?"

He nodded. "It gives one a bad moment," he contributed.

"Well, fancy that experience intensified a thousand times and extending over what seem to be ages, æons. Fancy being alone in the universe, not knowing where one is, who one is, or what one is, but with just one frantic impulse—to keep others from suspecting what one is going through."

"I wonder why that is," he reflected aloud.

"I don't know. I suppose it's a part of the hideous fear in the experience. I only know that when any one passed me I hurried, almost ran, as if I were on a life and death errand. Even when I was exhausted I dared not stop.

"Then, after what seemed ages, it came to me vaguely that I must go somewhere—that there must be some place—and I realized that I had no money. I suppose I was just beginning to come out of the worst of the nightmare. But I dared not speak to any one. Then"—her breath caught—"you came along! You were humming as if you didn't know there was a storm. There was something reassuring about that—it was my first note of hope. And so—I dared to speak."

He tried to reply to this, and suddenly discovered that he could no do so. By how narrow a chance had they found each other! She might so easily, so naturally, in her blind panic, have let him pass as she had let others pass.

"From that moment," she went on, still with her brown eyes on the fire, "the worst was over. I knew you would look after me. I don't know why I knew it, but I did. I felt—safe."

"Some time," said Van Valkenburgh, very quietly, "some time soon, I will tell you why you knew it."

He stood up.

"You will need a friend tomorrow," he added more naturally, "to do things—to write notes and send telegrams, and to attend to various matters here. May I come—say at 10 o'clock?"

"O, if you could—— But can you? Have you time?"

"Yes. All my time is yours."

He made the statement so simply that it lost its deeper significance. Then he bent, kissed the little hand she had again placed in his, and immediately released it. The most impelling impulse he had ever experienced urged him to take her in his arms, to hold her there, to comfort her in her grief and loneliness, to tell her that even as she had trusted him tonight so must she trust him always.

But this was neither the time nor the place for that. She did not yet know the truths which he himself had learned only in this last full hour—an hour in which Romance had taken up the gauntlet he had thrown down and had shown him the vision of his future—the most radiant vision he had ever seen. Yes, he knew why Sylvia had trusted him; but Sylvia, his Sylvia, had yet to learn. He would win her—he was sure of it. Not at once; not, perhaps, for weeks or months. But sooner or later she would put those small hands in his to hold in love forever.

He led her into the hall, and, meeting Margaret near the threshold, was presented, as he mentally put it, to his new sister. For a moment only he lingered in the family group which was henceforth to be his own.

"Good-night," he said then, "Tomorrow—at 10."

observed Merrial's animation, and decided it was a bit pronounced.

"It's not that she's making more effort," thought Alice. "It's that she's making less. It's as though she'd met an old friend in a land of strangers. One can see that she's quite a man's girl, really. She's herself now. With us she was keeping herself going by force of will."

When the game was over, with Alice an easy winner, there was no thought of more croquet. Stanton was all agog to drive them over to Pearly pool in his car, for a picnic tea.

"I'll see about having the tea basket got ready for you," Mrs. Beaufort said, starting towards the house.

"But you're coming with us, Aunt Margaret, aren't you?" asked Merrial, running after her aunt.

Her face was delicately flushed, her eyes shining. It occurred suddenly to Mrs. Beaufort that she had a very pretty—perhaps too pretty—niece.

"I think not, dear. I'm too old for picnics."

"Too old! Why, Aunt Margaret, you're not 30, with those pink cheeks. You're much younger than Alice," she laughed. "Please come!" And for the first time Alice responded; she liked Merrial's joke against her, because she was being so nice to madre.

"But I don't like to leave Hubert alone, dear," she confessed.

"Don't think me cheeky—please don't," pleaded Merrial. "He'd simply love you to go—I know he would." And she ran on ahead to the sitting room where Hubert was resting.

By the time Mrs. Beaufort came in a few whispered confidences had passed, and Hubert's eyes were flashing with as much excitement as if he were going, too.

"Madre," he said sternly, "if you don't go with the others, I'll take no more of Dr. Unwin's beastly medicine—there!"

Only Merrial, of all those present, failed to realize how brilliantly her "cheek" had triumphed.

And presently Mrs. Beaufort found herself seated in the car, the heart of a merrymaking crew. Winifred and Stanton were in the front seat together; Merrial had managed that. She was thinking hard, and watching every move. Who was Kenneth Stanton? That question had got to be answered, or she'd explode with curiosity.

"And now, with a chaperone, we can stay out all hours," rejoiced Winifred. "We can see the moon rise, Ken!"

For an instant she had forgotten the change in Stanton, and had turned to him with her old enthusiasm, sure of a response. She was startled by the expression of dumb distress in his eyes.

He looked away quickly, quite as though she had hurt him.

Winifred, too, looked away, so that by no chance should he see that her own eyes had filled. It was very strange to Winifred—this new turn of affairs. Before Kenneth went over to Paris with his mother in January she had been so very happy. That Christmas had seemed to Winifred the most beautiful of her whole life. And now, how everything had shadowed! She had expected to give Stanton, on his return, his share of the happiness of her heart, but he had not asked for it. He had come to the house and hung wretchedly about with tight lips, and that dreadful look in his eyes as if he had been hurt—incurably hurt. What could have happened? Once his mother had started to chaff him about an American beauty they had met abroad, but she had stopped abruptly, which only made Winifred the more uneasy. If she only had the courage to ask him. But she could only pretend that she noticed nothing, chatter merrily to him, and, when the heartache grew altogether unbearable, "cut off," as Hubert had accused her of doing the other day.

Merrial's light laugh broke in on Winifred's thoughts.

"I don't think I could be so gay if my father had just lost a fortune," Win murmured to Stanton. "Poor Uncle James!"

Stanton, glancing over his shoulder at Merrial, felt inclined to echo: "Poor Uncle James!" For the girl looked like a mischievous sprite. She was teasing Alice—a dangerous pastime, and on women voting, too!

"A friend of mine in Chicago used to go to the polls with her cook," said she, "and after elections they weren't on speaking terms for a month. You see, the mistress always went Republican, whereas the cook was a 'bor-r-n Dimmycrat.' If the Republican candidate went in, Maggie's food was inedible for a fortnight. While if Maggie's won—well! The family were at least in clover palatably, if not politically."

But Alice was "taking it hard." She sat bolt upright.

"One sees that you have not gone deeply into the problem," she was saying in Aunt Jane's manner. "Perhaps the economic conditions of the working women in America—"

"Help!" cried Merrial. "Don't, Alice. I don't know the first thing about economics."

"You must tell that story to Aunt Jane," put in Mrs. Beaufort hastily.

"Aunt Jane!"

Merrial, suddenly serious, wheeled about.

"Ah!" said she. "I want very much to see Aunt Jane. In fact, I think I came to England to see her—most of all."

But her speech fell in sudden silence.

At Pearly pool, after tea, Kenneth Stanton found himself beside Merrial. She had sauntered away from the others and had ventured out, balancing from stone to stone with an occasional snatch at overhanging branches, till she had gained a little rocky islet well out in the small lake. Stanton, seeing the slight figure alone, and knowing the slipperiness of foothold and the depth of water, came after her as far as the first stone. Beyond that, a man's foot could find no resting place.

"You look like a wood nymph," he said, feeling impelled to express his sense of her strange, airy remoteness. She smiled and looked down to nod at her own straight, white reflection in the glimmering water.

"There are two of us out here," she said. "A wood nymph and a water nymph. And," as her foot slipped a little, "maybe in a minute we'll both be water nymphs."

"That's what I was afraid of," said he. "That's why I came."

"Is it?"

He laughed, still with an uneasy eye on her insecure perching place.

"Do, please, come back, Miss Houlton," said he.

"It would be a shame to spoil those nice flannels of yours rescuing two perverse water nymphs, wouldn't it? What if I fall in on purpose?"

"You're too grown up for such a schoolgirlish trick."

"I'm not grown up. I'll never be grown up. I've decided not to be. But—I'm coming back."

She came, proudly ignoring his outstretched hand, and stood beside him. He found himself looking down curiously into her cool, clear eyes.

"Why don't you ask me how I like England?" she said. "No one has asked me yet how I like England!"

"I wish you'd tell me. I wish you'd tell me, too, how you like your cousins?"

"Ah! That's interesting!"

She sat down on a huge boulder and he sat beside her.

"I think Alice ought to have been a boy," said she, "and that Winifred"—on the name she gave him a keen, quick look, and smiled to herself at the flush that ran up his cheek at her pause—"and Winifred—what do you think of Winifred?"

She leaned forward for the question, and her face gleamed earnestly through the dusk of coming moonlight.

Stanton pulled a long blade of grass, and twisted it about in his strong, brown hands.

"I know them so well, you see, Miss Houlton, and I've known them so long—ever since we were kids—that I—it's really hard to say what I do think of them."

"Of Winifred?"

"Of Winifred."

"I know what you think of Winifred," said Merrial.

He started. Then he looked round, and suddenly the cool eyes seemed to him the eyes of a trusted friend.

"How do you know?" he asked, meaning to make his tone very light and a trifle sarcastic. But, somehow, his voice was sincerity itself.

Merrial had dropped her chin in her hand, and was very seriously regarding him.

"I'm a bit of a mind reader," said she. "You've no business, you know, to look the way you do."

"How do I look?" he demanded, almost nervously. He wished he had not come out there to join her, and yet—it was pleasant to find a trusted friend, even if she wore the guise of a witch of the wood, and talked in the level, unmodulated American voice that had become recently almost hateful to his memory.

"You look," said Merrial slowly, "as if you were in a hole. I hate to see a man in a hole—specially a nice man."

Stanton laughed.

"I'm glad I'm a 'nice man.'"

"O, you're very nice! But I dare say you're a lot nicer when you're on the level."

"That sounds as if you thought me a bit of a sneak," he said, wondering why he should care enough for her opinion to feel resentful.

"You may be, of course," Merrial gave the idea her most judicial consideration. "But I should hate to think that. I shan't if I can help it."

Stanton had flushed.

"You are just a little—odd," said he shortly. Merrial's face laughed delightedly.

"That means just a little—impertinent. Yes, I know I am. It doesn't seem to bother me much either—being odd. I suppose it's part of my misfortune."

"Your misfortune?"

"Being an American."

"O! come now, Miss Houlton. You don't honestly think it's a misfortune, do you?"

Merrial's laugh rang out at his tone of serious expostulation.

"It worries me a good deal sometimes," said she.

"It must."

They were silent for a minute, and the shadow fell again on the young man's eyes.

"Why don't you like Americans?" asked Merrial.

Stanton flung back his head.

"Now—er—er," he stammered, "that's really hardly fair, Miss Houlton. I never said I didn't like them, did I?"

"Your face said it for you, Mr. Stanton, down on the tennis court this afternoon, and again just now, when you tried to console me under my—misfortune."

Stanton felt as if a little, teasing midge were buzzing about him.

"You said it was a misfortune—not I," he defended himself desperately.

But the midge was well out of reach, laughing at him.

Suddenly she took pity.

"I know I said it first," she admitted soberly. "But it was quite easy to see that you agreed with me. That's why I said it—to find out. It was a sort of a little trap"

"Now, who's not on the level?" he cried, exulting in having got in a thrust.

"But I don't look unhappy over my hole, whereas you—O, my dear me!"

The quaintness of her exclamation made him laugh again.

"I must certainly change my expression," he said lightly. "What had I better do?"

"Get out of your hole."

"Suppose I can't?" said he, with a sudden hoarseness.

"Then"—Merrial stood up—"I'd go away—till you can be a more cheerful friend to—Winifred."

"Miss Houlton! Really!"

"Do call me 'odd' again," said she. "I don't mind a bit, and it will make you feel better. I've a notion that your being in a hole and not liking Americans has some connec——"

She stopped suddenly. Had the answer come—or hadn't it? Was Kenneth Stanton the name of the man Gertrude Hart said she was "engaged" to in Paris, or was it just imagination?

But now Stanton was fairly running away from her, and she followed him back to the rest of the party with the mirth of a wood witch in her eyes. He met the eyes over Winifred's head, and in the long, quiet look he found himself exchanging with their owner, he promised her his confidence, some day—when his dignity should allow it. "Till then I'll be content," said Merrial's little half nod, as she looked away again.

"Very soon," she said to Mrs. Beaufort, "I'll go to see Aunt Jane, may I?"

The graceful little habit of saying "May I?" had been acquired quite recently by Merrial. When she first came she would have expressed herself differently. She would have said, "I shall go to see Aunt Jane." But the English girls' deference to their "madre" was a beautiful thing, and Merrial had an instinctive love for beautiful things. Here was something that was well worth acquiring. Therefore she lowered her voice a little, in Winifred's manner, as she put the question to her aunt.

"I would wait awhile, dear; she is sure to invite you before long," was Mrs. Beaufort's rather nervous answer. "Has—has your father ever spoken to you about your Aunt Jane? You said in the car that you had come to England to see your Aunt Jane."

"That was an exaggeration. I meant that, now I know all of you, Aunt Jane is the most important person in England for me. Do you think she'll like me, Aunt Margaret?"

It was rather a trying question for poor Mrs. Beaufort.

"She must, dear, I think."

Merrial's pupils suddenly grew large.

"That means you like me, doesn't it, Aunt Margaret?" she smiled, and Mrs. Beaufort was immoderately surprised to see that the cool, clear eyes were moist. She put her hand quickly on Merrial's.

"Why, dear girl! What did you think?"

"I—I didn't know," laughed Merrial shakily. "I rather thought not."

"Was that my fault?" asked Mrs. Beaufort, distressed.

"Not the least bit. It was because"—Merrial blinked her eyelashes—"it was because I was very uncertain how you felt about my coming at all. No; I was not uncertain. I was certain—very, very certain—that you didn't want me."

Mrs. Beaufort straightened herself a little. The hurt look came back to her eyes.

"Indeed, dear, the uncertainty had been on our side so long that I almost think it just that you should feel some yourself."

"The uncertainty?" Merrial looked bewildered.

"Surely, when your father never wrote, never gave us any heed all these years, it was natural that we should all—Theodora's people—feel a little neglected, a little hurt."

The delicate shell pink had flushed all over Merrial's face. Out of it her eyes shone like astonished stars.

"How funny!" she cried, and again: "How funny! This world is a funny, funny place!"

Mrs. Beaufort waited.

"Aunt Margaret, dear!" Merrial pressed her hand. "All these years poor dad has thought you hard as nails to 'Theodora's husband.' He thought you were just waiting to snub him if he made the least advance. He said you thought he was an 'intrusive Yankee.'"

Mrs. Beaufort winced a little. She remembered very clearly that her father had used just that phrase. She imagined the hardening of the "intrusive Yankee's" jaw as he had perforce endured the insult. Tears came into her eyes.

"Ah! That was not my fault, Merrial! I fancy your father did endure a great deal from some of us. It is never easy—well, international marriages often bring a great deal of unpleasantness, a great deal of pain. My father had very strong, very narrow ideas for his daughters. He was a very insular Englishman, I am afraid—poor papa!"

"Then grandfather did call dad an 'intrusive Yankee'!" said Merrial slowly. "My dad an intrusive Yankee! Certainly this world is a queer place."

"Merrial, listen. I did not feel like that at all. I loved Theodora so—you can't know, for you have no sister. But to part from her was terrible, and I should have loved your father for her sake besides his own, if he had only given me the chance. You believe that, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"I was so much younger than Jane, and was told very little about it. But even so, I think your father might have seen, might have felt, that my attitude was different from my father's, from—"

"Winifred must be very much like you when you were young," Merrial interjected.

"She is, I think," Mrs. Beaufort relaxed with a little sigh of relief. The talk had been a difficult one for her. "And she is like your mother, too."

"And Aunt Jane?"

"She is quite different; much cleverer, much stronger."

"Poor Aunt Jane!"

Mrs. Beaufort found herself wondering that night over Merrial's exclamation. It was not natural from the lips of a young, thoughtless girl. What could Merrial—Merrial Houlton of Boston, Mass.—know of the lonely bitterness of this poor English gentlewoman's life? Had James perhaps—but in the days when James had known her, Jane had not been pitiful at all. Mrs. Beaufort could see in memory the fine, fresh colored young woman, with her dignified carriage and her scornful, handsome face.

"Poor Jane!"

She sighed it out into the darkness, and started to find the sigh an exact echo of Merrial's.

"She is a strange girl, my niece, Merrial Houlton," said Mrs. Beaufort to herself.

At that moment—to be exact, the moment of midnight—the "strange girl" sat in her wide window seat, inditing a letter to one, Tripp Hart, in U. S. A.

"And, Tripp, what was the name of that young Englishman Gertrude met at Paris? Was it Kenneth Stanton, or wasn't it? Do ask her, please. I'm almost sure, but I want to be certain."

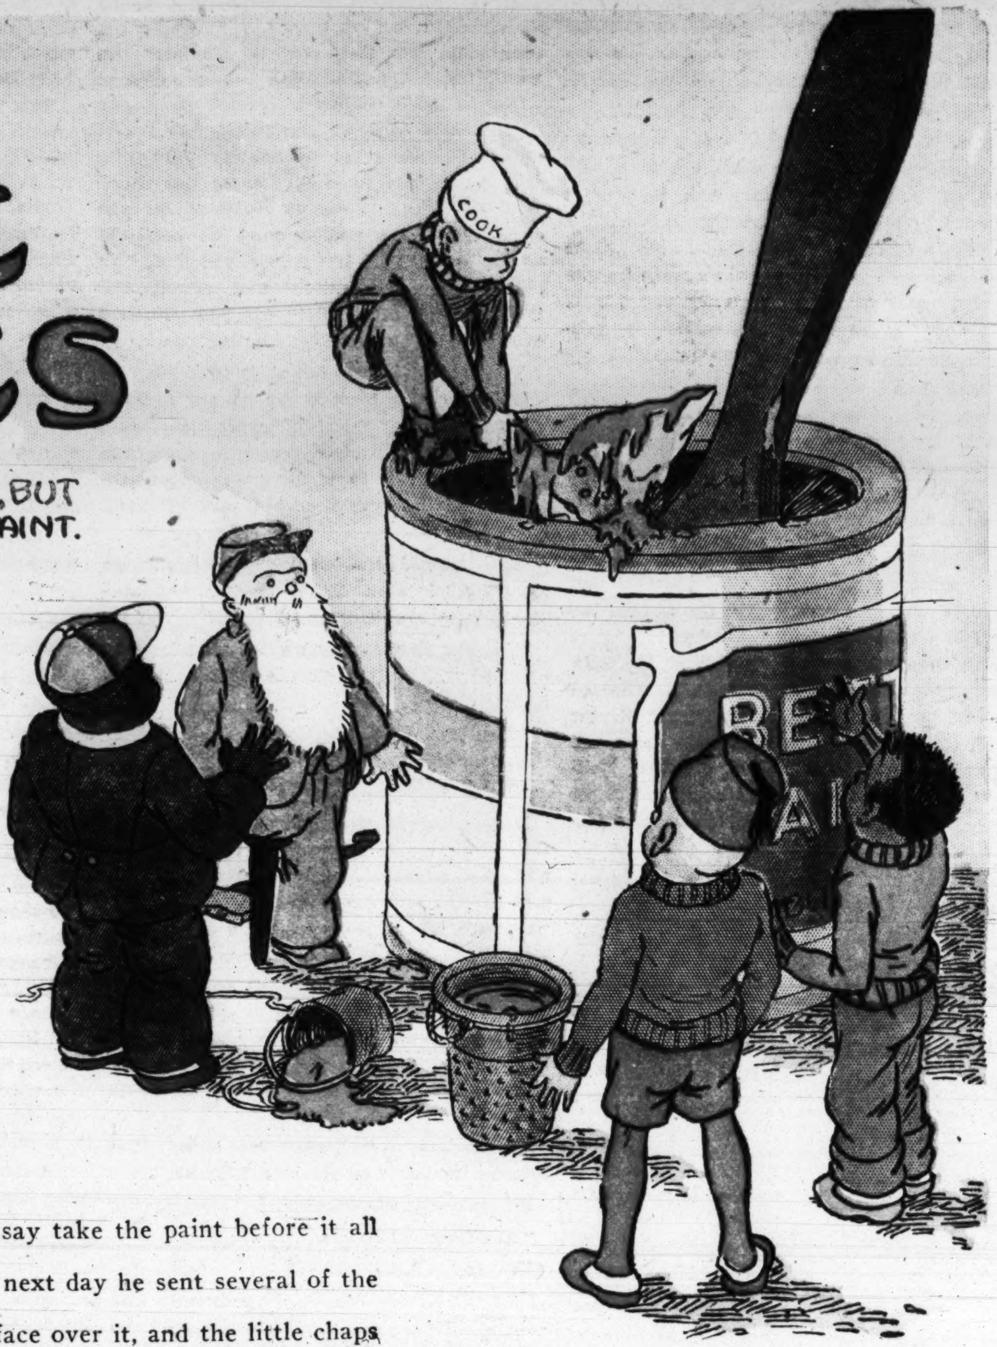
THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE DUNCE GETS A NEW COAT, BUT IT HAPPENS TO BE A COAT OF PAINT.

BY
WM. DONAHEY.



Once a little fellow—a Teenie Weenie man—
Tumbled into sticky paint inside a little can.
He got a little coat, as green as it could be,
But he had to wear it off instead of on, you see.
—Rufus Rhyme, T. W. P.

FOR a long time the Teenie Weenies had been watching a can of green paint. They were in great need of paint, for the tank which held the water supply of the little folks was badly in need of a new coat. The can stood under an old bench, and as the big people who lived in the house near by paid no attention to it the Teenie Weenies decided it wouldn't do a bit of harm if they took a thimbleful.

"That can of paint is fast drying up," said the Old Soldier one morning after paying a visit to the can. "The lid is gone and it will soon be all dried as hard as a dog biscuit."

"It's been standing there all winter, so I think we might take a little," said the General. "If the people who own it had wanted to use it they'd have put the cover on the can to keep it from drying up."

"That's what I'd say, General," cried Paddy Pinn. "I'd say take the paint before it all dries up. That's what I'd say."

The General decided to take Paddy Pinn's advice, and the next day he sent several of the little men to get a supply of the paint.

The top of the paint was dried until there was a hard surface over it, and the little chaps had to get an ax and chop it away before they could dip up the paint with the bucket which they had brought with them.

The Cook climbed up onto the edge of the can and chopped the dried paint away, and of course the Dunce had to climb up, too.

"Now, be careful, Dunce," warned the Cook, "or you'll fall in."

"Ah, say!" growled the Dunce. "Don't you suppose I know enough to keep out of a can of paint?"

The words were scarcely out of the Dunce's mouth before he tripped some way or other and went kerflop into the sticky paint.

The Cook caught the Dunce by the arm and quickly pulled the unlucky fellow out, but he was a most remarkable sight, for he was almost covered with the thick green paint.

The Old Soldier made a couple of paddles out of a burned match which he found on the ground and Gogo and the Turk scraped off a great deal of the paint.

"Turpentine is the only thing that'll take off paint," suggested the General, who came up while the Dunce was being scraped.

The poor Dunce was led to a place where a bottle of turpentine stood, and the Sailor soon drew up some of the turpentine which the Cowboy emptied into a thimble. The Dunce was made to stand in the top of a salve box while the Clown washed the paint away with the turpentine.

The poor Dunce kicked and yelled at the top of his voice, for the turpentine got into his eyes and made them smart dreadfully. The Clown scrubbed and scrubbed until he almost scrubbed the Dunce's skin away, but he could not get all the paint off and the Dunce looked for all the world like a squirming tomato worm. His fuzzy hair was green, his face was green, and his clothes were even greener.

Next the Dunce tried washing with water. He poured two thimblefuls of hot water into the Teenie Weenie bathtub and taking off his clothes he scrubbed with soap and a mouse hair brush until his face and hands were sore, but he still looked green in spots.

"S-s-s-say,'" growled the Dunce when he had dressed himself in a clean suit of clothes and joined the rest of the Teenie Weenies at the lunch table, "isn't there any way to get this awful paint off?"

"Yes," answered the Old Soldier with a twinkle in his eye. "There is just one way it can be done."

"How, oh, how?" asked the Dunce with very wide eyes.

"Wear it off," answered the Old Soldier.

To make the Teenie Weenie doll which is printed on this page, cut out the figure and paste onto card-board. When it is thoroughly dry, cut the card-board away around the edge of the picture. It can be made to stand up by pasting a flap to the back of the figure.

TEENIE WEENIE DOLL

Blue Ribbon Fiction

"MICE AND MEN"

by Katherine Newlin Burt

THE STORY THUS FAR—Merrial Houlton is deeply concerned over the unrelenting attitude of her dead mother's family, in England, toward her father, with whom Merrial's relatives have had nothing to do since her mother was married and went to live on a western ranch. Poring over a pile of old letters which reveal this estrangement, the girl is interrupted by a call from Tripp Hart, an old time playmate from the west, who comes to urge his claim as a prospective husband and is regretfully rejected. The same evening Merrial asks her father about the relatives in England and about her brother Dick, who is there at school. Her father suspects a purpose beneath her questioning, but Merrial will not reveal it. Nor will she confide in Gertrude Hart, Tripp's sister, whom she meets by chance at the theater and who revives Merrial's memories of her childhood on the ranch by her insistent talk of Tripp and his apparently hopeless love affair. Later, when her father tells her he has failed in business, Merrial announces that she is going to England to visit her mother's people while he is getting on his feet again. The family in England—Alice and Winifred Beaufort, their mother, and Hubert, an invalid brother—await the American girl's arrival with mixed emotions. They are somewhat surprised, when she comes, at finding her not at all wild and wooly. Merrial has been amused and disconcerted by her brother Dick, who turns out to be hopelessly English and rather ashamed of his American family but she starts a determined campaign to make friends of the Beauforts, satisfying their curiosity first by telling them all about herself.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

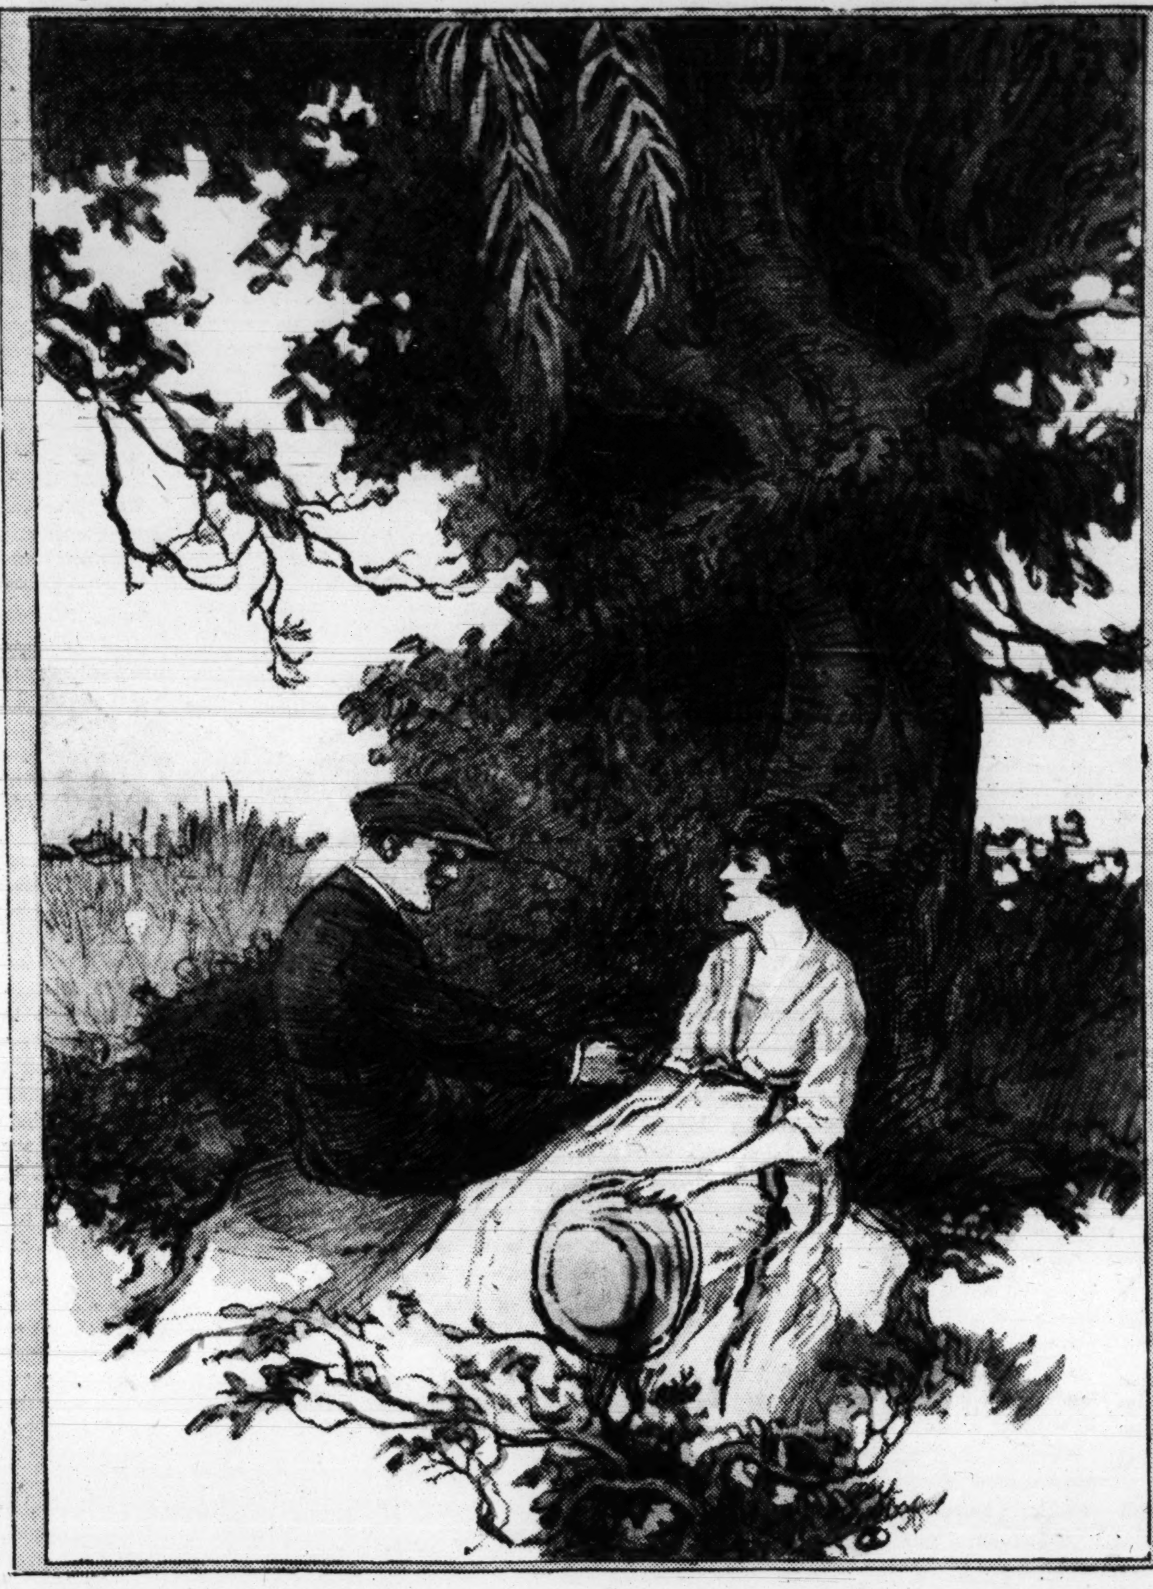
Kenneth Stanton.

"SOON after that," Merrial continued, "I went abroad to a convent in France, as dad thought I needed a bit of civilizing, I suppose. I used to keep the girls awake half the night telling about our times out west. Half of them had nightmares and woke up shouting about ropes and cottonwood trees, till the sisters forbade my stories after lamplight."

"How much did you learn at the convent?" asked Alice. "It seems to have been rather easy going for a boarding school."

"It wasn't really—but you see I'd been used to so much freedom that I just couldn't remember all their little rules and things. It was awful!"

"Tell us about the convent, do," asked Winifred. "You do seem to have had a variety of kinds of life!"



"I'm a bit of a mind reader. You've no business, you know, to look the way you do."

"Well, of course, we had a daily walk—in good weather, and we were lectured if we swung our arms. The girls were so peaky and white, poor dears. No wonder! All shut up like that! I used to steal out of bed at night to open the nearest window—it was so stifling after camping out right in the open, under the stars, at Crystal creek. But at last they caught me and I was shut up and lectured—and coddled, too, for fear of pneumonia."

"Hard luck, Merrial," laughed Winifred.

"You don't look very strong, dear. I can't help sympathizing with your poor nuns," said Mrs. Beaufort.

For an instant Merrial looked decidedly piqued at this slight to her physique. But she quickly smiled herself out of it, in the odd little way of hers that so puzzled Alice.

"I'm much stronger than I look," she said quietly.

"Did you play tennis at the convent?" asked Winifred.

"Gracious, no! But I did at home, of course."

"I can't think how you had time, what with fighting cattle men out in the west, and nuns in the convent, and all the rest," remarked Alice with a touch of asperity.

"Well, you see I didn't stay very long at the convent in France," Merrial explained—and added, in a matter of fact tone, "After four months of it I 'lit out,' as we say, and ran away home to dad."

Hubert exclaimed, in chorus with Winifred; Alice gasped, and Mrs. Beaufort felt it her duty to enter a mild expostulation.

"But, Merrial, dear, that was really too naughty of you. All that way alone, and at your age! Your father must have been quite angry with you!"

Merrial laughed. She realized just what she was doing—and was determined to register herself accurately in the collective Beaufort mind, come what might!

"No, Aunt Margaret; he just laughed and said, 'Bully for you, little girl; it suits me to a T.' He was off on a trip round the world, partly for a vacation and partly on business, and hated to go alone. So we went together—and I had a simply wonderful time."

"And what happened next?" laughed Winifred.

"Let me see; what did happen next?" She fumbled with her recollections. "Why, yes; I went to college at Baltimore—lots of fun. I was only 16 when I 'finished,' and the girls in my class were 'coming out.' But there didn't seem any use waiting so I 'came out,' too, in Baltimore. Tripp's Aunt Helen chaperoned me so cleverly that at the end of the season—don't be shocked, Aunt Margaret—I was engaged!"

"Engaged to be married!"

"Yes—but it didn't last long. He was too nice—ready to do anything on earth for me. It was too boresome—nothing to bite on!"

There was a dead silence. Even the last humorous sally did not remove the feeling of something improper!

"I'm sorry for that, dear," said Mrs. Beaufort, rather sternly. "An engagement is not a thing to be entered upon lightly, do you think?"

"No; and I'm not telling of it because I'm proud of myself, really, dear Aunt Margaret. It's one of the sides of life we don't manage very well, perhaps, at home. We've swung too far in the direction of freedom for women, in that respect. Or perhaps it is that we've not yet quite learned how to use it wisely. To an American girl in the south 'a summer engagement' doesn't mean anything very serious."

Mrs. Beaufort put an end to the discussion of what she evidently felt was a dangerous topic by rising from the table. Merrial followed her from the room. Alice remained moodily staring at the table.

"Isn't Merrial a real sportsman?" said Hubert, with glowing admiration.

Alice, seeing the ardor of hero worship on his face, felt a pang. Hubert was the center of her existence and she spent herself for him. Yet he had never looked at her as he did at Merrial.

"I wish I were an American girl—as I can't be a man," said Winifred enviously.

"I don't think she means us to take it all literally," said Alice. "I've read that westerners love to 'stuff' us; they think it's funny."

"But Merrial isn't a westerner; her home's in Boston."

"She's a westerner, just the same," said Alice stubbornly. "I believe that half the time she's kidding us with tall tales."

"I don't care if she is," said Hubert, as they were wheeling him back to the sitting room in his chair. "She can 'kid' us as much as she likes if only she'll keep on stirring us up. It's no end of fun—you never know what's coming next."

Alice felt tears of mortification come into her eyes. They made him "comfortable" for his afternoon rest and strolled out into the garden.

"I've never seen Hubert so happy for ages," said Winifred. "And she's so funny with him—she treats him just as if he were a man as old as herself."

"Didn't Kenneth Stanton say he was coming over to go with us for a picnic tea to Pearly pool this afternoon?" asked Alice, as Merrial and Mrs. Beaufort joined them.

"Kenneth Stanton!" Merrial murmured the name, inaudibly, wondering why it struck her as familiar. She turned to Mrs. Beaufort. "It's funny," she said, "but the name Kenneth Stanton seems to have stuck in my mind, as though I'd heard it before. Could I have met him?"

"It's not at all likely. He's never been in America, I feel sure, though now I come to think of it his mother's American. But you wouldn't know it; she's lived in England since she was a child. He's been on the continent with her recently. Ah, here he is. You can ask him all about himself, my dear."

And so those long, upward curving eyelashes were put to practical use, that afternoon, by their fortunate possessor, and veiled a good deal of puzzled observation.

Kenneth Stanton came swinging down through the garden from the house towards the group under the trees. Even at a distance Merrial noticed that, while he should have been a good looking young man, an air of almost sullen depression spoiled the lines of his face. His eyes, she noticed when he came up to them, naturally of a bright sea blue, were clouded.

Mrs. Beaufort introduced him to Merrial.

"Mr. Stanton, Merrial dear; Miss Houlton, Kenneth," she said.

A friendly smile lit up his face and was as quickly dispelled by a furtive frown, when Mrs. Beaufort added: "My niece from America, you know, Ken, of whom we've been talking so much the last few weeks."

Merrial could not account for his quick change of expression; certainly she had never seen him before; she never forgot the face of any one she had really met.

"Aunt Margaret was just telling me that your mother is an American, Mr. Stanton."

"Well—er—yes; she was," he replied a little stiffly. And then as if to palliate his manner, he added: "She came to England so long ago that she has no recollection of America, but I hope you will come and see her."

"You've never been across, yourself?" asked Merrial.

"No—not yet," he replied.

"But you mean to go, one of these days?" Merrial rallied him, smiling.

"I—I—er—perhaps," he stammered, in queer confusion.

He turned away, his eyes upon Winifred, who was playing a game of croquet with Alice. And no sooner had he focused his attention upon her than Winifred's game went all to pieces. She could not take the mildest ball. Merrial noticed it, completely puzzled. What did it all mean? She was determined to find the answer to that question.

So Merrial woke up. Deliberately she doffed the mask of puzzlement from her face, and donned that of a laughing witch.

Kenneth Stanton, since his return from Paris, had become a very silent young man. Even before, when he was making joyous love to Winifred Beaufort, he had not been much of a talker. But when Merrial's tongue flew and eyes danced, there was an end to silence and to the appearance of depression.

Alice, watching the scene, while she played,

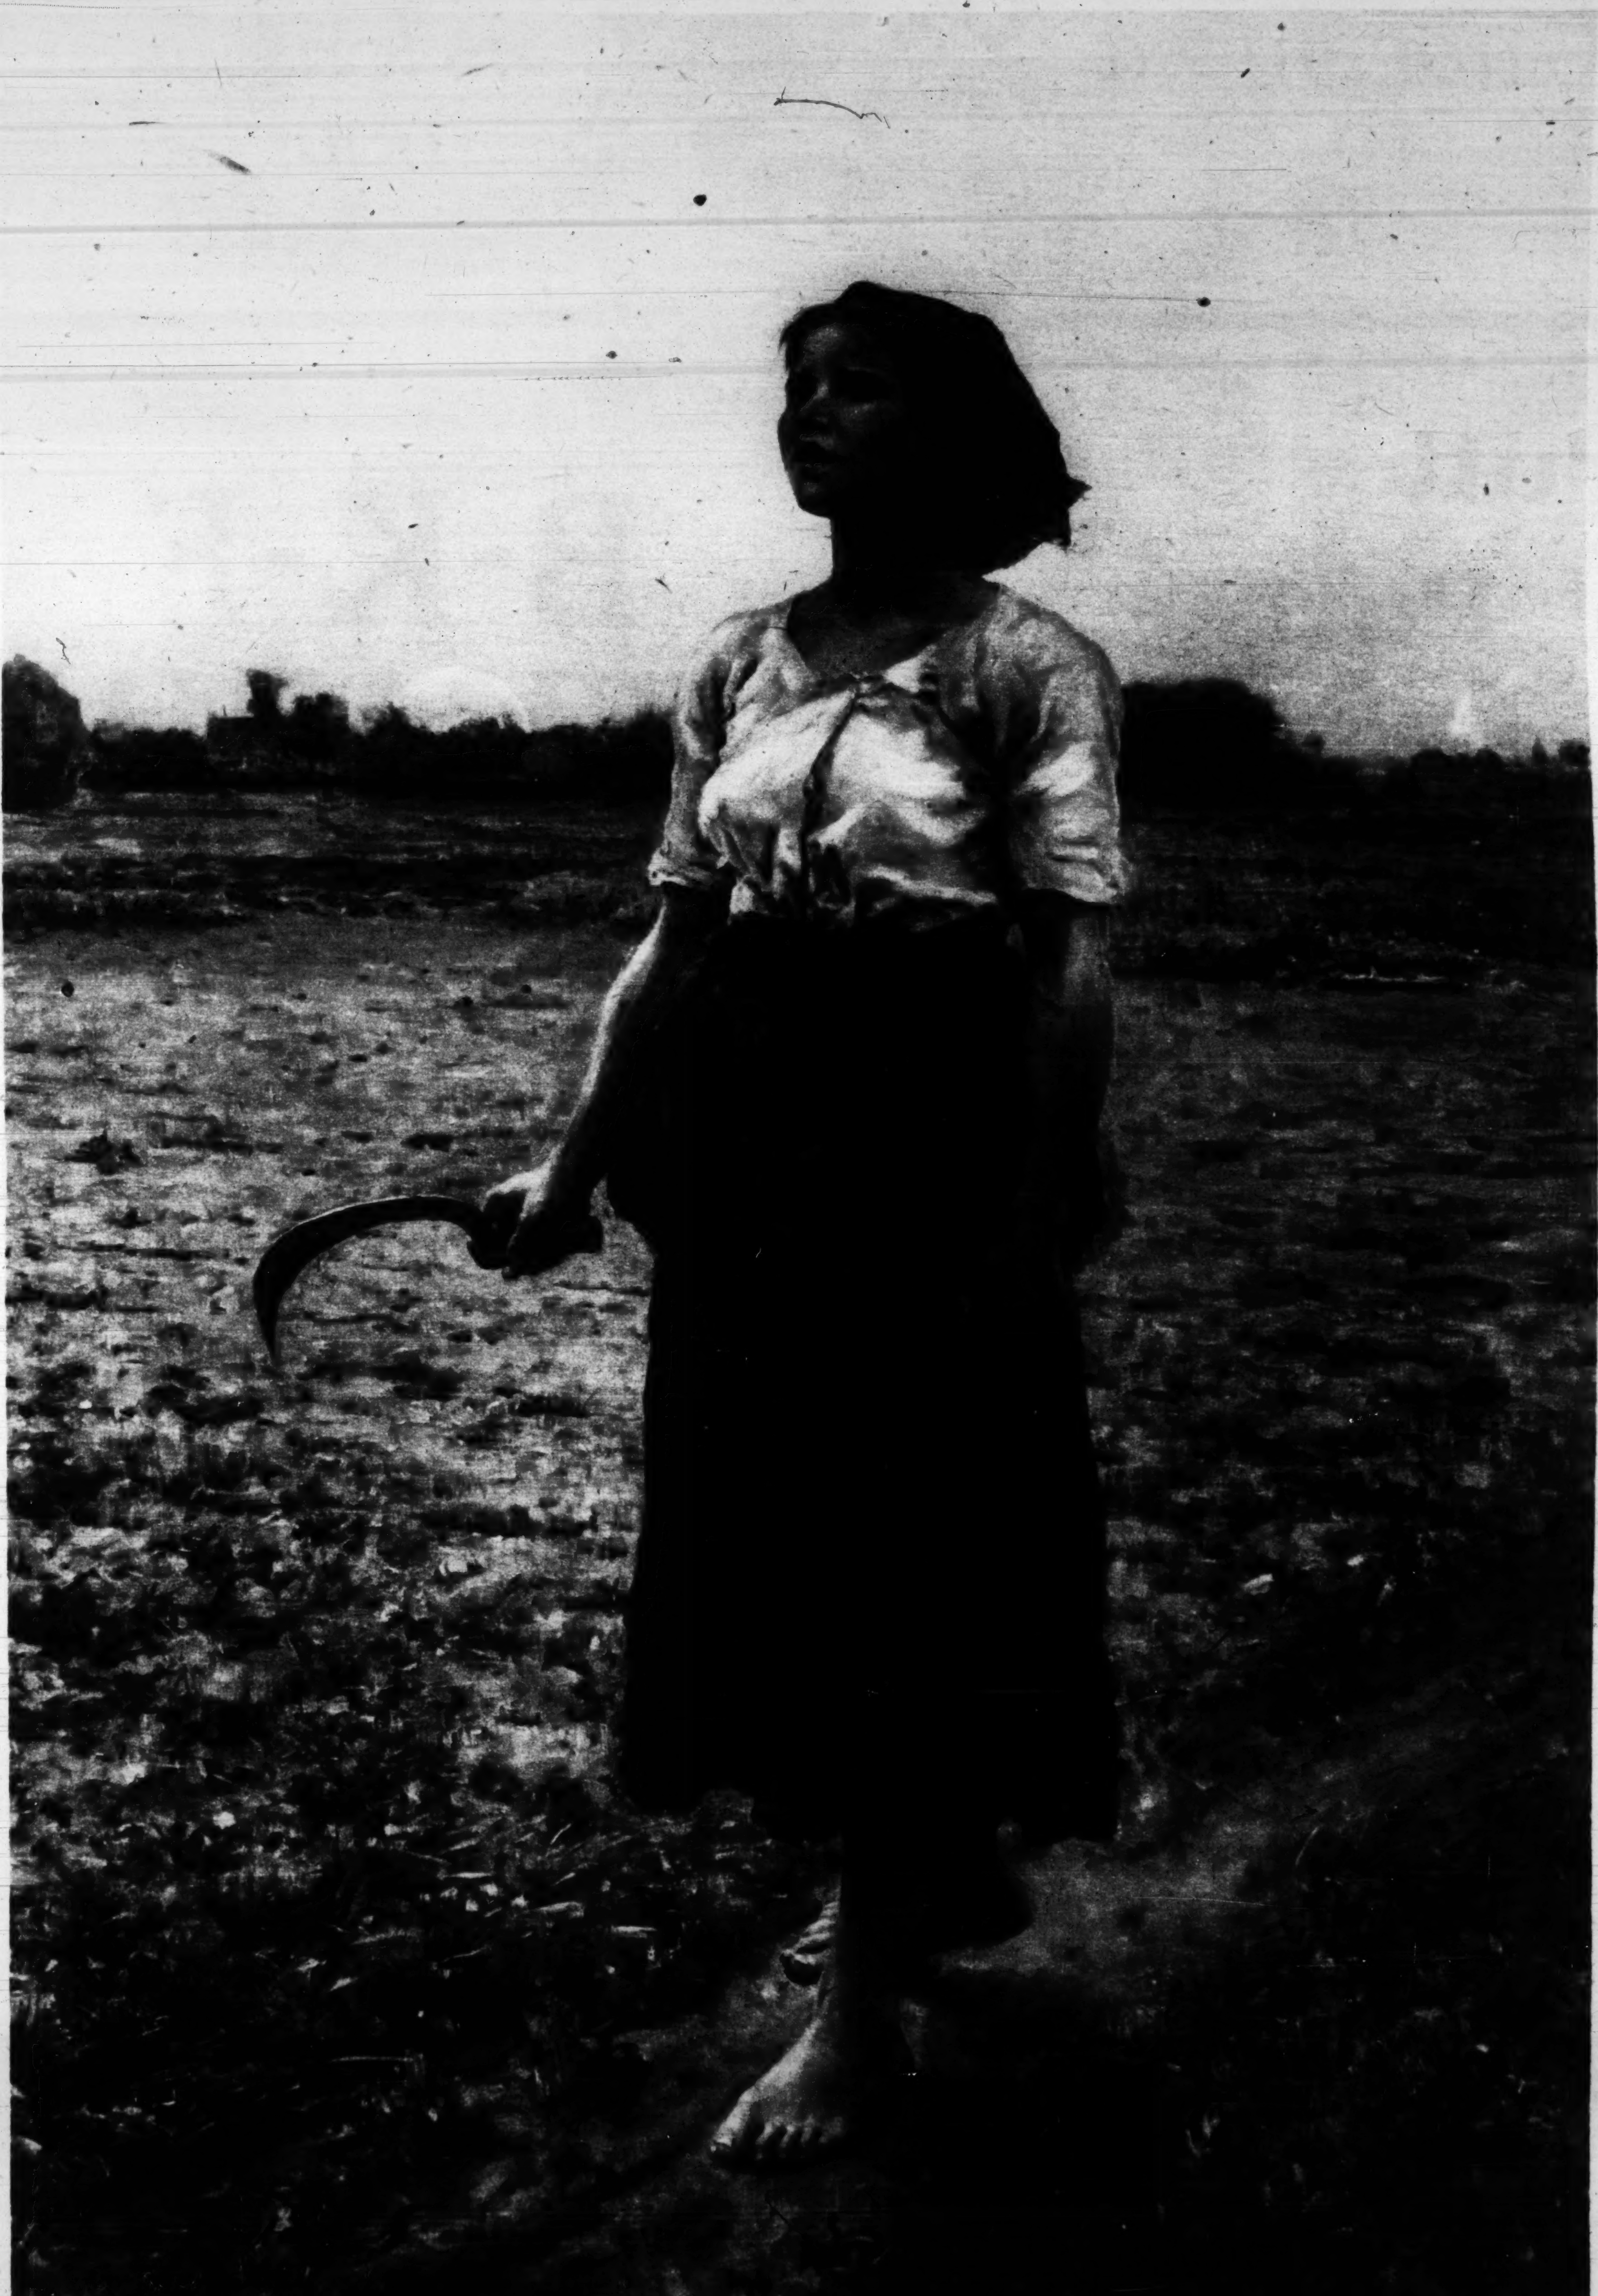
CHICAGO'S FAVORITE PAINTING



"THE SONG OF THE LARK"—Years ago The Tribune printed a reproduction of this painting by Jules Breton, with the announcement that careful inquiry proved it to be the best liked picture in the Chicago Art institute. Officials of the institute made a similar investigation last week and found it still "the first favorite of them all, without a doubt." Breton painted "The Song of the Lark" at Courrieres, France, in 1884. The picture was exhibited at the World's Fair and was transferred thence to the Art institute, where it has hung ever since.

CONWAY TEARLE is beyond any shadow of a doubt "the" leading man of the day. The most prominent of the female stars are bidding for his services and, between you and me, I bet there's been a bit of hair-pulling over him.

The popular hero, who they say isn't in the least spoiled by his popularity, was born in New York in 1880. He played in the "legitimate" with Sir Charles Wyndham, Ellen Terry, Billie Burke, Ethel Barrymore and Viola Allen and "did" stock with Grace George.

His first screen work was done for Brenon in "The Fall of the Romanoffs." He's now free-lancing—and as busy as a watermelon merchant in July.

Mae Tinee.

DORIS KENYON, always a favorite when she appears in pictures, is with us in the stage production "The Girl in the Limousine." It isn't her first work for the "legitimate," however, for she played in "Princess Pat."

Miss Kenyon started her screen career with Famous Players in "The Traveling Salesman." She was with Essanay in "On Trial," and in various pictures for Pathe, Wharton and De Luxe. "The Inn of the Blue Moon" and "Wild Honey" were two of her most successful pictures, I am told.

Miss Kenyon was born in Syracuse, N. Y., in September of 1897. She attended Packer college and Columbia university. She's a remarkably pretty girl with brown hair, gray eyes, and a peaches and cream complexion. And she's bright, too!

You can go ahead and work, dance, live, love and laugh. Removes painful calluses as easily and surely as it does hurting corns.

An Easy Way To Remove Wrinkles

Smiles and frowns—both cause wrinkles—because they stretch and crease the outer skin. But if neglected, wrinkles soon become deep and are hard to remove.

A healthy, vigorous skin is quite elastic, expanding and contracting naturally. But if the skin is neglected, it becomes too dry or too oily and loses its firmness and elasticity.

If your skin has become loose, flabby, or sags and is wrinkled, the new astringent skin treatment, with Graham Beauty Secret, will quickly restore it to its natural, healthy, vigorous condition.

Try this treatment. Before retiring, wash the face with warm water—not too hot. Do not use soap. Dry thoroughly—and apply Graham Beauty Secret—a soothing, astringent gray paste. Do not rub or massage the skin. When the paste has dried thoroughly, remove it with warm water, and apply Graham Skin Pure.

This treatment will tighten the cuticle or outer skin—nourish the cutis or inner skin tissues—smooth away the wrinkles—restore the natural elasticity—stimulate the circulation of the blood in the underlying tissues, and make your skin delightfully smooth, fine textured and vigorous—radiant with the glow of health.

The astringent skin treatment tightens the skin—also contracts coarse, enlarged pores, draws out blackheads, lifts up sagging skin, and bleaches a sallow, discolored skin without the slightest irritation or injury.

HOW TO GET GRAHAM BEAUTY SECRET

The better class of shops and toilet counters can supply you with Graham Beauty Secret and Skin Pure. If your dealer cannot—send us the coupon with $2.25, and we will mail you a full size jar of each—postage and war tax prepaid—with booklet, "Graham Astringent Skin Treatment," that gives complete instructions. Or—we will send the booklet Free if you will give your dealer's name.

Right Care Means Plenty Of Good-Looking Hair

-Men and Women Both Should Have It— But Many Do Not

High authorities agree that regular wisely directed care is the secret of good-looking hair. They agree on the wisdom of using "La Creole" Hair Tonic. Its important ingredient, "Euresol," is recognized by the Council of the American Medical Association for the treatment of dandruff and other scalp conditions. No other hair tonic possesses such authoritative and distinguished approval. Scientific tests prove the results that regular use of "La Creole" brings in the new beauty and health of your hair. Apply it two or three times a week, rubbing it into the scalp with a rotary motion of the balls of the fingers. Scalp circulation is stimulated, hair roots supplied with needed nourishment, a beautiful, vigorous growth of hair results.

FASHIONS' BLUE BOOK
This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune
Carroll Kelly

THE popularity of the apron tunic is attested in the center of the page. Here this apron as well as the bodice is carried out in coral organdy over a black taffeta foundation. At the right of this is a charming Delft blue charmeuse finished with silver bands and opening in front to show a rose colored organdy waistcoat blouse. Next comes a child's frock of the fashionable English sateen carried out in cherry tint with bands of French blue. At the extreme right a misses' bathing suit of blue silk jersella is appliqued with dots of dark blue satin.

The group of bathing togs at the left of the page is commenced by a beach cape of brick red flannel banded in gray and followed respectively by a coral and black taffeta suit and a bluebird colored taffeta model enlivened by motifs of cerise and jade.

NEW YORK. — (Special Correspondence.) — There is a certain type of house guest who is always wiring back to her hostess for the possessions she has left behind her. Similarly there is the kind of woman who always seems to get her vacation before she get her vacation clothes. Frequently the dressmaker has to send attire after her. She just doesn't have the imagination, you see, to make up bathing suits in April or May nor organdies in March.

It is for the forehanded summer vacationist that we are giving this advance page of summer resort modes. First of all come the bathing suits. You may go as far as you like here. Don't bother about Neptune's feelings. He is probably a great deal like Mark Twain's chorus girl—he could blush, but he can't find anything to make him blush. He is used to so much. As a matter of fact, the tendency of bathing costumes seems to be more demure this year. You can take your daily dip in something that looks like a futurist picture, but there is something there to color. That is the main point.

At the left of the page we show a delightful beach cape of brick red flannel, diversified by bands of gray flannel and lined with rubber silk to match. This is accompanied by a festive tam o'shanter bathing hat, made of silk rubber cloth in gray, with brick red pompoms. After this comes a costume of black and coral taffeta with cap of coral rubber set off by silk fiber pompoms. The last model of the group is composed of cap and costume of bluebird colored taffeta, embellished by jade and cerise motifs. And certainly the Australian crawl should not be impeded by that tiny back panel—so drolly like a mermaid's finny finish—which sounds a new note in the bathing costumes.

The next costume is a combination of black taffeta and coral organdy. Bodice and tunic are formed of the latter material, and it is interesting to contem-plait! Both the square vestee and the apron tunic are treated to the knife plaiting of which we have seen so much this year. The hat which accompanies this frock is a coral horsehair enwreathed with field flowers.

This model brings me to mention the popularity of the apron tunic. To come out of the kitchen nowadays doesn't mean coming out of the apron. Far from it. Whether it be the fluffy, hip distended variety, or whether it be the long enveloping one, whether it take place in serge or in the frilly evening creations of lace and silk, the apron is taking place all around us.

Among the varieties of this accessory one must of course lay great stress upon the Egyptian kind. Kind, did I say? On the contrary, infinite numbers of them! There is the rather rounded affair made to resemble the sacred scarab. There is the long tunic falling from the neck after the manner of the priestesses in "Aida." And between these two fall many other apronizations. Among the newest of these is the rounded front apron formed of numerous flounces. This last is smart and is made use of in numerous foreign models.

Speaking of the Egyptian mode, Madeleine & Madeleine, whose models have during the last few seasons done so much to inspire American designers, are making many of their latest gowns to look like something that had grown up along the Nile of the Rameses dynasty. This firm is fond of the apron, and one of the models I have just seen is a blue serge, made chiefly of a back and front panel, which gives the effect of an apron. These apron panels fall from the neck line to within a few inches of the underskirt and are drawn over the top of the arm to form what might be tolerantly called sleeves.

But you don't need to have an apron to be Egyptian. The main essential of this mode is a straight line from neck to hem, fitted rather closely about the hips and destitute of the everlasting hip fullness. The next ingredient is the motif of Egyptian influence. This latter covers a wide range of beads, embroideries in those lovely tones featured in early Egyptian art, and sometimes metal rings. Often, too, metal, beads, or cut steel are intermingled with the stunning thread embroidery.

That we shall soon have to have a hatblack as well as a shoeblack introduced as a national institution is evident from the amount of waxed, glazed, glistening black still found on our millinery. Just following the model of taffeta and organdy, for example, we find a hat of rose tulle crossed by strips of glazed black straw interpolated by a wreath of pink roses. The frock itself is a charming little model of Delft blue chameuse banded in silver. The bodice opens in front to show between rows of silver buttons a waistcoat blouse of rose organdy further revealed in the short sleeves.

But our waxed black friend has other evangelists than the hat. Whole skirts of cire satin are being sent over from Paris combined with bodice or coat of another material. And, latest of the uses of cire ribbon, is found in a white organdy trimmed with bands of this accessory in black.

Among the new materials which are being much exploited for both children and adults is English sateen. This is the fabric that makes the child's frock shown on this page. The color is cherry—most fashionable this spring for belles of all ages—and both the overdress and the quaint pantalettes are bound with sateen in French blue.

But to go back to the bathing costume. As we all know, this is always reflecting the modes that prevail in more usual types. Consequently it is not strange to find the misses' suit of blue silk jersella, appliqued in the fashionable polka dot. Here these dots are of a darker blue satin and the bloomers are of the same tint.

FOR an organ the loss of which is one of the greatest misfortunes known the eye is more thoroughly abused by the average person than any other. The trouble is "that the possessor of the normal eye," says an expert on the subject, "does not take into consideration that in all near work, as in reading, writing, sewing, etc., the eye is actively engaged as well as the hands and brain and that the eye only is at rest when looking into space or when closed."

The reflex evils from eyestrain are great and numerous and often incorrectly ascribed to entirely different causes. Headaches, nausea, and dizziness are especially frequent results of eyestrain.

Symptoms of Eyestrain.

Scientifically adapted spectacles and care to secure the right kind of illumination and systematically resting the eyes are the means of preventing eye strain. Some of the local symptoms of eyestrain are: A sense of fatigue in the eyes after reading for a short time, or a constant sense of discomfort in the eyes which is increased on using them and which may be accompanied by severe pain in the back of the head; a sensitiveness to light and red and irritated and inflamed eyelids, a twitching of the eyelid or a smarting itching, burning, and watering.

With persons whose work necessitates much ocular labor they should vary their duties with intervals of rest. The simplest method of doing this is to fix the gaze on some distant object and to frequently close the lids.

Dotted Veils Harmful.

Lace work, fine needlework, fine print, and working on black goods are all a severe tax on the eyes and should be avoided if there is any tendency whatever to strain. The wearing of veils, particularly the thick and dotted or the type of veil with a large pattern, over the eyes, is bad. A veil with the meshes large and dotless about the eyes is the best kind.

There seems to be a difference of opinion among experts as to the advisability of the daily bath of the eye with boric acid. One expert advises against it; one for it.

If the eyes are strong and well don't bother with any other wash for them than they get in the daily face wash But where there is a weakness, bathe them every night in a saturated solution, which you may make up by purchasing an ounce of boric crystals and pouring over it four ounces of clear boiled water. If the day has been one of dusty travel this is specially recommended.

Light for Reading.

When you read let the light come over the left shoulder always. And give your eyes a rest when you are in the middle of a best seller which you are threatening to finish in one evening. Be a reasonable employer of your eyes, not a slave driver. You'll get better work out of them in the long run.

Aside from the purely physical ills that eyestrain may cause, there are the wrinkles to be avoided. Massage the eyelids and corners of the eyes with a little cold cream applied on the fingers or a good skin food and follow the instructions under the illustrations.

KAY: FRUIT ACIDS SUCH AS grape juice, orange and lemon juice, and apples stimulate a flow of saliva and are cleansing to the teeth. An apple eaten in the evening will mechanically and chemically cleanse the teeth and if followed by proper brushing will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night. I shall be glad to send you my remedy for pyorrhea if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARTHA: AFTER YOU HAVE massaged your face with a good skin food, you apply ice to the face. This closes the pores and tones up the skin. Then apply some more of the skin food, rubbing off what will not absorb easily. I shall be glad to send you my formula for skin food and instructions for facial massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

LETTING FATE DECIDE.

WHEN the Spanish-American war broke out I became engaged to Charles for several reasons. First, because his going away surrounded him with a romantic glamour; second, because I was tired of working and wanted a home; third, because I was used to wearing his ring, having been pledged to him seven different times before, breaking the engagement for foolish reasons and returning the ring each time.

He was considerably older than myself, not only in years but in thoughts and ideas. We had never been congenial; but he was a splendid chap of good family, and I was sure we could get along with him in Havana. I thought, too, that perhaps when he came back I would be so glad to see him that I would really be glad to marry him. So he went away with my promise to marry him when the war was over.

Long before that time I met Frank and he took my heart by storm. He was a swift wooer and after a month's acquaintance he asked me to marry him. I told him there was another man and explained about my diamond ring and my soldier boy. Nevertheless, he wasn't a bit discouraged, and we kept seeing each other nearly every day, and finally, in a few months when Charles did return, I knew I could never marry him, but I lacked the courage to tell him so.

Frank kept importuning me to "get it over with, and give him back his old ring," and so I told him I would make up my mind irrevocably the following Sunday when Charles and I went driving.

Sunday came and with it Charles, and we started on the fatal drive. We drove east down Hill street at the foot of which was Prospect avenue, running north and south, and I said to myself, "If Charles turns to the north I will marry him, if he turns to the south I will marry Frank." Charles turned to the north, although the better road lay to the south, and I was counting on that. Instead of feeling calm and resigned now that I had reached a final decision I was anything but that and felt a rebellious lump in my throat.

After we had driven a little way I looked back down the south road and said, "Charles, don't you think the south road is better?"

"Just as you say," said Charles, fondly, and turned to the south, and so, before we returned home Charles had his ring once more and I had made it quite plain to him that it was for the last time.

The next night Frank came for his answer. There was a crowd at the house, so, to avoid interruption, we went for a walk. I wilfully kept away from the subject of interest as long as possible, but finally Frank pinned me down to facts.

"Well," I said, "I'll tell you. I thought I would let Fate decide it for me, and so as we drove east down Hill street I decided if Charles turned north I would marry him; if he turned south I would marry you."

"Which way did he turn?" Frank almost yelled.

"Frank," I said, "he turned to the north."

"O, good heavens, girl, are you going to let a thing like that decide our future?"

"Wait," I said. "He had gone but a little way when he turned and went south."

We were right under a big arc light and Frank took me in his arms then and there and gave me a kiss and slipped his ring on my lonesome engagement finger and we have been happy ever since, although I didn't deserve it.

I did not tell Frank until after we had been married quite a while that I suggested to Charles that the south road was the better one. A. H. S.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

BY LORETTA KING

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

IN BUSINESS FOR YOURSELF.

IT does not always follow that a business woman who achieves success working for others necessarily meets with success when she goes into business for herself. Many women who are experts in particular phases of work find themselves wholly unable to cope with a business in its entirety.

Two recent conspicuous failures of women who were successful before they ventured into business for themselves reminds me of a similar case of a woman I know.

Two years ago Mrs. D. was known throughout the eastern states for her remarkable sales ability. She was rated by her firm as their best commercial traveler.

During the course of her career as a traveling saleswoman she had worked for several firms, but her selling experience was confined to one line of goods. She believed that there was not a single item connected with the manufacture and marketing of that line with which she was not familiar.

Her services were bid for continually by rival firms. Her salary and enormous commissions formed a popular topic of conversation among her envious fellow salesmen. In spite of their envy, however, the masculine members of the sales force had the greatest respect for her methods and ability.

At first when a friend suggested that she go into business for herself, Mrs. D. would not entertain the idea. A great deal of her time off the road had been spent in the factory. She felt that she knew the manufacturing end of the business well enough to make the venture, but she liked selling so well that she was reluctant to give it up.

Her friends finally persuaded her that she was wasting her time and energy working for some one else, when she might as well be at the head of a similar business. Every cent she had saved during her profitable years on the road was invested in the new business. She gave up selling and devoted herself to the manufacturing and administrative ends of the business.

Mrs. D. was a poor executive. It wasn't long before her new employés learned this and began to take advantage of her at every turn. She was unable to keep the factory output on a normal basis. In spite of the fact that her factory force remained the same, production gradually decreased.

Most of her time was spent puttering about the factory and interfering with the work of a good foreman. Consequently the work of the office suffered, as mail would lie unopened on her desk for days, and sometimes weeks. She allowed her bills to run beyond the dates payable, thereby sacrificing the discount and her credit.

For two years she ran the business at a loss and was forced to admit that as an executive she was a failure.

She has recently gone back to selling and is gradually winning back her old force as a saleswoman. No amount of persuasion or advice will ever induce Mrs. D. to give up her job for a business of her own again.

While many women have been phenomenally successful in the management of their own business establishments, it is well for a business woman to have no doubts as to her executive ability before giving up a good job to undertake the responsibilities and difficulties that proprietorship entails.

She Knew It.

When a young man in my late 'teens I picked up a little telegraphy from a friend of mine. One evening we attended a club dance and after having danced with a particularly poor dancer, I drummed on the arm of my chair for my friend's benefit, "poor dancer, stepped all over me." To my utter surprise and humiliation the girl sitting next to me turned and said quietly, "You needn't advertise the fact." G. B.

Gave Him the Snub.

I was sore at a certain boy at school and when I walked by him in the hall always put my head high. One day when I was going home at noon I met him in the hall with a big bunch of boys. I gave him the snub and put my head up high. I didn't see the steps. I fell all the way down, and to my mortification this boy came and picked me up. A. D.

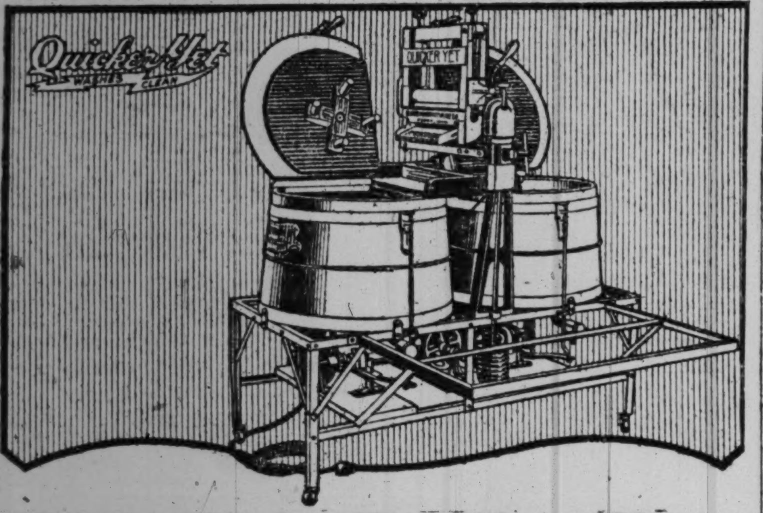
Not Gentle Enough.

One day while entering a street car I met a boy friend of mine, also getting on. Thinking he would be gentle enough to pay my fare, I walked in and took a seat. A few moments later the conductor tapped me on the shoulder and said, "Miss, you are no exception." S. S.

HOT WATER and GOOD SOAP
Are the elements that wash clothes clean



Get the Washer That Keeps Your Suds Piping Hot

Your washing machine is simply the means of applying hot water and soap to best advantage. Be sure the washer of your selection won't allow the heat to escape from the water.

Quicker-Yet WASHES CLEAN ELECTRIC WASHER

keeps the water piping hot for the whole washing—25 to 30 degrees hotter. The Quicker-Yet wooden tubs do it. They are made of cypress, the wood eternal, upon which water has no effect; they hold the heat in the water. That's why Quicker-Yet Washers insure you

A Cleaner Washing—Quickly Done

And because of the self-adjusting cross-arm dolly which circulates the clothes through the hot, soapy water at the rate of 42 turns a minute (just the right speed—not too fast or too slow) they do the washing in less time. (4)

A Dependable Washer
A Reasonable Price

Strange though it may seem, the prices of Quicker-Yet Electric Washers (3 styles) are no more, many times a great deal less than other high-grade Electric Washers. See the Quicker-Yet dealer in your locality—it will pay you to investigate both the performance and price of Quicker-Yets. Most Quicker-Yet dealers will arrange terms to suit you.

FORTUNE TELLING with CARDS

Q
"YOU WILL MEET A DARK LADY"—
"BEWARE OF A TALL LIGHT MAN"—
"A LETTER IS COMING TO YOU"—
"AND YOU ARE GOING TO TAKE A LONG JOURNEY"—

The popularity of the game of fortune telling by cards is such that I feel it obligatory to reprint the following instructions, again with the caution that the copy of the paper be saved. I was asked by so many correspondents for the issue containing the last story on cards, but the requests came when it was too late to supply them. So I warn you if you are interested just to cut this part out of your Sunday paper and save it.

IN the spirit of entertainment only I recomend the following means of telling fortunes by cards. The ways are many. On the ingenuity of the self-appointed oracle herself depends the entire success of the game. This is one of the simpler methods. But it requires a little study to familiarize oneself with the meanings of the individual cards and combinations. A good system is to write the meanings of the individual cards on a pack and cut out the combinations with meanings I give below and paste them on a cardboard to keep in front of you.

Since the meaning of a card is different when it is reversed, you would better mark your pack with an X on the end of each card, so that you can tell readily whether the card is right side up or reversed.

This is called the twenty-one card method: Discard from the pack all cards lower than sevens. You have left thirty-two cards, including the sevens, eights, nines, tens, jacks, queens, kings, and aces. Shuffle the thirty-two cards and have the one whose fortune you are telling choose a card.

In doing this it is necessary to remember that the card chosen should be according to the complexion of the chooser—king or queen of diamonds for a fair person, ditto of hearts for one rather darker or red headed, clubs for one darker still [as mouse colored or brown haired], and spades for real brunettes.

Shuffle and Cut.

Now shuffle the thirty-two cards and have the person cut them with the left hand. Then withdraw from the pack the first eleven and lay them on one side. The remainder—twenty-one in all—are to be again shuffled and cut. That done, lay the topmost card on one side to form the "surprise," and range the remaining twenty in the order in which they come to hand. Then see if the card representing the person consulting them is included. If not, one must be withdrawn from the eleven useless ones and placed at the right extremity of the row, where it represents the missing card, no matter what it may be.

Here's where your ingenuity comes in. Proceed to examine the cards as they lay, and with the meanings of the individual cards as you have them written on each card, and also with the aid of combinations, the meanings of which you have pasted on cardboard in front of you, go ahead with your "oracleing."

I will not try to give you an example of a reading here, as the cards rarely deal out the same twice, so it would only prove complicating.

After having unraveled this much of the person's destiny, turn up the "surprise" and read the meaning of it. Now gather up the cards, shuffle, cut, and form into three packs, at the first deal laying one aside to form the "surprice." By the time they are all dealt out it will be found that the first two packets are each composed of seven cards, while the third contains only six. Ask the person consulting to select one of these, lay it aside, and spread out the remaining cards from left to right, explaining them as before described.

Gather up the cards again, shuffle, cut, form into three packs (dealing one card to the "surprise") and proceed as before. Repeat the whole operation once more; then take up the three cards forming the surprise and give their interpretation.

Meaning of Cards.

Now for the meaning of the individual cards:

HEARTS.

Ace—A love letter; good news; reversed, a removal, or a visit from a friend.

King—Fair man of generous disposition; reversed, a disappointing person.

Queen—Fair, good natured woman; reversed, she has had an unhappy love affair.

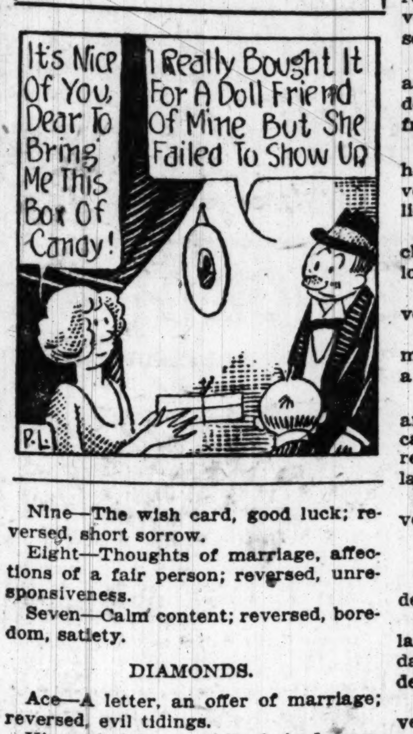
Ten—Antidote to bad cards; happiness and success; reversed, passing worries.

If We Couldn't Tell a Lie



It's Nice Of You, Dear To Bring Me This Box Of Candy!
I Really Bought It For A Doll Friend Of Mine But She Failed To Show Up
P.L.

Nine—The wish card, good luck; reversed, short sorrow.

Eight—Thoughts of marriage, affections of a fair person; reversed, unresponsiveness.

Seven—Calm content; reversed, boredom, satiety.

DIAMONDS.

Ace—A letter, an offer of marriage; reversed, evil tidings.

King—A fair or white haired man, of a deceitful turn of mind; reversed, a treacherous schemer.

Queen—A fair woman, given to gossip and wanting in refinement; reversed, rather a spiteful flirt.

Jack—Subordinate who is untrustworthy; reversed, a mischief maker.

Ten—Traveling or removal; reversed, ill luck will attend the step.

Nine—Vexation, hindrances; reversed, domestic wranglings or disagreement between lovers.

Eight—Love passages; reversed, blighted affections.

Seven—Unkindly chaff, cynicism; reversed, stupid and unfounded slander.

CLUBS.

Ace—Good luck, letters or papers relating to money, pleasant tidings; reversed, short lived happiness, a tiresome correspondence.

King—A dark man, warm hearted and true as a friend, straight in his dealings; reversed, good intentions frustrated.

Queen—A dark woman, loving but hasty, and bearing no malice; reversed, harassed by jealousy and maliciousness.

Jack—A ready witted young man, clever at his work and ardent in his love; reversed, irresponsible and fickle.

Ten—Prosperity and luxury; reversed, a sea voyage.

Nine—An unlooked for inheritance, money acquired under a will; reversed, a small, friendly gift.

Eight—Love of a dark man or woman, which, if accepted and reciprocated, will bring joy and well being; reversed, an unworthy affection, calculated to cause trouble.

Seven—Trifling financial matters; reversed, money troubles.

SPADES.

Ace—Enjoyment; reversed, news of a death, sorrow.

King—A widower, an unscrupulous lawyer, impossible as a friend and dangerous as an enemy; reversed, the desire to work evil without the power.

Queen—Widow, a dark woman; reversed, an intriguing, spiteful woman.

Jack—Young man, wanting in refinement of mind and manners; reversed, a treacherous character, fond of underhand measures.

Ten—Grief, loss of freedom; reversed, passing trouble or illness.

Nine—A bad omen, news of failure or death; reversed, loss of one near and dear by death.

Eight—Coming illness; reversed, an engagement canceled or a rejected proposal, dissipation.

Seven—Every day worries, or a resolve taken; reversed, silly stratagems in love making.

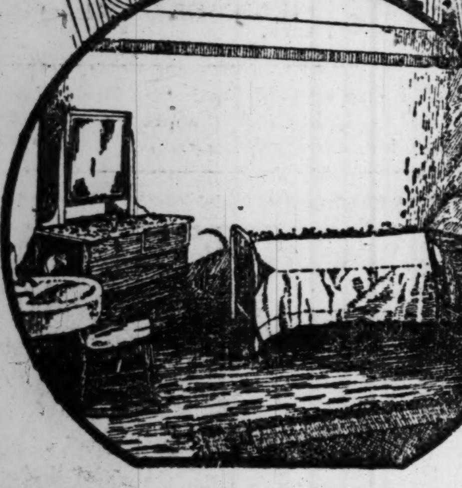
BRADLEY HALL

Where Work Means More Than a Living



What Life is Like at Bradley Hall

In some ways, Bradley Hall offers even more than many homes. It is a beautiful, modern building, elegantly furnished and contains every modern convenience. The big living room with its easy chairs, secluded corners, piano and talking machine, is the social center.

There is a reading room, a writing room, a gymnasium, a laundry—everything to minister to comfort, instruction, health and diversion.

The bedrooms at Bradley Hall are all that a girl could wish for—bright, roomy and comfortable, with pretty twin beds, soft mattresses and pillows, and plenty of clean bedding.

Each room has a private lavatory with hot and cold water, and there is a reading lamp at each bedside.

The Dining Room at Bradley Hall is arranged in cafeteria style, so that each girl may select the kind and quantity of food which she likes best. The meals are very, very good—and are furnished at cost. Your money goes far at Bradley Hall, and you will find it possible to save a tidy nest egg.

THE cities are full of young women obliged to earn their way far from relatives and friends. Many of them, owing to the crowded conditions of cities, are forced to board or lodge in dreary, cramped rooms among unsocial strangers. Life under such conditions is surely all work and no play.

It was this condition which led the Bradley Knitting Company to plan Bradley Hall. We wanted the young women who came from a distance to work in the Bradley mills, to get "more than a living" from their labor. We wanted them to be surrounded by the happiness and comfort which one associates with a genuinely successful career.

Choose the Work You Can Do and Like to Do

The Bradley Knitting Company provides a beautiful home for you—but even more important is the work itself. You can choose the kind of work you like best and consequently, the work in which you will progress fastest.

The work appeals naturally to women, and calls for all degrees of skill to meet your own experience and talents.

WINDING appeals to the nimble-fingered girls who like to move around.

HAND FINISHING appeals to girls who wish to be seated while at work.

MACHINE FINISHING appeals to those who do not care for hand work.

CUTTING requires a steady hand and is very interesting.

INSPECTING is interesting, varied and requires a great deal of judgment.

To the ambitious girl who is now working in uncongenial surroundings, or to the girl just starting out in business life, we offer the beginning of a career—and a pleasant, congenial, social life in the meantime. We place you in a department best suited to your ability and teach you your work from the very beginning. The wages for beginners are good and are rapidly advanced as your experience increases.

Do not put off writing for our booklet describing life at Bradley Hall in detail, with photographs and views of the work and the pretty things you will help us make.

Address
Miss Margaret Ruth Johnson
Bradley Hall, Delavan, Wisconsin

NOTE—Two or more girls may come to Bradley Hall together and share a double room. Families may buy attractive homes for much less than the price of the rent alone in most cities. The booklet tells all about it.

A-B-C
ELECTRIC WASHING-MACHINES

MORE than 60 Electrical Appliance Dealers in and near Chicago know that only in the A-B-C Super Electric can they offer you a washer that effectively combines the two best methods of washing.

Some electric washers flush the dirt out by lifting, dipping and squeezing clothes in a tub of sudsy water.

Other electric washers rock the clothes to and fro, tossing them back and forth in the sudsy water to loosen the dirt.

ONLY the A-B-C effectively combines both methods. This exclusive feature of continuously alternating the two best ways of washing clothes gives you the advantages of both in one washer. This ends all discussion as to which is preferable. Each type has its advocates, and both are effective. In the A-B-C Super Electric you GET both.

See any of these 60 Electrical Appliance dealers or come into our store and we will gladly demonstrate to you the exclusive washing principle of the A-B-C Super Electric. A small first payment puts one in your home.

A visitor observed that the little girl the house was eating some new kind cereal food. As she seemed to evince melancholy interest in the preparation the visitor asked: "Do you like Mary?"

"Not 'specially," replied the young- r sadly.

"Then why do you eat it?"

"I have to," was the grave answer. "Our grocer has promised to give a r of skates for every five packages buy, and it's got to be eaten every rning." J. J. M.

One morning on hearing a timid knock at my door I answered it to find a small miss who politely asked me for a drink. Late in the afternoon of the same day on answering a summons at the door I found the same little lady holding a cup in her hands which contained two mouthsful of water. Holding the cup out to me she said, "I'se bringing back the water you lended me this morning."

Our little nephew, who had just come to visit us, seemed to be fascinated with our large white cat and her brood of five small kittens. One day I found him pointing at each kitten and remarking over and over again, "Bobbie, Jack, Johnnie, Susie, and Mable." Upon questioning him what he was doing he replied, "I'm helping that cat know her children." H. L.

Edward was talking cannibals to his sister. Rather frightened, the little sister said, "O, I hope they don't come here. If they do, they'd eaten us up and then we won't have ourselves." C. C.

"Did you enjoy your vacation?" I asked a little chap whose school had been closed for a week.

"Not very much," was the dejected answer. I dreampt about the teacher most every night." K. S.

Copy of a Poem.

"Does any one have or remember a poem called 'The Organ Builder'? It is, if I have heard correctly, the story of a man who built an organ which would play of its own accord. I particularly want this piece of poetry for an oratorical contest, and will gladly refund the postage to any one who will send it to me, or return the favor in any way I can. M. N. McM."

I shall be happy to pass on this address to any one who knows the desired poem.

Offers Baby Walker.

"Some one asked for a walking machine for her baby. I have one which I can give to some needy person.

"MRS. G. A. B."

Thank you. The baby walker asked for has been received. I print your kind offer to give some other mother in need of one an opportunity to make application.

Wants Electrical Material.

"I am a boy of 16 and have been sick for quite a while so that I cannot go to school for five or six months. I wonder if any readers have some electrical or wireless parts that I might have. It is lonely in the house without anything to do. I will pay postage or express charges. R. J. F."

Who has just the things to keep this 16 year old boy from being too lonely these next few months?

An Invalid's Chair.

"I have an invalid's chair for some one on your list who needs one.

Donates Old Magazines.

"I have a last year's complete subscription to one of the current weekly magazines and some miscellaneous periodicals that I offer to any one who will call for them, as I am not in a position to deliver them. M. M. A."

Some one will indeed be thankful for this opportunity.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

HATS OF THE SEASON.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Take a hat box with you, and let the other baggage go." It was a wartime measure recommended to me by a friend when I was discussing ways and means for taking some decent looking clothes with me into Switzerland. It was at the time when you were allowed one piece of baggage on the trains, and this only in case it took up no more room in the baggage rack than the width of your body occupied in the compartment seat. People were talking about the prospective evacuation of Paris and were wondering how much baggage they could carry with them. "If I could only rescue one thing, it would be my hats."

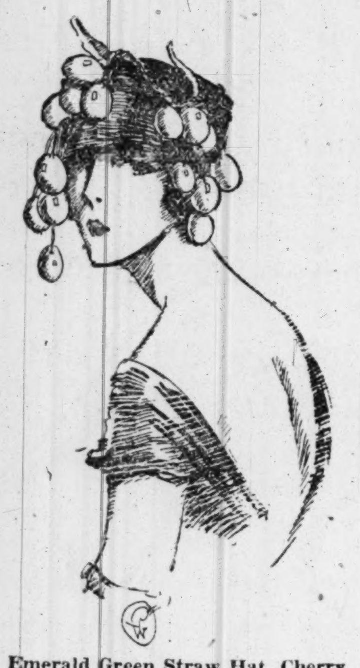
The same speaker uttered the two above statements. "If you can change your hat once in a while, you can feel chic enough in any old dress."

I think that I fully concur in the statement if it is only slightly amended. In a Paris hat, made by one of the artists of the craft, I would feel dressy in a costume made by any nationality, even the English. What a piece of work they are—how high in conception, how perfect in detail!

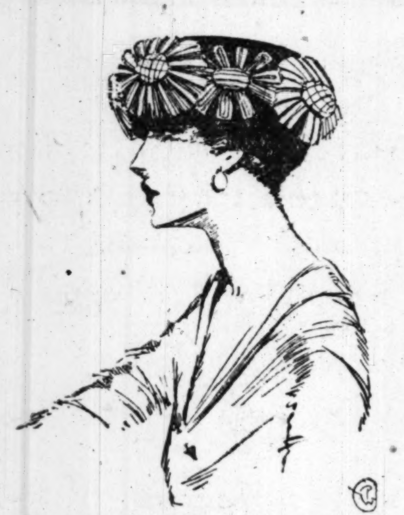
"What are those things?" said one of the mistresses of the art of hat making one afternoon as I sat in her shop. I was idly tapping one jade ball against another. She motioned her marceled head in the direction of the gentle sound they made.

"My hat pins," I answered carelessly.

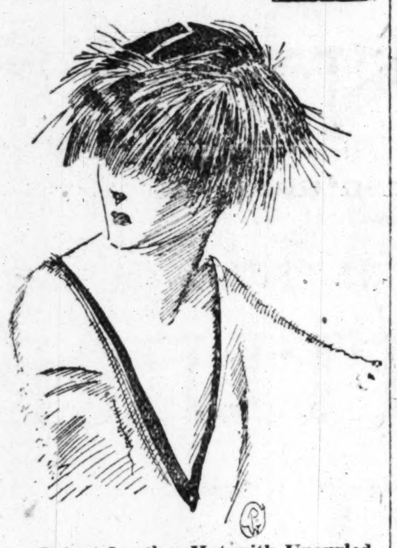
"And who is that makes your hats that you find it necessary to employ the hatpins?" Her voice fairly undulated in the swell and the contrast of her indignation. "Never does a hat pin go into one of my hats with my knowledge and approval." Never has a hat pin gone into one of her hats that she has made for me. In Munich last month I wore one, and with the men's hats soaring out over the street car tracks, as the streets waved before me, my unpinned hat never moved on my head. Munich, you may remember from your ancient history of before the war, is the windy city of Europe; I think my hat from its feeling of security on my head could have stood a stronger test. It could have made the corner by the flatiron building in March—I am sure of it.



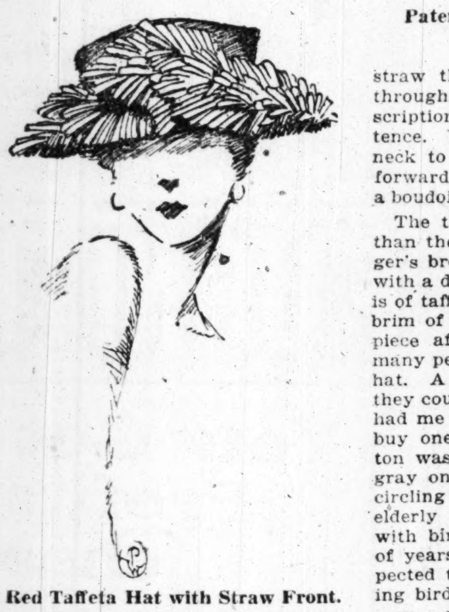
Emerald Green Straw Hat, Cherry Trimmed.



Black Hat With Yellow Straw Flowers.



Patent Leather Hat with Uncurled Ostrich Plumes.



Red Taffeta Hat with Straw Front.

[Sketches by Porter Woodruff.]

Of the accompanying hats, one belongs to the queen of Spain and the other three to me. The queen of Spain's is the one with the heavy cherries on it. She chose it and several others from a set of twenty-five sketches sent to her by Lewis. Have you a milliner with whom you would risk a mail order business? Many people in Europe order their hats exclusively by mail.

This one is stunning. The cherries are as big and as heavy as blue damson plums, and they are the same color. But why should I essay to describe it when the artist has done so much better a piece of work at it than I?

"A cherry hat is the name of it," so his description ran, "but what they are like are blue damson plums that turned turquoise. They're as big as eggs, and heavy, and are on a foundation of emerald green of fine straw. They are placed carelessly—or carefully—to hang over one eye and the ear opposite. The designer thought it would be a naïve touch to have one little bit of something natural on the hat, so he stuck a little green leaf high on the right side, in the shade of green in which leaves grow on trees. The cherries are exotic."

As for the lady in profile, even the cab horses of Paris are arrested in their business of dragging one foot after another to stare for a moment at that hat. It is of black taffeta, circled with yellow flowers made out of sippers' straw, flattened. Of course, you know what is sippers' straw—it's the straw that you sip your soft drinks through. As for the rest of the description, it is completed in a sentence. You begin at the back of your neck to put this hat on, and draw forward. When in place it rests like a boudoir cap, closely circling the head.

The third hat is bright red, lighter than the cardinal's robe and the tanager's breast, and just too bright to go with a deep coral necklace. The crown is of taffeta, and the triangular shaped brim of straw, patiently laid in place, piece after piece, by hand. A good many people have asked to try on that hat. A good many people have said they could use one like it. One woman had me take her round to the shop to buy one, and then decided that Boston wasn't quite up to it. She got a gray one with little hand made birds circling it. She said she thought every elderly woman of Boston had a hat with birds on it. She was a number of years under the age limit, and expected to be the only woman displaying birds made by hand.

The fourth hat is of patent leather trimmed in uncurled ostrich plumes, skillfully arranged to tickle your cheeks and get in your eyes, and other wise interfere with comfort. But it is quite smart. Lucie Hamar made this and the two preceding. This one she is trimming in many cases in ostrich plumes arranged exactly as here, but in all the colors of the rainbow.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

HOW TO MAKE RECIPES.

SOMETIMES we think "the world do move," and then again we are sure that if it does it is backing down hill, and then again it is moving so far up, aeroplane like, that only a few can possibly get into the procession, but we can all have that ambition.

This is apropos of two recent experiences. The first was at a girls' high school in California where the principal, once a practicing physician, had had the hardest kind of work in getting the subjects introduced that would justify the supposed character of the school. And marvelous to relate, it was two women, once school teachers, who objected to the introduction of sewing and cooking, into that school. They did not consider these subjects dignified. Now what do think of that, in this day and generation? If they had been merely up with the mode they would have known that every fashionable boarding school in the country has in the last ten years introduced these subjects; at least I know many of the most select have.

The principal of this school was trained in prescription making, and he says that a recipe is nothing but a modified prescription. Having an eternal interest in such things, he reads all sorts of prescriptions such as those for cooking, those for home beverage making so much the vogue at present, beauty prescriptions, etc., and he says that it would be impossible to put up or make anything from them in one case out of every three. He particularly cited the beverage prescriptions.

Make and Break Recipes.

While the man's views were most interesting and sound, there was no cooking going on when I was there so I journeyed to one of the great institutions of higher learning thereabouts, where the work in home economics is as advanced as any in the world. Here the young women students make and break recipes. They are supposed to have had high school cookery and a year of high school chemistry as a prerequisite.

By the way, I might have seen 500 girls sewing at the high school mentioned, and when I went to the extension office of the university I found that the item of instruction in the great work among farm women in the different counties of California, the most popular at present given, by home demonstrators, is that in sewing and the making of hats. The farm women love the work in millinery, as what real woman would not, and are turning out creditable hats to defeat the H. C. of head coverings.

In all this work in home economics the great body of women are just where the girls of fifty years ago were in music. They love to study pieces at once, or paint a plate with the help of a teacher, and straightway call themselves china painters.

Object of Home Economics.

Now the whole platform laid down by the head of the higher work in home economics in the university is this—I took it down word for word: "The object of home economics is the bettering of the home, which is always connected with sentimental associations, therefore this has been attempted in a sentimental and direct way. But that is the wrong way. It can only be indirectly and scientifically."

But, after all, this is the direct one, in the end, far the most direct. In some of the larger institutions not only do the girls in the higher classes manage a real home for months at a time but they take in children and care for them, and the main care of a child pertains to its feeding.

The highest classes in home economics deal with physiology as intimately as any classes in the medical school. They study the chemistry of the body, and then of foods, and, combining the two constantly, they learn how to eat to maintain health over long periods of time and how to ward off almost every one of the diseases that beset humanity merely by correct eating. In other words, they know what foods do. I constantly meet people who talk about their bodies as though they were sticks of wood, though every atom is jumpingly alive and fighting for its life. If nature was not as prodigal in human atoms as with grass we would not last long as we pursue our unintelligent physiological way.

Students Develop Recipes.

In the study outline of the university course in home economics headed "Food Preparation and Tests" it says: "No recipes have been included, since it is the object of this, as it should be of all cooking courses, to make the student independent of and critical toward cook book recipes. Cooking directions and type recipes are developed by the students from the study of the properties of food outlined and a card index of such recipes accumulated."

But by studying some of the outlines for this work we might think we had what amounted to a recipe, and it would be to any woman who had studied a few fundamental principles—for instance, such as the relation of wet to dry, of alkaline (soda) to acid (sour milk), say, etc. Here is one:

"The essentials for quick breads—biscuits, muffins, gems, etc.:

"[a] Liquid; watery solution, such as milk, water, water of eggs.

"[b] Leavening agent; carbon dioxide from baking powder, soda and sour milk, soda and molasses; fermentation of yeast, air or steam inclosed by egg white.

"[c] Fat: None, or varying amounts of butter, lard, etc., to enrich and increase 'short' or brittle texture.

"[d] Flour: To supply gluten (framework) and starch (colloidal mass).

"[e] Sugar, salt, etc., to provide agreeable flavor."

Rules for Cake Making.

The outline for cake making looks much like the above and, of course, the sooner any home cook relates her bread and cake making, not going on considering them entirely unrelated performances, the faster she can get experience that will make her a better cook. What she learns with one ought to help her in the other. This cake outline is:

"The ingredients of any cake are:

"[a] Watery liquid: Water, milk, or cream, water of eggs.

"[b] Leavening agent: Baking powder, soda and sour milk or cream, beaten eggwhite—air.

"[c] Fat: Butter or other pure fat, cream or milk, egg yolk.

"[d] Flour.

"[e] Sugar and flavoring."

Were there space I might give some of the ideas developed in making recipes for breads and cakes in the laboratory. But do you not see how learning, as we might say, the scale of cooking ingredients and their chords, or relations, one to another, we have simplified cooking? If a time for using substitutes comes again we shall not all of us be so much at sea as we were.

Do you want ALL BRASS —or a porous zinc-lead casting?

CORNETS are made of brass because brass gives the best tone of any metal. Sonora tone arms are ALL BRASS (drawn to shape by enormous hydraulic pressure) for the same reason.

Most makes of phonographs have castings made of zinc and lead for tone arms. These castings are porous, brittle, give an inferior tone and are used because they are cheap!

THE INSTRUMENT OF QUALITY

does not and will not use castings for tone arms. Every part of Sonora is of the finest quality, helping to produce the magnificent tone that makes Sonora The Highest Class Talking Machine in the World. Insist on an ALL BRASS tone arm in whatever phonograph you buy.

Do You Look As Young As You Feel?

MAYBE because you feel fine you fail to notice as others do the little lines stealthily forming in your face. Take care of your skin now.

Try this simple formula—"A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a very little rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of Elcaya face powder over all."

CRÊME ELCAYA

is a delightful, non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream that makes the skin like velvet.

How to Use the Patterns

A PATTERN of a pretty dress, suitable for morning or afternoon wear, is No. 9,365. If used as a pattern for a morning dress, gingham or percale will make up well, and it will need no trimming, while for an afternoon dress, fancy collar and cuffs and perhaps a belt will make it dressy looking, and, of course, the material will make a great difference. Then, too, the vest, tops of pockets, the corners of the collar, and upper sides of the cuffs can be embroidered, and the result will be a most attractive gown.

The skirt is in two pieces, the pockets are made and set in, and the front side of the pocket across the top is sewed to the skirt, which is cut out to follow the shape of the front side of the pocket across the top.

The vest is narrow and straight, and while it really needs no other decoration than the buttons, it could be made to fasten inyisibly and then embroidered, or a design done in beads.

Who would ever guess that the attractive garment, No. 9626, was a one piece apron? But it is one of those slip-on aprons, dressed up with a ruffled, surplice collar, extending into a sash.

The apron is easy to cut and make, the main points needing care being under the arms and where the collar finishes being sewed to the neck of the apron. These kimono sleeves will sometimes tear out under the arms, and to strengthen the seam there, clip it where the curve comes, and then hem a bias strip of the material over the seam, letting the strip extend a little beyond each end of the curve. Or else set a gusset in. This is really the better way, and a gusset cut from a two inch square will be none too large.

The collar is notched to show where it comes to the ends of the neck opening, and exactly at these two points the collar must be notched in as far as the seam, and then from that point on the two edges of the collar are seamed together.

It would not be a bad idea to save the collar and sash pattern to use on a thin summer dress. Made of crisp organdie, and edged with tiny ruffles, as the pattern shows, it would transform a simply made summer gown into something most attractive, particularly if the tiny ruffles were used also on the cuffs and pockets.

No. 9632 is a pattern of a shirt waist or blouse, and would be a good model for a business girl to choose. The back comes over on the front at the shoulder seams, and the fronts are gathered into the shoulders, a feature that is unfailingly becoming. Then, too, the rather unusual looking collar is another good feature, for it can be left open, as shown in the large picture, or the left side of the collar tucked in and the right side brought over and fastened with one large button, transforming it into a becoming style to wear on the street with a suit coat.

UNCLE JIM'S STORY

THE ELEPHANT AND THE MOUSE.

SUCH a sunny morning it was when the parade of the greatest street fair ever seen started out.

"Umph, umph," snorted Longa Trunka, the elephant, as Kimbo, all dressed in his green trousers and red coat and cap scrambled on his trunk.

"Don't forget what I told you about that family of mice under the barn door. It is pa mouse, I think, who never takes his eyes off me."

"But what scares you so about a mouse?" squeaked Kimbo. It was the funniest thing he ever heard—a huge elephant like Longa Trunka afraid of a mouse.

"I don't know," said Longa Trunka, solemnly. "But when I see one of those four legged scurrying little mice running around I just want to start running myself as fast as I can and never come back."

"Well, don't worry," piped Kimbo, and all of a sudden he felt very proud and big and important. "I will protect you."

The parade had started. The band was playing. The clowns were running ahead. Little white rabbits were hopping along. Dogs and puppies dressed up as men were pulling carts driven by green eyed kittens.

"O, this is such fun," squeaked Kimbo, and he was so excited that he couldn't sit still, but kept running up and down Longa Trunka's great black trunk.

"Umph, this isn't much fun for me," snorted Longa Trunka. "I'd much rather be out in the jungle chasing tigers and wolves and lions."

"Ha, ha," laugher Kimbo. He was about to make fun of Longa Trunka, talking about chasing wolves when he was afraid of a mouse. But he did not say it. Longa Trunka could squeeze him too hard with just one twist of that trunk.

"Stop your chuckling and watch out for that mouse," grunted Longa Trunka. "We are getting near to that abrn."

They were near the barn now and little Kimbo squinted his monkey eyes. But look as hard as he could he saw no sigh of a mouse.

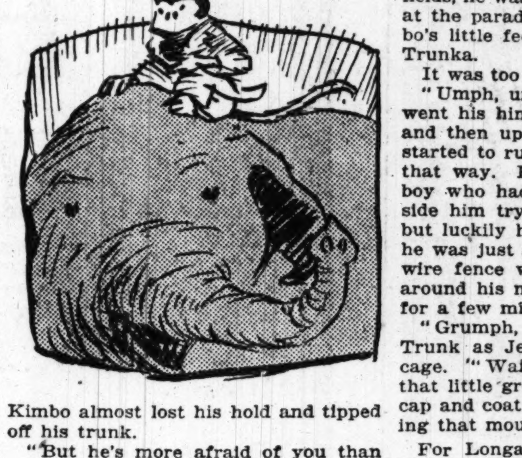
"What's the matter?" he squeaked, for he felt Longa Trunka begin to tremble all over.

"Look at that—over by the barn door," whispered Longa Trunka.

Yes, there was pa mouse, a little gray thing, sitting hunched up against the barn door and watching the parade in a curious, frightened way.

"That mouse—why he wouldn't hurt a flea," squeaked Kimbo.

"Perhaps not, but what on earth would I do if he should take a notion to start towards me and run up one of my legs?" And Longa Trunka shuddered and shook so now that Kimbo almost lost his hold and tipped off his trunk.



"But he's more afraid of you than you are of him," cried Kimbo.

The parade was moving on and on. front of the barn now.

"Is he going to come at me?" asked Longa Trunka in a very weak voice for a big elephant.

"I should say not," cried Kimbo. "Just watch me." And before Longa Trunka or any one could say a thing he had scrambled down off Longa Trunka's back and was rushing pell mell at poor pa mousie.

Now what Kimbo did he meant for the best, of course. He meant to chase the mousie away and show Longa Trunka what a wonderful brave monkey he was.

"He will think I am the bravest monkey in the world," thought Kimbo, "and when little boys throw peanuts at him he will save some of them and give them to me."

Everything would have been all right, too, if pa mousie had only run in the right direction. But he ran just the wrong way.

"O, dear, that dreadful thing is coming at me!" he piped to himself and thought of ma mousie and the whole family of mousies under the barn door.

Pa mousie was so scared now he had no idea at all what he was doing. And instead of running away from the parade and disappearing into the cornfields, he was so scared he ran straight at the parade, scuttling between Kimbo's little feet, and straight at Longa Trunka.

It was too much for the elephant.

"Umph, umph!" he snorted, and up went his hind feet straight in the air and then up went his front feet. He started to run first this way and then that way. He knocked down a little boy who had been running along beside him trying to feed him peanuts, but luckily he did not hurt him. And he was just about to rush into a barb wire fence when Jerry threw a rope around his neck and held him tightly for a few minutes until he was quiet.

"Grumph, umph!" raged Longa Trunk as Jerry led him back to the cage. "Wait till I get a chance at that little green monkey with the red cap and coat and I'll finish him. Chasing that mouse straight at me."

For Longa Trunka thought that Kimbo had chased the mouse right at him to give him a scare and he made up his elephant mind to get even.

"I never forget anything," he grunted again and again as he went to sleep that night to dream of paying back Kimbo and punishing him as he deserved.

As for Kimbo, he was made to go to bed without any supper because he had been naughty and jumped off the elephant's back during parade.

"And I was only trying to be helpful," squeaked Kimbo to himself as he went to sleep a wiser and a hungrier monkey."

"After this I am certainly going to mind my own business."

DOING OVER A GIRL'S ROOM.

GET out your paint pot, mother, and prepare a surprise by redecorating the girl's room before she comes home from boarding school. Wonderful transformations can be made with nothing more than paint and cretonne. So appreciative are girls nowadays of the value of pleasant environments that many of them ask to have their rooms redecorated as a graduation gift.

Youth calls for a style of its own—a certain naïveté, a fresh sweetness and simplicity—that is as unmistakably young-girlish as a ribbon bow in the hair.

Girls like decided changes. So if the room has been dominated by blue last year let light yellow or rose predominate this season.

It is not much of an undertaking to paint old furniture and odd pieces of various sorts of wood can be made to live together in peace and harmony. Old surfaces must first be roughed up. This is done by applying varnish remover and taking off the surface, or by sandpapering lightly, or even by rubbing over with wood alcohol. The main object in roughening the surface is to give "tooth" enough for the new paint to hold to. In painting follow general directions that will come with whatever brand of paint you select. Paint thinly applied, left to dry, and laid on in two or three or four successive coats is far more successful in result than if applied thickly in one or two coats.

Another trick is to cross the brush strokes. That is, if the strokes are laid on horizontally in one coat, work them perpendicularly in the next. This insures smoothness. Highly glossed finishes are not approved—thick varnish, high polish, etc., are removed from natural wood and refinishing is done with fresh stain (walnut is most popular) and a flat tone varnish that sinks right in, leaving no gloss.

Wash fabrics are correct for girls' rooms—exception is made in favor of taffeta, rather sparingly used.

In the accompanying sketch the bed was newly bought and the rest of the furniture painted and upholstered to go with it. The little bed without a footboard is oyster green, ornamented with a rose and darker green leaves. The bed cover is made of green, cream, and rose plaid gingham. The curtains are of green chambray over cream voile. The dresser and chair are oyster green. The big chair is upholstered in tan and green striped linen and the rug is olive.

Here are several simple schemes:

Mauve rug, blue-gray furniture, white and gray striped walls with pin lines of pink between the stripes, gray woodwork, gunmetal colored floor, pink under white Swiss embroidered spread and covers, little pink satin baby pillow trimmed with French flowers on top bed pillow, pink silk lamp shades.

Ivory white furniture, light gray-blue walls. Yellow tarlatan glass curtains with overdraperies of striped blue and yellow cretonne, blue-green floor covering with darker blue painted floor, deep blue bowl filled with violets.

Daffodil yellow, rose pink, and violet make a charmingly youthful scheme.

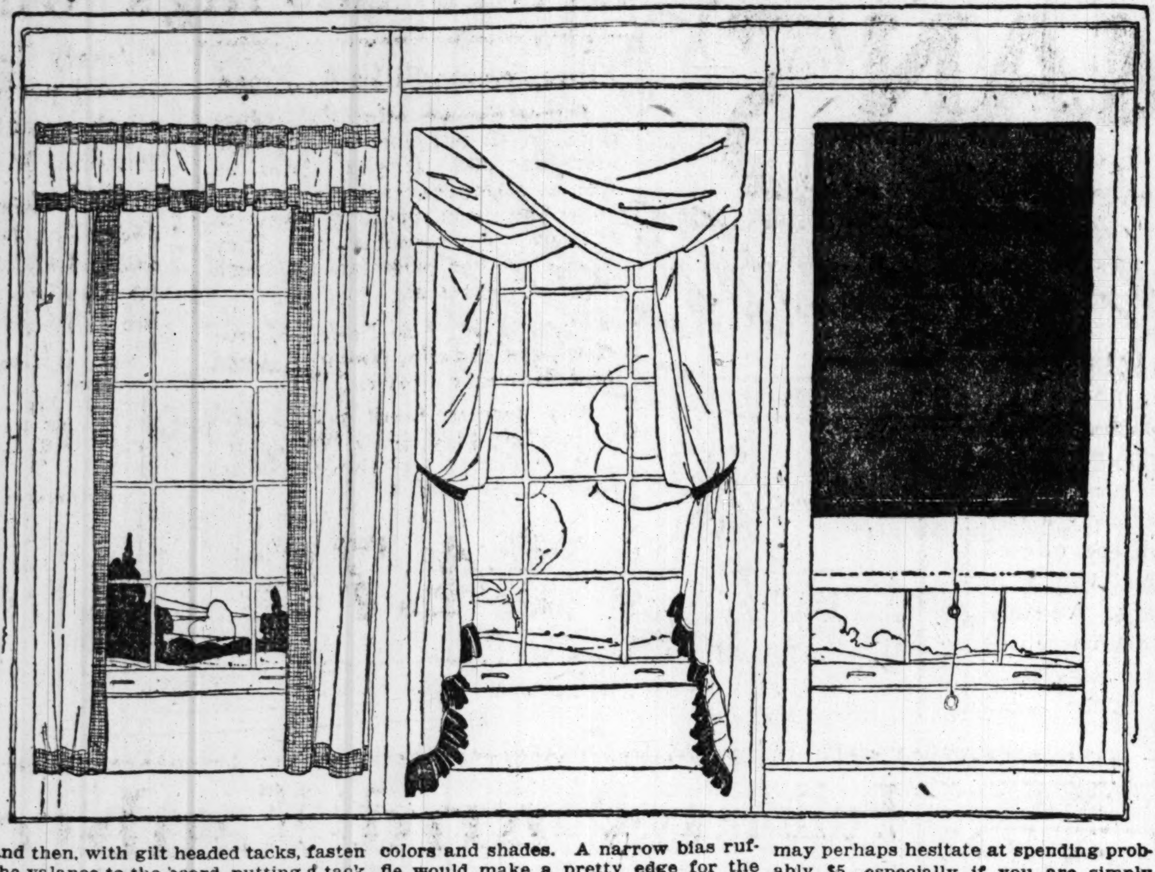
Practical and Fancy Needlework

By Clotilde



CURTAINS FOR SUMMER.

THERE are not many women who do not naturally love to make pretty and attractive things for their homes, and it seems as though there is never a time when something does not need "doing over" or being replaced by something new. This time of year a woman naturally begins planning on things that will be needed for the summer cottage, or if she lives in a house it is a satisfaction to make everything possible to save money and at the same time make the rooms homelike and attractive.

Curtains add to or detract from the general appearance of a room almost more than any other one thing, and today when nothing is inexpensive it is sometimes a problem how to accomplish all one wishes to.

Have you ever made curtains of cheese cloth or unbleached muslin? A good quality is essential, and shrinking must be allowed for, but they are wonderfully pretty and durable. One width will make a curtain, and in cutting the lengths measure so they will just escape the floor and allow for a 2½ inch hem at the bottom.

Then lay a hem down one edge (it will be the front edge), one inch wide, and for trimming cut strips on a true bias or percale, gingham, or any wash material you choose in a plain color, matching the color of the room. Make these strips, when both edges have been turned in, 2½ inches wide, and baste them across the bottom and up the front edge, mitering the corner and basting it on so the front edge of the strip just covers the edge of the hem.

Then make a valance to go across the top. Finished, it should be 16 or 18 inches deep and have the trimming bands across the bottom at the head of the hem, and across the top, 1½ inches down from the upper edge.

A strip of wood 4 or 5 inches wide and the length of the width of the window will be better than a rod to put the valance up by.

The curtains can be gathered and tacked in position to the board if you don't happen to have the rods, and then the valance should be laid in box plaits 4 or 5 inches wide and 1½ or 2 inches space between. These must be accurately laid and well pressed, and then, with gilt headed tacks, fasten the valance to the board, putting a tack in at the top and bottom of the upper trimming band on the edges of each box plait.

The board should have a hook screwed in at each end on the back and screw eyes should be put in the top of the window frame to hold the hooks.

The side curtains can hang straight or be held back with bands of the trimming material.

A pin checked gingham in pink, blue, tan, or red would make a pretty border if one did not care for the plain material.

Sateen makes beautiful curtains, and comes in a great variety of wonderful colors and shades. A narrow bias ruffle would make a pretty edge for the sateen, and instead of cutting the curtains straight across the lower edge, let the outside come nearly to the floor, and then cut the bottom on the bias, running up toward the front edge 10 or 12 inches.

A draped or gathered valance will look well.

Scrim or cotton crash with a border in Russian embroidery in one or several colors is pretty, and bureau covers can be made to match.

Sometimes you will have, say, a tan or brown shade in a bedroom where a white will look much better, and yet if you have to buy the new shade you may perhaps hesitate at spending probably $5, especially if you are simply renting. A good home made substitute is to buy Indian head cotton, shrink it well, and tear it off to the right width for the shade. Then overhand in shallow, even stitches down the torn edge, and then overhand back over the first sewing. This makes a tiny cross stitch on the edge, and is perfectly flat and at the same time keeps the edge from raveling. Then finish the shade top and bottom. It can be easily taken off and laundered when necessary, and is good looking. If you need a dark blue inside shade also, dye some Indian head the desired shade and make the same as the white.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Kissed the Boys.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am writing to you for a little advice in regard to a girl whom I went to school with and never knew I loved until just lately, although, as I tell you this, I am not sure whether I still love her after what happened. We were out Sunday night with her and her cousin and two of my boy friends, whom she knows well. So well, in fact, that she put her arms about their necks and kissed them six or seven times, and I think I ought to drop her, don't you? "T. J. B."

Maybe it would be better to try to reform her, T. J. B. If you love her much you must try to make her see that is not a way to get the respect of boys. Maybe she just has never had any one to tell her she should not be so familiar.

Making Him Propose.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 22 years of age and am going with a young man two years older whom I am very much in love with and have reason to believe he is the same with me. He is making a salary far above the average but seems afraid to propose because he thinks I would be happy on less than my father is giving me. Please advise me how I can make him propose. "A. B."

You might tactfully suggest that you could live on much less than you are accustomed to having, but be sure that the money feature is the one that keeps him from proposing.

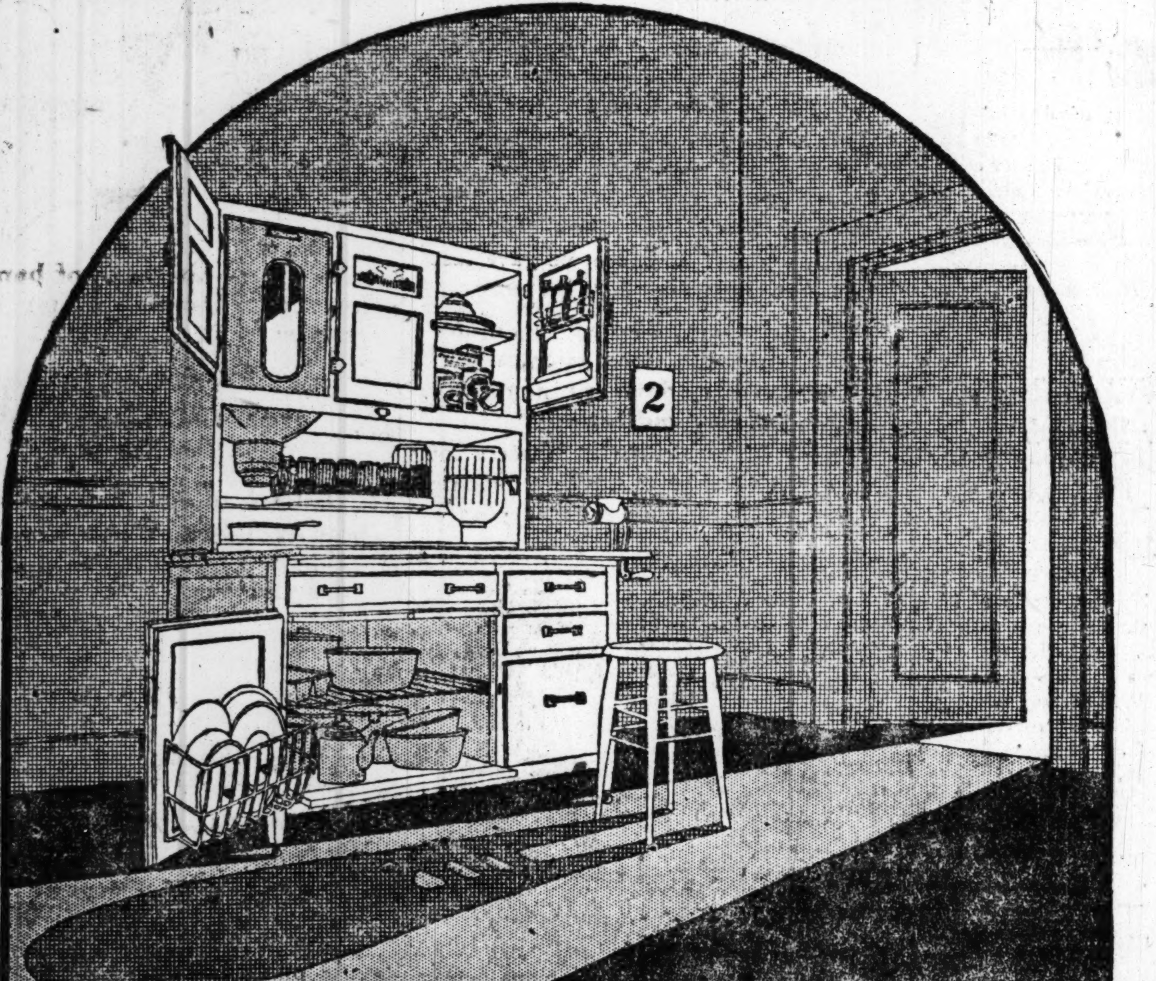
Send a Stamp.

"Dear Miss Blake: I was born September 21, 1896. Will you please send me a horoscope covering this date? "MICKEY."

If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I shall be happy to mail the horoscope to you, Mickey. Don't forget to mention the date of your birth when you write again.

McDougall

THE FIRST KITCHEN CABINET



See the "Auto-Front," the famous McDougall patented wood curtain (above the table top) which drops open automatically. Disappears entirely! Leaves no groove to catch food or dirt. Lifts shut and locks! See it work!

See the tabletop that locks as firm as rock when pulled out. Can't jiggle up and down or rattle when worked upon.

See the handles, latches, catches and hinges, handsome refrigerator-style. Can never break or pull out. Finest used on kitchen cabinets.

See the lustrous finishes that distinguish all McDougalls. Those in oak are Spar varnished—won't turn white despite kitchen steam, heat, or washing.

400 Things Within Arm's Reach

—in a McDougall Auto-Front!

Look around you in your kitchen and the chances are you will find things kept in many places—not compactly grouped. But you're not to blame. You haven't a regular, convenient, always near-to-you place for them all. You need a McDougall Kitchen Cabinet to help arrange them conveniently "for keeps." It will hold as many as 400 things, all hidden from view when you're through, all at your fingers' ends when you're at work. The first kitchen cabinet ever built was a McDougall. The first to possess the latest improvements always has been a McDougall. The first today, in beauty, completeness, sanitation, modern utility and fine character of construction, is the McDougall. Visit a McDougall display this week. McDougalls have scores of supremacies. There is a wide choice as to style and price. You will find just the one you want to buy.

See the high-leg bases that can be swept beneath—sanitary!

See the construction in a McDougall. Built like a good sideboard. All joints mortised and tenoned solidly together instead of merely nailed or screwed. Nothing rickety.

See the steel braces in the eight corners of the base—staunch as Gibraltar! The drawers are dovetailed and mortised like dresser drawers—won't get out of shape and stick. McDougalls are the finest built of all. They do not grow wobbly and creaky with age.

See the flour bins, sanitary, cleanable (latest improved types) with cleanable sifters; see the sanitary glass sugar jar (non-corroding); see all the supremacies that McDougalls have.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

THE parliaments of America and Great Britain may bicker querulously and the ever dubious entente be tossed in the restless mid-channel of international vexations, but so long as our perfidious ancestor sends us such y ephemera as Mr. Maugham's "Too Many Husbands" amity is possible ween peoples otherwise impatient. Mr. Maugham's slender frolic at the incess is of no great importance, save that it is intelligently amusing and t it shows us up. The dementias and loud derangements of "Nightie ght" and "The Girl in the Limousine" seem rather uncivilized when comred to this finished lark; and even the wildest of us chauvinists must admit t the English are better at play writing and play acting than we are. We l perhaps in bizarre mimetics. We are good at cowboys and Chinese ques, but in the representation of real men and women engaged in the rable abnormalities of the stage—truth plus imagination—we are to the of the theater what the kopek is to finance.

"Too Many Husbands" plays a fair game. It does not bat you in the with slap-stick audacities, making you senseless, as is the custom of erican comedy. It recites quietly and with admirable punctilio a preposous episode, covering its funny fallibilities with deft illusion. The English yers, Miss Winwood, Mr. Douglas, and Mr. Grossmith, are faultlessly morous, and so are the Americans, Miss Marguerite St. John and Mr. Fritz illiams. Mr. Rosenthal, who is the trustworthy proconsul of A. H. Woods in s province, says that "Too Many Husbands" had an irresolute beginning the Princess, but that already it has become a prosperous and established titution.

COMPLAINTS are at hand from friends of "The Greenwich Village Follies." Among the grievances contained in them is the suspicion that THE TRIBUNE'S amiable impeachment of that lively show's improprieties is based upon an old fashioned point of view, a habit of judgment outrn by the world's inevitable mutations. These Follies, it is submitted, are e product of new conditions, new tastes, new demands for stimulant in the ater, and they are contrived for and enjoyed by persons liberal enough to be ither horrified nor shocked by the harmless candors and indelicacies of a histicated age.. To write otherwise, it is inferred, is a foolish calumniation a good show, and an amende should be made in the interest of public amuseent. No performance, it is contended, is more vulgar than those who atd it.

In support of this tolerant attitude it must be confessed that though e Shubert-Studebaker has a lavish equipment of exits, no encrimsoned ocents are to be seen rushing through them these evenings in flight from e entertainment's suspected impurities. In personnel the audiences are best the community affords, consisting as they do of us and our friends. d if some of the gestures and observations of Mr. Watts and others seem it bloated to the antiquated spoil-sport, he can absent himself from further tact with them and seek amusement at more pious exhibitions.

Mr. Ziegfeld, it appears to one of these finicky and isolated kill-joys, has e right idea. He provides a maximum of sensual display and as little sheer garity of word and motion as the public will stand for. For instance, . Ziegfeld's Lady Godiva is frankly naked; yet to the prim party who plores "The Greenwich Village Follies," she is not "intolerably offensive," quote Miss Leslie, another protestant), as is the blowsy slattern of Mr. tts' broad travesty. It is said that, since receiving the advertisement of e first night's performance, the Greenwich Villagers have renovated the w in some of its more heedless spots, and that its present aspect, comred to last Sunday night's, is as a primrose to poison ivy. The news of such formation, even if true, need not deter the worldly from attendance, for the y at its mildest will not be damned by any too much daintiness.

Present also in the week's correspondence are the customary notes of prot against the New York managers who adulterate the casts they fetch hither e proprietors of "The Greenwich Village Follies" are accused of this ous practice, and it is pointed out that the performance at the Shubertdebaker is bereft of the ministrations of Miss Bessie McCoy, of Mr. Harry Morton (now a pillar of mirth in "The Sweetheart Shop"), of Miss Cecil nningham (who serves notably in "The Rose of China"), and of Mr. "Bob" wards, an unctuous troubadour who in the opinion of many tourists gave e revue most of its flavor in New York.

As is usually the case, these jealous complainers are unjust in their distisfactions. Our players are a nervous lot. Some of them are averse to ile in alien climes, preferring idleness to banishment; others are irked by e monotony of long-continued playing in a single rôle and seek new employents that their art may not be cramped. A myriad of complexities confront e New York manager when he tries to corral his band for distant journeys. matter how generous the impresario, and most of them are generous, his tors frequently demand improbable concessions before they consent to travel the barren spaces. There are half a dozen stars, for example, who now use to appear in any capitals save New York and London. But excepting se and a few other instances, the suburban casts will be found superior the metropolitan routine; and the habit of substitution is among the least our trials in the theater. "The Greenwich Village Follies" suffers little m defections.

MISS FLORENCE REED has engaged herself to play for five years under the Messrs. Selwyn and will open their new theater in New York in "Wait for Me," by Brougham Tell, an unknown. . . . Bernard Granville will return this summer to the "Follies" of Mr. gfeld. . . . "Page Mr. Cupid" is to see the light in Brooklyn morrow with Ernest Truex, Carlotta Monterey, and Marjorie Gateson the bigger rôles. Owen Davis wrote the book; Jean Schwartz the usic. . . . London newspapers are now hinting that the outbreak ainst Miss Laurette Taylor was a publicity device, invented by her ndon manager, Mr. Cochran, a former American circus man. . . . "The ad to Yesterday," one of the first of the "dream plays" fifteen years ago, s been changed into a musical comedy with tunes by Victor Herbert. It s called "The Green Girl." . . . The management of "Forever After" informs the matinée public that Miss Alice Brady does not leave the Garrick ia the alley back of the theater, but through the front of the house on Ranlph street. The explanation is for the benefit of crowds which gather to ee Miss Brady "in person" and at close range. . . .

Tonight's new play at the Colonial is "Just a Minute," from the pens of e authors of "Listen Lester," Messrs. Cort, Stoddard, and Orlob. Miss Mabel Withee and Percy Pollock are the best known of the players. . . . Andrew ombes and "June" showed few signs of popularity at the Olympic and ey moved elsewhere last evening. De Wolf Hopper in "The Better 'Ole" ters tonight for a second season in Chicago. . . . To Powers' "3 Wise ols" returns this evening, played by Miss Helen Mencken, Claude Gillingater, Howard Gould, Harry Davenport, and others. . . . "The Century idnight Whirl," a spacious cabaret from the roof of the Century theater New York, will be the summer show at the La Salle beginning June 1. . . . "Old Heidelberg," played by Mr. Mansfield when he was at his zenith, to be set to music for the Messrs. Shubert. . . . "Honeydew," Efrem imbalist's essay at musical comedy composition, is not so succesful as Mr. reisler's "Apple Blossoms," and it has limped into New York for repairs. . . . A. E. Thomas' comedy, "Just Suppose," written for Miss Ruth Chattern, but disdained by that young woman, is in performance by Miss Olive yndham. Miss Chatterton has sailed for Europe. . . . "Mary," one of eorge M. Cohan's newest musical comedy enterprises, is regarded in the utlying cities as an old time Cohan riot. Hirsch-Harbach-Mandel is the authorship. . . . Lew Fields will call his new show "The Poor Little Ritz Girl." .. William Rock is producing a revue entitled "The Varieties of 1920," in pposition to "The Scandals," "The Follies," and "The Gaieties" of the ame year.

Spring Producers Given Chance as Season Slackens

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—Spring producers grow active. Some of them, having been denied theaters all winter, and finding the doors of several now standing open, are gayly dragging in the works of art they have had cached in the office safe until such time as they could try them on a metropolitan audience. Frequently they suggest that kind of play—the kind some one might be expected to drag in if the door was left open. Occasionally, howevere, they are sweetened by a bit of drama that is interesting or a musical comedy book that is sane.

Among the five that came in last week is a comedy written by Arthur Richman and called "Not So Long Ago." It goes back to the old New York of the '70s, when the conscienceless profiteer who flourished after the civil war was still a subject of discussion. Eggs were up to 25 cents a dozen and $3 a pair was brazenly being charged by some dealers for a pair of shoes. It is the time of the bustle, the big bustle, that, thrown into prominence by the Grecian bend, stuck out in back of milady's gown like an elaborately ornamental rear balcony. We recall that as late as the '80s we conceived the idea that they really were intended for small boys to ride on.

There is a considerable charm engendered by this particular comedy. for all that it is simply based on the familiar Cinderella theme of the theater. The heroine is the daughter of the equally familiar inventor, who is a little touched in the mind, but abnormally sound as to heart. To help meet the increasing cost of living she has gone to work as a seamstress in the home of the Ballards, very exclusive persons in the Knickerbocker set, though not

By Caroline Sanborn.

"OUT OF THE STORM" is the film presentation of "The Tower of Ivory," by Mrs. Gertrude Atherton. Between the author, the director, and Barbara Castleton you are shown a picture drenched with melodrama. There is scarcely a moment when some one isn't almost falling into grave danger, or almost being caught, or almost dying.

And Miss Castleton seems fairly to revel in these "almost" situations. She is radiantly happy when she stands at the edge of a damp and watery grave—in a good shipwreck scene, by the way—singing "Abide with Me" to quiet the frightened passengers. Or when, in her dressing room in London, she sends her titled English lover away, letting him think her already married.

Here is the rôle of the little American girl with the beautiful voice, who succeeds in singing her way from the gutter to the castle. No one can dispute that she does it with finality.

The rest of the cast take themselves with much less seriousness. John Bowers plays a creditable young Englishman with a decided code of honor and great determination. And Doris Pawn and Ashton Dearholt have a lot of fun being thoroughly American in the midst of London society. You'll find several good laughs while they are on the screen.

If you like this kind of romance, see "Out of the Storm." As a whole it is well done, and William Parke has put on some really breathtaking scenes in a really breathtaking manner.

Another favorite, Richard Barthelmess, has signed a contract to appear in D. W. Griffith productions.

Allan Holubar and Dorothy Phillips are working on a new picture. Mr. Holubar, as you may know, is the husband-director of this well liked screen actress.

Movie fans will be interested to know that Douglas MacLean and Doris May, who co-starred in "Mary's Ankle," and other popular pictures, are now working separately.

"The Barbarian" is the title of the first story to be produced by the Monroe Salisbury Players.

Wanda Hawley will appear soon in "Miss Hobbs," her first Realart picture.

nearly so rich as they pretend to be.

Being a good deal of a dreamer, the little seamstress imagines herself the sweetheart of the young man of the house, young Billy Ballard, and each night when she goes home she gathers the other romantic girls of the neighborhood about her and tells them all her experiences of the day. One day Billy brings her chocolates, and one day he invites her to have lunch with the family and his mother and sister are perfectly dear to her. Another time he takes her riding, and there is a possibility that he may take her to dinner at Delmonico's in Fourteenth street.

But the dream is shattered when a rival lover, growing jealous of the Billy Ballard anecdotes, reports to the heroine's father that he fears there is an affair on, and that a certain rich young man is trying to take advantage of a poor inventor's daughter. Whereupon the inventor calls to see young Mr. Ballard to request him to cease his attentions to Elsie—Elsie Dover being her name—which exposes everything and Elsie must admit that she is just a plain little liar. In the end, as may be surmised, young Ballard discovers that true hearts are considerably more than coronets and the princess gets her prince.

The young people most vitally concerned in telling the story are Eva Le Gallienne, for some seasons past the most attractive of the local group of ingenues and the most gifted, though she is just being discovered, and Sidney Blackmer, an engaging youth from the south, who came to prominence first in a road company playing "39 East," and later with Maxine Elliott's brief venture with "Trimmed in Scarlet." These two give excellent performances and much of the charm of the play is due to the attractive quality of their playing.

As an independent producer of plays Sam Harris, who suffered the loss of George Cohan as a partner following the actors' strike settlement, seems to be doing quite well. Both the plays he has brought to Broadway—the first being William Collier and the farce "The Hottentot," and the second a musicalized version of "Checkers," now known as "Honey Girl"—have registered emphatic hits. Of course they have had the advantage of Sam Forrest's direction, and Mr. Forrest worked with Mr. Cohan for years and years, and knows most of his tricks. Still there were many to predict that with the resourceful Cohan gone it would not be easy for his old firm to succeed.

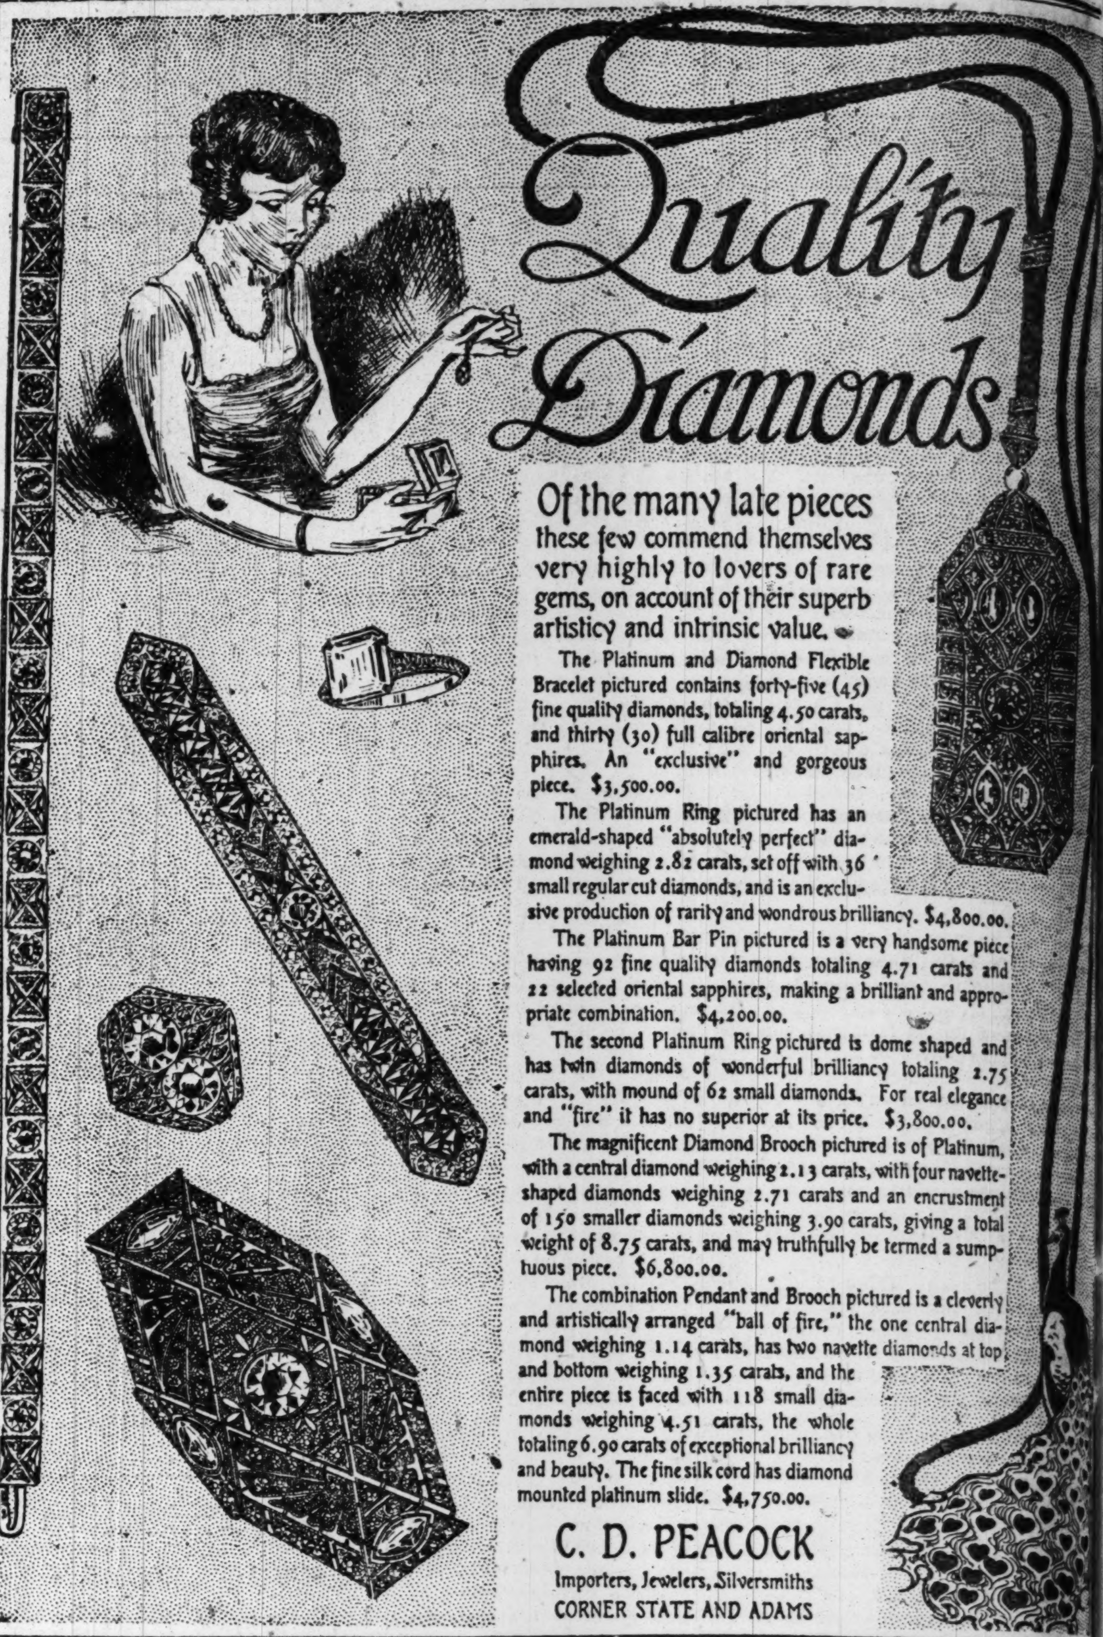
Edward Clark has not done much to weaken the story of "Checkers" in making the adaptation for "Honey Girl"—nothing worse than the substitution of the sweetie title. It still remains an amusing comedy drama, with the ingratiating Dave Graham, formerly of the race tracks, trying to live down his past in the little Louisiana village and succeeding admirably until he falls in love with the daughter of the village banker. After that the cruel father runs him out of town with the suggestion that unless he comes back with $25,000 he need not come back at all, and may as well give up all hope of marrying the heroine.

The fact that the departure follows a snug finale does not appear to rob it of its sentimental hold on the audience. Neither does the injection of musical interludes in the second act, in which the race is run, with Dave's last cent backing the favorite, take more than the edge off the excitement of the incident. In this version he has pawned the heroine's ring in place of her locket, and the gold horse "Remorse," is replaced by the "Honey Girl" of the title. In the last act he returns to the village and saves father's bank from a run with his $25,000.

Years ago, when John Barrymore was learning to be an actor, they put him in the cast that was supporting William Collier in a Richard Harding Davis farce called "The Dictator." He was to play a wireless operator given to the consumption of much liquor, and was to receive $35, or some such sum, as salary. Young John had only played a part or two at that time, having shortly before made his debut in support of Nance O'Neill in "Magda," and he was not at all excited over his prospects as an actor. But he liked playing the bibulous operator, and his success in the role did much to keep him on the stage.

Last week "The Dictator" came back to New York as a musical comedy. It is known now as "The Girl from Home," and Frank Craven has written the book and lyrics to which Silvio Hein has strung an attractive musical score. And if John Barrymore comes in from the health farm where he has been staying to see it he will be pointed out in the crowd as the most promising Shakespearean star in America. A lot of things can and frequently do happen in twenty years.

Charles B. Dillingham has not done as well as usual with this "Girl from Home" production. It is as prettily staged and as generously cast as Dillingham productions usually are, but Craven's book lacks snap and the Craven comedy is not up to par. Heroes and comedians of one sort and another have had so many experiences with South American revolutions since "The Dictator" was written that the complication is a little worn, and in his effort to live up to his responsibilities both as author and star the comedian is conscious of his handicaps.



Of the many late pieces these few commend themselves very highly to lovers of rare gems, on account of their superb artisticy and intrinsic value.

The Platinum and Diamond Flexible Bracelet pictured contains forty-five (45) fine quality diamonds, totaling 4.50 carats, and thirty (30) full calibre oriental sapphires. An "exclusive" and gorgeous piece. $3,500.00.

The Platinum Ring pictured has an emerald-shaped "absolutely perfect" diamond weighing 2.82 carats, set off with 36 small regular cut diamonds, and is an exclusive production of rarity and wondrous brilliancy. $4,800.00.

The Platinum Bar Pin pictured is a very handsome piece having 92 fine quality diamonds totaling 4.71 carats and 22 selected oriental sapphires, making a brilliant and appropriate combination. $4,200.00.

The second Platinum Ring pictured is dome shaped and has twin diamonds of wonderful brilliancy totaling 2.75 carats, with mound of 62 small diamonds. For real elegance and "fire" it has no superior at its price. $3,800.00.

The magnificent Diamond Brooch pictured is of Platinum, with a central diamond weighing 2.13 carats, with four navette-shaped diamonds weighing 2.71 carats and an encrustment of 150 smaller diamonds weighing 3.90 carats, giving a total weight of 8.75 carats, and may truthfully be termed a sumptuous piece. $6,800.00.

The combination Pendant and Brooch pictured is a cleverly and artistically arranged "ball of fire," the one central diamond weighing 1.14 carats, has two navette diamonds at top and bottom weighing 1.35 carats, and the entire piece is faced with 118 small diamonds weighing 4.51 carats, the whole totaling 6.90 carats of exceptional brilliancy and beauty. The fine silk cord has diamond mounted platinum slide. $4,750.00.

Concert Going Without an Interpreter

By W. L. Hubbard.

THE AMERICANIZING of our recital and concert programs is an advance to be desired and encouraged. Much has been done in that direction since the world war began, but still further betterment is possible. Reference is not made to the character and origin of the musical numbers given place on programs, but to the manner in which the programs themselves are prepared for the public.

Time was when to read and comprehend a recital or concert program was almost as difficult as to read and comprehend the bill of fare—then styled "menu— in a fashionable hotel or restaurant. The latter conglomeration of foreignism usually resulted in the patron taking a chance of some item of whcih the price was intelligible and hoping that the food brought him out of the unknown would be something he wanted and could eat.

The understanding of a song recital program was only a little less difficult. Knowledge of Italian, French and German was essential and oftentimes a bit of Russian, Norwegian, Bohemian or Hungarian was desirable in order to evolve clarity from complexity. It was difficult to know what anything was about and only the printed "book of words" with its more or less exact translations of texts being used, supplied desired insight into what the song was about. If the recital was an instrumental one no inkling was possible as to what the selections meant and fantasy and imagination were there let run riot.

Foreign Tongues Disappearing.

But with the war and the armistice came a change. The American language found sudden discovery at the hands of countless musicians as well as other residents of this big land of ours, and the realization seemed simultaneous with the discovery that the American language was quite a usable one and not wholly without beauty and merit. German vanished completely from our programs. Italian and French remained, but in diminished quantity.

The using of more and more of American text, especially in song recitals, resulted in ever increasing number of titles being printed in American, and programs thus took on such intelligibility that at the present time a mere American can look over a list of recital or concert selections and actually get some conception of what he is going to hear.

The good work has been begun, but it should be carried still farther. There is every reason why titles of songs and of all instrumental compositions should be programmed in the American language. Long ago it was considered proof of wide culture and evidence of great scholarship to interlard all writing and oftentimes conversation with words or phrases from the Latin or the Greek. Later these two languages fell into less of fashionability, and French came to the fore with occasional preference shown for Italian or German. When this craze was at its height the understanding of a novel or a book of essays was difficult if not positively impossible were the reader not conversant with one or more of the foreign tongues. And if the "cultured" one deigned to converse, the foreign phrase jumped so constantly and persistently into his speech that the listener oftentimes was perplexed as to what was really being said.

Scholar Uses Single Language.

This display of learning, which in reality was nothing more or less than pedantry and pretense, has in large measure been done away with, and with excellent results. Sensible people have come to realize that the parading of familiarity or unfamiliarity—with a foreign tongue demonstrates not so much wealth of understanding as poverty.

The true scholar is able to express himself in a single language and shows himself the scholar by using that language in its purity and by choosing such words and phrases as will make him comprehensible to the most unlettered of his hearers. It also is realized that to render the person to whom you are speaking uncomfortable by employing words he cannot understand is no sign of good breeding or of social superiority, but is snobbery, pure and simple.

Thus the American language has come ever more into its own and the cultured person now is not only able to express himself adequately in that language, but he shows his culture and refinement by using it in its purity and by his selection and skilled employment of its words and phrases.

Keep Familiar Names.

Thus it has become "good form" to write and speak American, and the complete Americanizing of our concert programs should be speedily accomplished. There is no necessity for the banishing of such titles as Allegro, Adagio, Scherzo, and similar established and accepted musical terms as applied to movements of compositions or to the compositions themselves. For the general public understands the meaning of such words. Neither does it seem advisable to translate the names of familiar operas, such as "Il Trovatore," "La Traviata," "La Sonnambula" and their kind, for their names are so familiar that change would result probably in more of confusion than a clarity.

New operas, however, might with good reason be Americanized as to titles. There is every argument in favor why, for example, "Il Tabarro" should be announced as "The Cloak," why "L'Amore dei tre Re" should be "The Love of Three Kings," and why all kindred operas, wherein the title is closely connected with the meaning of the drama and wherein the drama itself is a new one, should have their names Americanized and thus made familiar to the American public.

Americanize Titles.

For concert and recital programs, all titles of songs and all descriptive titles of instrumental compositions were well printed in American. These titles are the key to the meaning of the musical works themselves. They were chosen by the composer to give suggestion to his hearers of what he had in mind when he was composing. To deny to the hearer this key to the import of the work is to hamper and obstruct understanding and appreciation of the work itself.

Many of the Debussy piano compositions for example are mood pictures conceived and created with a definite, purposeful picture or scene in mind. The music is intended primarily to present in tones this picture or scene and has value chiefly only in so far as it succeeds in such presentment. Not to understand the title is to be all at sea as to the meaning of the composition, and unable to judge as to the artistic merits of the work done by the composer. For how is estimate of his artistic success possible unless full understanding of his purpose and intent form fundamental standard for that estimate?

The auditor is left groping in the dark, the composer is placed at disadvantage, and the interpreter is hampered and obstructed in the getting of his art message home to the public. And what is true of Debussy's works is true of every song or instrumental composition with title. Every interest points to the need and advisability of printing such titles in the vernacular.

Let the names of all songs, the titles of all instrumental compositions, and the subtitles where such exist, be programmed in American. The foreign names and titles can follow in parenthesis if desired, but the use of the American equivalent is a true essential. Such a course will help not only in intensifying interest during the actual performance of the numbers themselves, but will do much toward fixing in the minds of concertgoers compositions which they enjoy and wish to hear again. True culture is based on understanding and understanding is best obtained by the American through the American language.

Misuse of "Diction."

And speaking of American and its use, a letter from a fair reader—she is feminine and therefore must be fair—takes us to task for the misuse of the word "diction." Her letter reads: "Permit me to suggest that you, Miss Weber, Mr. Moore, and Mr. Hackett look up the word 'diction.' You will find it means 'choice of words' instead of 'enunciation.' Otherwise your criticisms are appreciated."

Without wishing to drag any other worthy colleagues into the range of critical censure, we can but wonder why Mr. Rosenfeld and Mr. Devries were not also included in this kindly instruction. They, too, have been users of "diction"; their readers are many and their powers great. They should not be permitted to wander unguided afield and astray amid linguistic darkness. Generously, therefore, we pass on to them the admonition and share with them the helpful information.

In justification, however, of our misdoing, it may be stated that for many a year and long "diction" has been used in the vocal world to describe the manner in which the words of a song are sung and enunciated. The teaching of "diction" is the teaching of clear and accurate pronouncing and enunciating of the text by the singer. Therefore it has come that a vocalist's "diction" is described as being good, bad, or indifferent.

MISS EDITH ALLAN in "MARIGOLD FROLICS" PHOTO © STRAUSS-PEYTON STUDIO.

It is true that the lexicographers have not included this signifiance and use of the word in their definitions—we know because we looked at once, hoping to find our fair reader was wrong!—but usage has perhaps warranted in a measure its employment, and either on that must me of the critical brother—and sister—hood take our stand for justification, or else have recourse to "enunciation" for the meeting of future needs. In any case, the fair reader is thanked.

Announcements of concerts and recitals will be found on page 11 of this section.

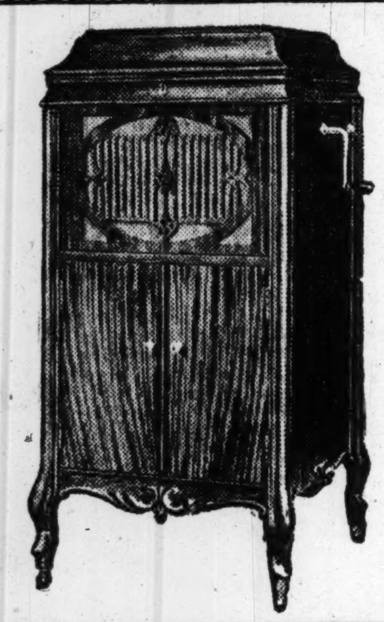
PHONOGRAPHS AND RECORDS



Method of Reproduction
THE story of the Brunswick Method of Reproduction is, to Music Lovers, the sweetest story ever told. For, it is the story of True Music. That method is the right application of musical and acoustical laws and accomplished by means of the Ultona and the Tone Amplifier.
The ULTONA—plays all records truer, finer, sweeter. It is not a makeshift contrivance but involves a genuine principle of sound. A slight turn of the hand presents the right needle, diaphragm and weight for playing any record.
The TONE AMPLIFIER—is an oval shaped vibrant tone chamber. Like the sounding board of a fine piano or violin it is made entirely of wood and free from metal. Thus it gives the requisite tonal volume and eliminates all harsh, thin, metallic sounds. It meets all advanced acoustical and musical laws.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MRS. WARREN CRAWFORD PHOTO KOEHNE

MRS. GILBERT E. PORTER III. PHOTO LEWIS-SMITH.

Miss Hester Wentworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Wentworth of 2636 Lake View avenue, became the bride of Warren Crawford of 1945 Prairie avenue, son of Thomas Warren Crawford of Galena, on May 8. The service was read in Trinity Episcopal church and was followed by a reception at the residence of the bride's parents.

Many of Chicago's most attractive girls marry out of town men and move to other cities, but just as many Chicago men take for brides belles of other localities, and so Chicago has its share of charming young matrons. One of the newest and most welcome additions to the younger married set is Mrs. Gilbert E. Porter III., who formerly was Miss Anne Horry Kilby, daughter of Gov. and Mrs. Thomas E. Kilby of Alabama. Her marriage to Mr. Porter, who is the son of Gilbert E. Porter of 942 Lake Shore drive, took place on April 7 at Anniston, Ala. After a month's honeymoon Mr. Porter brought his bride to Chicago, and for the summer they will be at the home of his father.

From Crude Ferry to Link Bridge in the Span of a Life

By Mme. X.

HAVE you crossed the Rush street bridge on foot lately? If so, didn't you feel it trembling under your feet, and hear its sighs penetrating the roar of traffic? As, nearby, its gigantic successor, the boulevard link bridge, sprang into its amazing, spectacular, double span existence, the old Rush street swing bridge, relic of an epoch as dead as the times of the Ptolemies, knew that its day was done. No more will it hold the world record among its kind as a bearer of traffic. The refuse pit already yawns for its tired old beams and timbers.

All the great of the world who have visited Chicago in the last thirty-five years have passed over it, as well as millions of nameless wayfarers. Now only the grimy, noisy vehicles devoted to commerce will cross by it, and even they will be but temporary passengers, waiting until the lower roadway of the new bridge is ready.

Within the memory of Chicagoans now living the Chicago river was a lovely stream much used in winter by skaters and in summer by those fond of rowing. Green banks sloped to the water's edge. Trees hung over it. Fish swam in it. Wild ducks made it a way station in their semi-annual flights.

Rope Ferry in 1856.

Until 1856 Rush street was connected with the south bank by a hand over hand rope ferry. Mrs. Charles J. Barnes, a daughter of one of our noted pioneers, Nelson Ludington, remembers this ferry. Her home was nearby on the corner of Lake street and Michigan avenue.

Across the way lived another well known pioneer, Silas B. Cobb and his numerous family. His daughter Louise, now Mrs. William Walker of Beverly Farms, Mass., was a contemporary and playmate of Mrs. Barnes' in the "fifties" of the last century. In the Ludington back yard, which was bounded on the east by the lake, these two little girls, assisted by "Willie" Walker (later married to Miss Louise Cobb), made sand pies, or they wandered to the ferry, where the ferryman would let them ride back and forth if they in return would work the ferry for him. They could just reach the rope and used to delight to pull the flat bottomed boat from one side to the other.

In what other great city can you find such a contrast in the span of a life as that ferry of 1856 and the boulevard link bridge of 1920.

Leaving for Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes are more completely identified with Chicago's many and varied epochs than almost any one the writer knows, so that it is with real regret that the latter views their departure next month for (euphemistic term!) "an indefinite sojourn in Europe."

When six months ago they sold their home in Erie street, Mr. Barnes parted with the pride, joy, and preoccupation of his life, his remarkable collection of books. He had made a specialty of first editions and fine bindings. This library is in New York awaiting the autumn sales.

Parting with this possession seemed to sever a tie between the owner and Chicago. As he himself expressed it, "it was like losing a beloved child," so he and his wife, like many other bereaved mortals, are going to seek oblivion in foreign travel.

After a few weeks in Paris they plan spending the summer mortoring in Switzerland, and will probably spend next winter somewhere in France.

Somewhere in France.

Somewhere in France, chiefly up along that famous northeast section, over 70,000 Americans—men in the first flower of youth—lie sleeping. Their quiet slumbers make yours possible—that is, possible up to a certain point. It should not be possible for you to sleep if, owing to your indifference or preoccupation, a single one of those graves is without its floral expression of national sentiment. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE gives you the opportunity to testify to your gratitude.

You can never pay your debt to these men, but at least an infinitesimal interest on that debt can be deposited May 30 on those little symmetrical mounds hallowed by their dust. If we forget them, our smug souls deserve to perish in the material security they won for us.

Ex-Farmerettes Hold Reunion.

Yesterday, at the University of Chicago, there was an interesting reunion at luncheon of workers in one of the most striking and worth while experiments born of war conditions—the land army farm at Libertyville. This enterprise, conceived and carried out by Mrs. Tiffany Blake, successfully demonstrated, in the spring, summer, and autumn of 1918, the possibilities and value of women as actual and practical farmers.

All over the country at that time there was a similar movement, but Mrs. Blake's idea had deeper, more far reaching intentions than any expressed by the national land army promoters. Not only did she wish to provide fresh labor for our basic industry, agriculture, at a time when it seemed possible that our man power might be needed to fight for our national life, but she had the larger vision of developing in women such interest in farming by actual acquaintance with its technique that the raising of crops should become as popular and profitable a means of livelihood for women as typewriting or stenography. It was hoped that students from her farm would go forth with a special message to women born and reared on farms to show them that tilling the soil, tending flocks and herds, raising chickens, and kindred pursuits was a highly specialized and desirable calling, requiring intelligence of no mean order; not, as many now think it, a dull, heavy, uninteresting form of labor.

Such a crusade, if carried out to its fullest extent, might change the whole relative aspect of country and city life. If a farmer's wife, daughter, or sweetheart could take an intelligent interest in his work, there would be less of this surge from the farms to the towns.

Discover the Country.

The discovery at the Libertyville farm of the country by the city born girls, who forsook offices and colleges to study practical farm work, was delightful to watch. Enthusiastic, clever, quick, and untiringly diligent, almost to a girl they made good. Not one of them returned to city life without a larger vision of the desirable possibilities of out of door, country existence. Many of them continued to devote at least part of the year to it, an instance being the four young women, members of the Libertyville farm, who this year are repeating their venture of last summer when they ran the Otsego Golf club in New York state.

This is an enterprise run by Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who owns this club, which is near her summer home in Otsego county. These four girls—all college girls, I believe—take entire charge of the golf course, the grounds, the gardens, the clubhouse. They keep the putting greens like velvet; cut the long grass of the nine hole course; raise in the garden all the vegetables they cook and serve in the delicious meals they provide in the clubhouse for the members and guests. Furthermore, they regard the whole affair as the jolliest kind of summer holiday, and will return to their city office work in the autumn sunburned and rested and with their pockets full of money.

A Man of All Work.

How clever and wise some of these college girls are! There's Mrs. B., a former Chicagoan, living in Chestnut Hill, Mass., who has replaced her querulous, temperamental man of all work by a vigorous, capable, good looking young college woman. This new incumbent looks, they say, uncommonly attractive in a big sombrero hat, with her blue overalls tucked into neat, knee high boots. She takes entire care of Mrs. B.'s large garden; cleans, oils, and keeps in order the automobile; cleans and polishes the family shoes; washes the windows, and even helps wait on table when there's company.

To a well educated person no labor is "infra dig." She has two pretty rooms over the garage; gets $95 a month and is—or was when last heard of—entirely satisfied with her job; also giving a satisfaction as complete as her own.

It is a reflection on the bucolic sentiment of the community in which she works that it was thought advisable to provide her with a handy little revolver, not as a protection against too amorous swains, but against the jealous resentment of country bumpkins who refused to do the work she has undertaken, yet express by jeers and sneers their objection to her doing it.

Smith Girls Aid Fund.

By their fruits ye shall know them, so, while on the subject of college girls, turn your thoughts for a moment to Smith college, the largest of its kind in the world. Since it was established in 1875, being made possible by the $393,000 left for this purpose by Sophia Smith, it has graduated 7,741 women and trained thousands more. Beginning forty-five years ago with an enrollment of fourteen students, today its undergraduates number 2,011.

It was the first college to send a women's unit to France, where its work is still continuing. In the six units Smith college sent overseas for war relief work, there were 294 workers.

So, when this famous institution goes after a $4,000,000 endowment fund, to be applied to teachers' salaries, dormitories, gymnasium, laboratories, and other purposes, we should all chip in. Chicago's quota of this fund is $252,000 and the Chicago alumnæ are going after it hot foot. It must be made up by June.

In Evanston the Barn Swallow waffles are bringing in the shekels fast. Sunday dinners, served by Smith girls at the Barn Swallow, are offered to passing motorists and if you're on a Sunday excursion today, headed north polewards, drop in there for your midday meal. The Smith college tea shop on the Lake Shore drive gave us an excellent "dish o' tea" ten days ago, with French pastry and toast.

Plan Piano Recital.

For Tuesday evening the indefatigable Smith girls are organizing a charming recital, to be given by Josef Lhévinne, the famous Russian pianist, in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel at 8:15 o'clock. He is "considered to be one of the two greatest pianists of the world" (which is the other?).

Such a musical affair is especially appropriate, as Smith was the first women's college to give music a place in its curriculum.

Among the boxholders for this musical are the Mesdames Moses Wentworth, Stanley Field, Levy Mayer, E. L. Ryerson Jr., George A. McKinlock, F. L. Ridgeway, George Lytton, and A. B. Dick.

The headquarters for the drive are in the Venetian building. Miss Ellen Holt is the Illinois chairman for the fund committee, while Miss Clara Culver Gilbert is chairman of the publicity committee and nowadays the publicity committee is a "sine qua non" of every enterprise.

Swedish Baron in Steel Mills.

We Chicagoans don't realize how much our expression of the practical machinery of our modern and somewhat materialistic civilization interests people of other nations. They come here singly and in groups to study us and our methods.

A recent and quite unnoticed investigator was a young Baron Gerard de Geer, a member of one of the oldest, most aristocratic families in Sweden. He was a practical investigator and spent four weeks in Gary in the steel mills where he passed as Ole Olesen, a common laborer on the night shift. From 6 p. m. to 6 a. m. he did every kind of elemental hand labor, wielding a heavy sledge hammer, shoveling coal into the furnaces, helping with the big caldrons of molten metal; all the time studying the mechanics and the industrial methods of the mills. He is now on his way back to his native land to introduce there some of our ways of handling men and metals. He spoke most highly of the conditions which surrounded the workers in the Gary steel foundries. In the departments in which he worked he found mainly Spaniards. Is this because these mills are open shop?

The reason for these remarkable values is logical and most convincing. These prices are not reduced prices—but represent underselling values on merchandise just purchased!. There's a difference in pricing apparel already in stock—and arriving shipments—as the wholesale market has recently experienced a drastic decline. MRS. GEORGE A McKINLOCK PHOTO—LEWIS-SMITH

MRS EDNA R. SOLLITT PHOTO SYKES

Mrs. George A. McKinlock is chairman of the campaign to raise $1,000,000 for the work of the Young Women's Christian association for the girls and women of Chicago. "I have worked for the boys and given my best for their comfort in the hard days of war, and now, before I retire to a more quiet and normal life, I want to know that I have also done my duty to the girls," Mrs. McKinlock said in taking up the work.

Mrs. Edna R. Sollitt is chairman of the committee on arrangements for the recital to be given by Josef Lhévinne, the Russian pianist, on Tuesday evening at the Blackstone hotel for the benefit of the Smith college endowment fund.

All Together Now, for Chicago Girls, Is Drive Slogan

"A BEST seller—the best that has been offered to Chicago for a long time,"—is what John W. O'Leary, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, calls the 1920 program of the Young Women's Christian association, which Chicago will be asked to "buy" for $1,000,000.

In other words, the plans that have been made by the association for the coming year will take a million dollars to carry out—and it's "All Together Now, for Chicago Girls," as the slogan of the campaign goes. These plans, as has been told before, include provision for more adequate housing of the business girls of Chicago, wholesome recreation for them, and extensive educational opportunities.

To go into one of the branches of the Young Women's Christsian association where the girls congregate is like going into some college hall—there are laughing, chattering girls here and there in groups, others reading in quiet corners, some dancing together, some in classes in the gymnasium, or splashing in the swimming pool. And, too, there are men coming and going, keeping appointments with their friends there, stopping for visits or attending some of the entertainments.

Any one who wants a surprise is invited to go to the central branch of the Y. W. C. A. at 59 East Monroe street, or to the west side branch at 101 South Ashland boulevard, or to any of the other centers where these groups meet, to find charming home surroundings and opportunities for wholesome play and work that girls love, and every chance to make friends.

The test of the work of the cause for which the million dollars is to be raised in the campaign is the fact that business women throughout the city are forming some of the most active teams to secure funds. Employers of large numbers of girls are in many cases releasing the captains of these teams for intensive work in the campaign, so convinced are they of the value of this work for business women, in increased health, joy in their daily work and in varied interests in life.

Mrs. George W. Dixon is chairman of the business women's teams, and has on her committee Mrs. William R. Folsom, Mrs. Reuben W. Newton, Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, Mrs. G. P. Reid, Miss Lula Gordon, and Miss Gladys Spry. Mrs. George A. McKinlock is general cairman of the whole campaign, and has on her committee Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Carl C. Bullock, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, Mrs. N. W. Campbell, and Miss Emma F. Beyers.

Headquarters are at the Hotel La Salle, and the campaign, which opened with a workers' dinner on Friday evening, will continue until Tuseday, May 25. There will be a team workers' luncheon every day of the campaign at the Hotel La Salle, when reports of the money raised will be made.

It is because today, just as the day this great establishment was founded some thirty-eight years ago, we buy and sell strictly for cash, that today, just as every day throughout the long vista of years, lowered prices are always reflected here first. Here is the first place you find that the manufacturer, the importer, the jobber, the converter and the wholesaler turn to dispose of accumulated stocks of merchandise—and so here is the first place Chicago turns to share in the savings. During the past few weeks we have offered some unusual values, the sale of the Morris Woolf silks, the sale of tricolettes, the sale of dresses and gowns, the sale of smocks, the sale of aluminum ware, the sale of Empire Carpet Co.'s rugs and linoleums, etc., etc. But, beginning tomorrow, these events are all to be surpassed, for merchandise has been offered us in greater lots than in many a month, culminating in this Midseason Reduction Sale—where you will find that practically every section of the store has sensational values—yes, truly phenomenal values—to offer; values that outstrip any of other years—here or at any store in America. Study the values on this page, and remember that these but scratch the surface of the vast assemblage of bargains this event provides.

No mail or phone orders can be filled for advertised items.

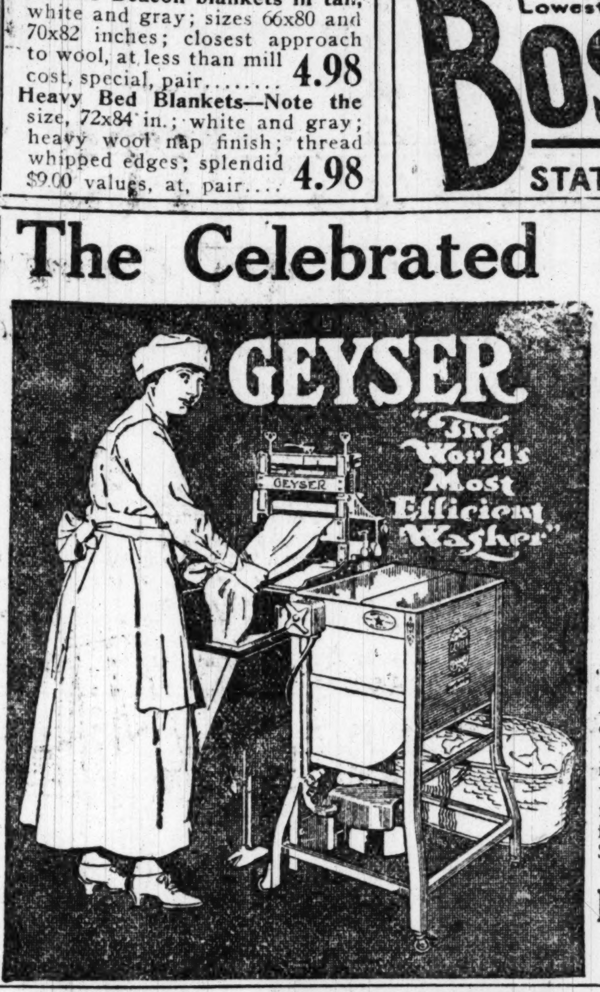
The Celebrated "Geyser" Electric Washing Machine at Only $135



GEYSER
"The World's Most Efficient Washer"
GEYSER

Eighth Floor—Dearborn Street

The first time this famous machine has ever been sold a penny under price, and possible now only because we purchased them months ago at the lower prices than prevail at present. The firsts lots of our purchase have just been received, and, as always, you share every saving we make, and so, while they last, at a saving of $30—over 18 per cent of the price generally asked at other stores—a worth while saving, indeed.

What Makes the "Geyser" Wash So Thoroughly?

The high speed propeller, under the revolving clothes cylinder, forces a veritable GEYSER of hot, sudsy water through and through the meshes of the fabric—driving out all the dirt. Clothes come out of water as clean and white as when rubbed on a board, and with no wear and tear to the clothes.

Just the Washer for Apartments

Quiet in operation. It takes little more floor space than a chair. Entire tank and cylinder space used, instead of only about one-third of it. The reversible electric wringer can be removed and the washer used as a flat top table in kitchen or bathroom. All moving parts are inclosed. No bolts or rivets to catch on clothes. Very easily cleaned and simple to operate. Clothes can be removed without scalding hands. By means of the "Geyser" swinging wringer it is possible to wring the clothes from the washer to the rinse water, then to the bluing water and finally to the basket without moving the "Geyser" washer from its original position before the tubs. See the washing demonstration in our Homefurnishing Goods Section and learn its many points of superiority.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Bible in Schools Up for Hearing in State Convention

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

SHALL the Bible be read in our public schools? If so, shall the reading be made compulsory? Those are the questions being deliberated upon by the constitutional convention of Illinois, now in session in Springfield.

The present state of opinion in the convention, according to a prominent Chicago member, is strongly in favor of having the reading of the Bible permissive, but against making it compulsory.

In the churches there are champions of both ideas. The Chicago Church federation has gone on record as desiring that the reading be compulsory. Its memorial on the subject provides that as religion, morality, and knowledge are necessary to good government, ten verses at least be read daily; that the reading be compulsory on all teachers; that choice of the passages to be read, as well as the version used, rests with the individual teacher; and that the reading be without any comment whatever.

At the meeting of some 2,000 Illinois Protestant ministers in connection with the interchurch world movement in February a motion practically identical with that of the Chicago Church federation was passed.

On the other hand, there have been other methods suggested. Dr. Henry F. Cope, secretary of the Religious Education association, takes the position that "such compulsory reading would violate the principle of separation of church and state and would introduce "sectarian teaching" by the very reading of the Bible in public schools. He had resolutions to that effect passed by the Hyde Park Ministers' association. The northeastern deanery of the Episcopal church, at a recent meeting at St. Peter's church, passed a like resolution.

The Rev. Dr. Norman S. Richardson, head of the department of religious education of Northwestern university, has come out strenuously against the compulsory idea.

"Making Bible reading in the public schools compulsory is pedagogical foolishness," he said in an interview. "It is nonsense to suppose that the mere reading of the Bible will teach anybody anything. There is nothing magic about the Bible; we must get away from that medieval idea. Its reading should be left on a voluntary basis. That is the best pedagogy. Religious education is much bigger than reading the Bible. We of the church must develop our methods so that we know how to teach. Reading the Bible is not religious education."

Dr. Benjamin Otto, formerly pastor of the Morgan Park Baptist church, succeeds Dr. Frank L. Anderson as secretary of the Chicago executive council, who was elected president of the Polyglot school in New York. His resignation from the Morgan Park church takes effect today.

Why and how churches should advertise will be discussed at the church advertising convention to be held in connection with the annual meeting of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Indianapolis, Ind., June 7 and 8.

The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey.

The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church, is one of the most enthusiastic advocates of the Young Woman's Christian association and its work in Chicago. He was one of six men delegates to the recent national convention of the association, which he characterized as "undoubtedly the most significant event that has taken place in this country in many months." The high ideals, the enlightened social consciousness, and the breadth of mind shown by delegates to the convention impressed Mr. Gilkey deeply. He is one of the pastors who have consented to observe "Y. W. C. A. Sunday" today in his church, corner of Woodlawn avenue and East Fifty-sixth street. The Y. W. C. A. is a non-sectarian organization.

Many of the ministers of the city will today make a special appeal in their services and through bulletins for the cause of the Young Women's Christian association, which will open an active campaign tomorrow to raise $1,000,000 for the 1920 budget of the association. The association is non-sectarian, and welcomes girls of every creed and race to its various branches. In the central branch of the association alone, which is located at 59 East Monroe street, 13,000 girls each week use its gymnasium and swimming pool privileges, its lounge, club, and classrooms, and its cafeteria. It is in order to continue for the girls these privileges and to provide more extensively for them, that the association is conducting the campaign to raise the money. This evening at the Sunday Evening club Mrs. Emma F. Byers of the central field of the association will speak, and there will be moving pictures of Y. W. C. A. scenes at camp and at work.

The campaign will continue through May 25, with daily luncheons for the workers at the Hotel La Salle, when there will be speaking and reports of subscriptions. Mrs. George A. McKinlock is chairman of the campaign and headquarters are at the Hotel La Salle.

Dr. Pinkston's Foot and Shoe Institution

For the Prevention, Correction and Relief of Foot Troubles

Dr. Pinkston's Triple Combination Last Shoas for Every Foot and for All Occasions--Sizes Two to Twelve, Widths Six A Narrow to Triple E Wide

Ready-to-Wear Combination Last Oxford

Cannot slip at Heel

Never before has any one made an oxford or pump that positively would not slip at the heel or bulge at the side. Foot troubles too numerous to mention are caused by shoes being too large in the heel and instep.

Dr. Pinkston's combination last shoes are better than the standard shoes because they are TWO WIDTHS NARROWER IN THE HEEL, ONE WIDTH NARROWER IN THE ARCH, AND TWO WIDTHS WIDER THROUGH THE BALL OF THE FOOT than any shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel PREVENTS THE SHOE FROM SLIPPING UP AND DOWN. The narrow instep KEEPS THE FOOT FROM SLIDING FORWARD. The broad ball gives PERFECT FREEDOM OF THE TOES. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend entirely upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot.

FOOT TROUBLES

affect the body in many different ways. The feet SWELL, BURN, ACHE and have SHARP PAINS under the HEELS. The BALL of the FOOT is SORE and FEELS AS IF WALKING on MARBLES, ANKLES become WEAK and SWOLLEN, LEGS CRAMP, KNEES STIFFEN. PAINS are produced in HIPS, SMALL OF BACK, SHOULDERS and NECK. Poor CIRCULATION and EXTREME NERVOUSNESS. DR. PINKSTON can absolutely RELIEVE you of all your FOOT troubles and CURE 90 per cent of them regardless of the nature or condition of the ailments.

Dr. Pinkston Made-to-Measure Shoes

PREVENT, RELIEVE AND CURE FOOT TROUBLES. There are twenty-six bones in the human foot which must be properly supported. Dr. Pinkston examines the foot and knows just where to place the support just as the individual foot requires. Dr. Pinkston makes a special last—a reproduction of your foot—and then builds the shoe over that last, thereby assuring perfect comfort and style. You can make your selection from the finest imported leathers in the world, of vegetable tannage, which prevents the burning sensation caused by acid tanned leathers. The fundamental principle of fitting and making shoes is to know the anatomy of the feet—to know just what bone is misplaced; what blood vessel is impeded, and what nerve is impinged—then to know how to distribute the weight of the body equally from heel to ball and to support the weak places in a way to strengthen them. This is what Dr. Pinkston POSITIVELY DOES.

The Reasons for Its Complete Success

EXHIBIT A—Not a single stick in the entire company.

EXHIBIT AA—They all acquit themselves like REAL PLAYERS.

EXHIBIT AAA—KENNETH DOUGLAS, ESTELLE WINWOOD, LAWRENCE GROSSMITH, FRITZ WILLIAMS and MARGUERITE ST. JOHN, comprising a quintette of principals who are collectively a GREAT JOY and each in his or her particular way a RARE TREAT.

KENNETH DOUGLAS.

KENNETH DOUGLAS

does a given-up-for-dead soldier husband, whose startling reappearance is the bombshell with which the play deals, with fine appreciation and understanding.

ESTELLE WINWOOD

also excels herself—and in a difficult role. She portrays a young, pampered and rather sordid-souled wife, which the audience must need always laugh at, but never with, in a most able and distinguished manner.

ESTELLE WINWOOD

LAWRENCE GROSSMITH

is simply superb as the second or superfluous soldier-husband. His slow, lumbering, heavy-witted endeavors to extricate his wife and himself from the dilemma in which they find themselves lay a heavy burden upon the actor's art, but it never taxes Mr. Grossmith.

FRITZ WILLIAMS

is most happy as an old beau. Never has he done better work. Deft, sure and competent in his every utterance, pose and gesture, he lends invaluable aid to the performance.

FRITZ WILLIAMS

MARGUERITE ST. JOHN

MARGUERITE ST. JOHN

handles a genteel and well mannered but sagacious and material minded mother with great nicety.

Concerts and Recitals

JAN CHIAPUSSO, a young Italian pianist of whom much in commendation has been said and written, gives his first Chicago recital this afternoon in Kimball hall. This program contains the Brahms Waltzes opus 39, the B minor Sonata of Liszt, Hahn's "Revery of Prince Eglantine," the Rameau Rigaudon, Couperin's "Les Bergeries," a Molto Allegro by Johann Schobert, Debussy's Minuet and Sarabande, the "Alborado del grazioso" by Ravel, the Chopin-Liszt "My Joys," and the Balakirew fantasy "Islamel."

Cantor Kwartin, the Hungarian singer from a large synagogue in Budapest, will be heard for the first time in Chicago tonight in the Auditorium. He sang last month in New York at the Metropolitan and attracted such a huge audience that two additional appearances had to be arranged, these being accomplished at the Hippodrome with similar resultant crowds. He will have the assistance tonight of his daughter, who is said to be a coloratura soprano of good abilities. The proceeds of the concert, it is understood, are to be devoted to the food needs in Hungary.

MISS GABRIELLE CLAUS

Gabrielle Claus, American soprano, will be heard for the first time in Chicago in song recital tomorrow night in Kimball hall.

Gabrielle Claus, a soprano from the east whose vocal abilities are said to be far above the average, will be heard for the first time in Chicago tomorrow evening in recital in Kimball hall. She has arranged a program which includes, in addition to the aria "In trine morbide" from Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," the following songs: "A Dissonance" by Borodine, the Dvorak "Songs My Mother Taught Me," Dunn's "Bitterness of Love," Stickles' "Highland Joy," Bliss' "Sonnet XXI.," Mahdah Paysons "Hauntings," the "Serenade" of Brahms, Hue's "I Wept as I Dreamed," Henschel's "Morning Hymn," Goetz's "Melisande in the Wood," Brahms' "The Forge," Schumann's "Thou'rt Like Unto a Flower," La Forge's "Expectancy," Strickland's "Colleen of Mine," and the Rachmaninoff "Floods of Spring." Mary Eckhardt Born will be accompanist.

Vittorio Arimondi, basso of the Chicago Opera company, will give a concert in Kimball hall on Tuesday evening in which he will be assisted by Fritz Renk, the American violinist. Mr. Arimondi will sing operatic arias, his selections including the Sarastro second aria from "Magic Flute," the Lullaby from "Mignon," an aria from Verdi's "Simon Boccanegra," one from "Semiramide" of Rossini, the Invocation from "Robert the Devil," a Cavatina from Rossini's "Cenerentola," and two songs by Denza and Giordani.

Josef Lhevinne, the Russian master pianist, will give a recital in the Blackstone ballroom next Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Chicago Smith college endowment fund.

The Chicago Sunday School association gives its twenty-seventh annual May festival in the Auditorium on Tuesday evening. A chorus of 1,000 women will assist and the soloist will include Lusinn Barakian, dramatic soprano; Lorraine Earnest, violinist; Theodore Ratzer, cellist, and the Imperial quartet. H. W. Fairbanks will conduct, and Francis Moore will be the organist.

The Chicago Operatic quartet, composed of Mae Graves Atkins, soprano; Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto; John B. Miller, tenor, and G. Magnus Schutz, bass, assisted by Amy Neill, violinist, and Edgar Nelson, pianist, will give a concert in Kimball hall next Wednesday evening.

The Central Concert company announces its series of concerts for next season. Wisely the offerings are to be in Orchestra hall instead of Medinah temple, and conflict with the opera season is also to be avoided save for one concert, which falls in January. The dates and soloists announced are as follows: Oct. 4, Renato Zanelli, baritone; Carolina Lazzari, contralto; Grace Wagner, soprano, and Frank La Forge, pianist. Oct. 18, Rosa Poselle, soprano, and Carmelo Ponselle, contralto. Nov. 1, Giovanni Martinelli, tenor, and Kitty Bayne, soprano. Nov. 15, Anna Case, soprano, and Sascha Jacobsen, violinist. Jan. 10, Frances Alda, soprano, and Charles Hackett, tenor. Jan. 24, Toscha Seidel, violinist. Feb. 7, Frieda Hempel, soprano, and Conrad Bos, pianist. Feb. 21, Riccardo Stracciari, baritone, and Mischa Levitski, pianist.

THE NEW HOME OF

McClellan Refrigerating Machines

At Roosevelt Road and Washtenaw Avenue

—PLANT TWO BLOCKS LONG—

In order to keep pace with the ever-expanding use of mechanical refrigeration and the ever-growing demand for McClellan Refrigerating Machines, the McClellan Refrigerating Company has taken over, in its entirety, this great plant. With these greater facilities for production it will be possible to take care of the demand which is exerted on the McClellan Company from all parts of the world.

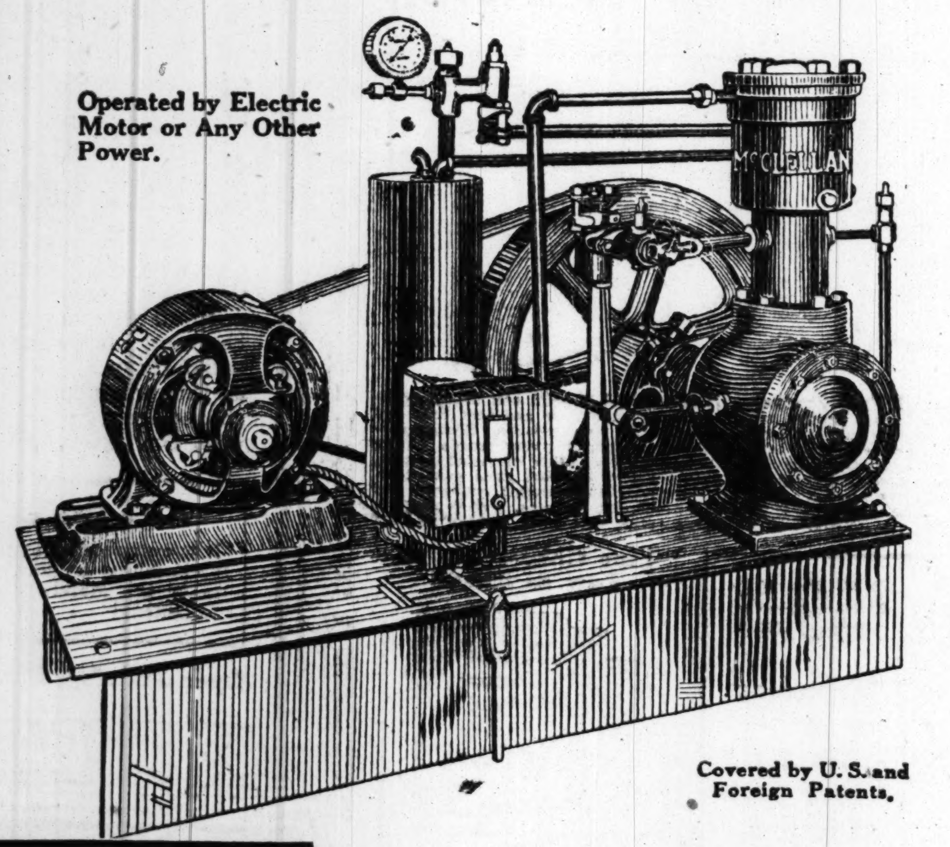
DOMINANCE THROUGH ACHIEVEMENT

Scientifically right in principle, mechanically correct in construction, economically right in low cost of maintenance, proven right through more than five years of satisfactory service on all kinds of installations, the McClellan Refrigerating Machine stands today pre-eminent in the refrigerating field.

All Owners Endorse McClellans

The hundreds of market owners who have installed McClellans state that tremendous saving has been effected through the prevention of spoilage and through the saving of the ice cost. They state that the practical elimination of losses has paid for their machines, that the "cost of operation is less than one-third the former cost of ice"; that their McClellan "requires no attention, is 'fool-proof,' " and that they would rather be without their telephone than their McClellan machine.

Operated by Electric Motor or Any Other Power.



Covered by U. S. and Foreign Patents,

For Homes, Restaurants, Hotels, Hospitals

For the exacting requirements of the home, restaurant, hotel, hospital, or any institution where perishables are kept, the McClellan has proven itself invaluable. For individual or a series of refrigerators, milk-cooling boxes, ice-cream freezing cabinets, water-cooling systems and ice-making cabinets, the McClellan Machine is a constant, faithful, troubleless servant. Its cost of operation has proven so much less than the cost of ice that the saving soon pays for the machine.

Aside from the economy assured by the McClellan, the elimination of ice and the consequent sanitary features are of great value to all owners.

The McClellan Refrigerating Machine will eliminate every refrigerating problem and do it at less cost than you pay for ice.

COMPARATIVE COSTS

Ice Bills Averaging Per Month	McClellan Refrigeration Averages Per Month
$40 to $80	$10 to $20
$80 to $150	$20 to $36

The McClellan is made in six sizes suitable in capacity for all purposes where from 10 pounds to one and one-half tons of ice is being used per day. Produces refrigeration that is perfect for all purposes at less than one-third the cost of ice.

Every McClellan is sold with Our Iron-Bound Guarantee to Give Perfect Satisfaction or Money Back. Sold on time payments if desired.

Chicago Blazing Way for Nation in Truck Field

City Waiting for Rest to Catch Up During Promotion Week

BY J. L. JENKINS.

ACTUAL performance rather than advertising propaganda, industrial results instead of theory, make up Chicago's contribution to the national ship by truck good roads promotion week which opens in every state in the union tomorrow.

Advocates of automobile truck transportation as an adjunct and a badly needed relief to the railroads point to the interesting though little appreciated fact that in Chicago the motor truck has been responsible during the last three months for the continuance of vital building programs in the city.

A score of private truck transport trains have already been established on regular schedules between Chicago and other manufacturing points of the middle west and the east. The "big five" packers have developed truck service along the same broad lines which brought them their great financial success in railroad transportation, and practically every business man of consequence in Cook county has become a fervent good roads advocate from business motives alone.

Thus, instead of entering into the national booster week as a new movement, Chicago business men and automotive dealers generally feel that the city is out ahead in the transportation art and will use the week and its public achievements to further develop their previously organized facility.

Hundreds of people who took part in the Michigan avenue demonstration on Friday expressed astonishment at the big showing made by 500 trucks in the ship-by-truck section of the parade. In this showing, too, Chicago dealers were out ahead of the motor field, for in most cities truck demonstrations this week do not compare in magnitude with the city's preliminary show. In accordance with Gov. Lowden's proclamation and carefully laid plans of the Firestone ship by truck bureau, demonstrations will take place this week in Galesburg, Peoria, Danville, Champaign,, Bloomington, Decatur, and Ottawa in Illinois, and South Bend and Gary, Ind.

The indorsement and coöperation of various organizations and public officials, including the National Grange, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, Federal Board of Education, William G. McAdoo, Senator Capper of Kansas, and Senator Townsend of Michigan, have been enlisted in support of the ship-by truck good roads movement. The direct object of the campaign is to create public interest and promote legislation on the vitall: important question of national high ways, which, if favorably acted upon will result in better roads, which wil in turn serve as a stimulus for pro gressive truckmen to organize and operate a system of motor transports, utilizing the heavy duty trucks for the longer hauls to a terminal, from which point smaller trucks could serve to distribute.

MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

He's Still .Traveling.

While visiting in Nashville, Tenn., my ventriloquist son and I hired a car and driver for a sightseeing tour. In leaving the city we passed a private cemetery where the gravestones were close to the road, and I noticed that our driver put on speed and rolled his eyes toward the spooky looking plot.

I was startled myself to hear an unearthly groan come seemingly from beneath the nearest stone, but turned in time to catch my son grinning before the colored driver put on a burst of speed that nearly threw us out. Then came another groan that seemed to come from the seat next the driver, and a deep voice that said: "Boy, I want you"

That was just before we went over an embankment, and our driver lit running in the road. It was an hour after he disappeared in the distance before we caught a ride back to the city.

L. S.

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper, and address Funniest Automobile Experience, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts cannot be returned.

Accommodating.

"Stop—hey, stop!" yelled an excited looking farmer, running toward the road as we passed in our car. My friend put on the brakes and ran back to give first aid, when the farmer turned and beckoned frantically to a little boy who came from the house to the road and then close to the car.

"Look it over," said his father as the boy walked all around us, "this running machine is called an auto."

"All right," said the boy at last, "I saw enough of it," and we were allowed to proceed.

L. P. S.

Nonstop Run.

My husband and I happened to be down town in a city that had recently passed an ordinance against parking in the business district, when we noticed an acquaintance driving her new car around and around the block. I hailed her in one of her circuits, but she kept right on, nearly knocking me down. "My dear," she shouted over her shoulder, "my next time around I'm determined to see whether the goods in that window is 86 or 87 cents a yard!"

R. T.

Welcome.

The cordial hand of the host is truly extended to the tourist-camper who visits McMinnville, Ore. Here a small but progressive city boasts one of the finest city parks in the northwest. The park, instead of being surrounded by iron grillwork and covered with signs and policemen, has only one sign—that of welcome. For the benefit of visitors who are making camping tours, the park offers a delightful camp ground in which there are shade, water and wood, and a large cement swimming pool, where adults as well as children may bathe.

First Aid, 5 Cents.

In order to give the motorist stalled out on a country road opportunity to get in touch with garages, service stations, or physicians, the Chicago Motor club has suggested a plan of placing nickel telephones on the telephone poles along the highways, one telephone to serve a strip of road a mile in each direction. "This plan is now in use in certain sections of Ohio," says President Hayes, "and would be a boon for the motorists, if put into effect in Illinois."

Coast Delegates Here to Advance Parking System

THAT the autoist may be "at home wherever he parks his car," Lieut. Daniel Sylvester, chief of the traffic squad of the San Francisco police, arrived in Chicago last week. He is missionary for a continental traffic law, which will be identical in all the states of the union, Canada, and in Cuba. Lieut. Sylvester is president of the National Traffic Officers' association. His mission has the support of the association, of practically all Pacific coast police departments and chambers of commerce and of the Safety First exposition, whose manager, C. DeWitt DeMar, accompanies Lieut. Sylvester.

The exposition will be held in San Francisco Aug. 23 to 27. Every large city in the United States will be asked to send delegates to engage in the framing of the continental law. Lieut. Sylvester and Mr. DeMar extended an official invitation to the mayor and chief of police of Chicago.

"The traffic policeman," said Lieut. Sylvester in explaining the proposed law, "can frame a wonderful traffic law —from a policeman's standpoint. Such a law was framed in Los Angeles. It worked splendidly—for the policeman. There was no congestion while it remained in force—twenty-one days. But it killed downtown business because it permitted no parking in the business district. What is wanted is a general nation-wide law, which will be duplicated in Canada and Cuba, so framed as to allow the least posible congestion while doing no damage to business nor causing hardship on the auto driving public."

LINCOLN

"Napoleon had the idea
—'tools to him that can handle them'"
Carlyle

A tremendous investment of time, money and experience has gone into the production of the new Lincoln Motor Car. The vast equipment has had to measure up to those high standards which have given Mr. Henry M. Leland and Mr. Wilfred C. Leland their outstanding position in the automobile industry. It has been a gigantic undertaking, for it was preordained that when production was reached it must be full and continuous.

Now the preparation period is past—the tools are in the hands of those who know how to handle them—and the car will soon be ready for your inspection.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

Hudson Fineness Equals Its Matchless Performance

Aside From the Supremacy of the Exclusive Super-Six Motor, Its Beauty Gives Distinction in Any Field of Fine Cars

Hudson has unremittingly kept the issue of performance to the fore. Not simply because its mastery is indisputable.

Rather because this question is vital above all. It must always be so. It must always be the measure of any car's title to worth.

Hence undue emphasis has never been placed on Hudson's four years' leadership in fine car sales. Largest sales are not infallibly proof of greatest merit. Hudson has no need to offer them as such.

Yet their importance can not be overlooked. Here is the massed opinion of far the greatest number of owners of any fine car in the world. Some are driving the earliest Super-Sixes built—now more than four years old. Some acquired Hudsons but recently. But how unanimously they hold no car can rival it.

What 90,000 Owners Know First Hand

Those who have had their Hudsons longest are perhaps its most emphatic champions. They know it best. They have seen it pitted with triumph against every situation that can confront an automobile. Today their Super-Sixes are giving service, such as is literally beyond the performance capacity of many new cars that cost more.

Certainly no fine car is so highly regarded by such a large following.

Were its position less deserved, could Hudson hold the loyalty of all these? Were its supremacy less decisive, surely five years must have discovered the rightful successor.

But time only brings fresh evidence of Hudson leadership.

Its world records in speed—in power—in acceleration—in hill climbing, have never been matched. Thev are official and its 7,000 mile run both ways across the continent in ten days and twenty-one hours is regarded the supreme endurance feat of motordom. No car ever equalled its time in either direction. Few have even endured to finish. None except Hudson ever completed the two-way trip against time.

See What It Has Done

A Hudson stock chassis holds the world's official stock car speed record of 1 mile in 35 seconds. Special cars embodying the Super-Six principle won more points in a single year of speedway contests than any cars that ever raced.

Now is added the confirming judgment of more than 90,000 owners who daily see these qualities expressed in the smooth, uninterrupted service of their cars.

Thousands admittedly chose Hudson because of its acknowledged prestige as leader and authority in coach design. Hudsons are famous for the beauty and luxurious appointment, not only in America but in Europe, the Orient and South America.

But its chief appeal is in performance.

And Its Unmatched Motor Is Exclusive

And do not forget that all Hudson has done was possible only because of the Super-Six motor. It gave Hudson 72% more power and 80% added efficiency.

The most abusive tests to which a car was ever subjected have failed to find its endurance limit. Could other types adopt it, they might share Hudson's unmatched ability. But Hudson controls it. By right of invention Hudson alone can use it.

It will not be possible to supply all who want Hudsons. So even though you may not want your car for several months, now is not too early to place your order.

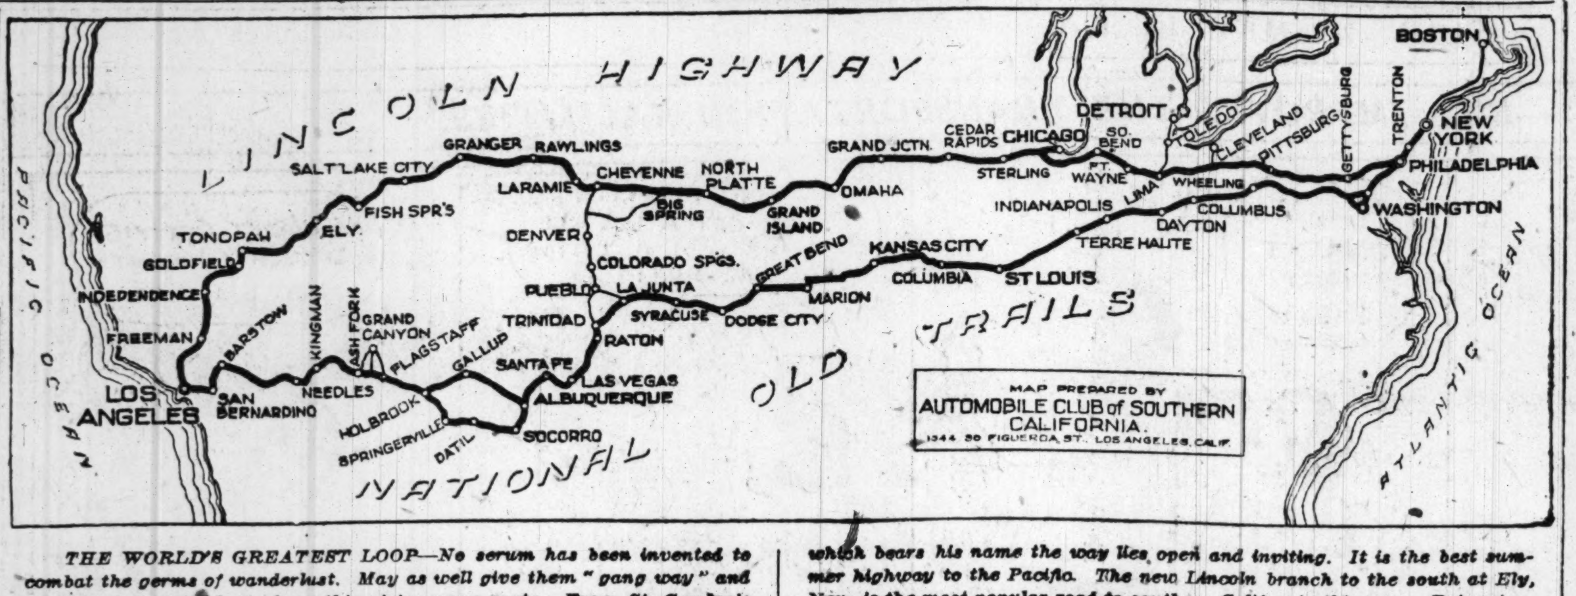
Glidden Tour to Use Lincoln Way Between Oceans

THE contest board of the American Automobile association has announced that the Lincoln highway is to be the official route this year for the famous Glidden tour the annual stock car competition which has always been an event of vital interest to the entire automotive industry.

Officials of the highway association have been working since October to prove the desirability of their route for the cross country run, declaring in the face of strong competition that their road has been developed into the shortest and best route between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

Plans for the year's Glidden tour have not yet been announced in full. The run will start in September.

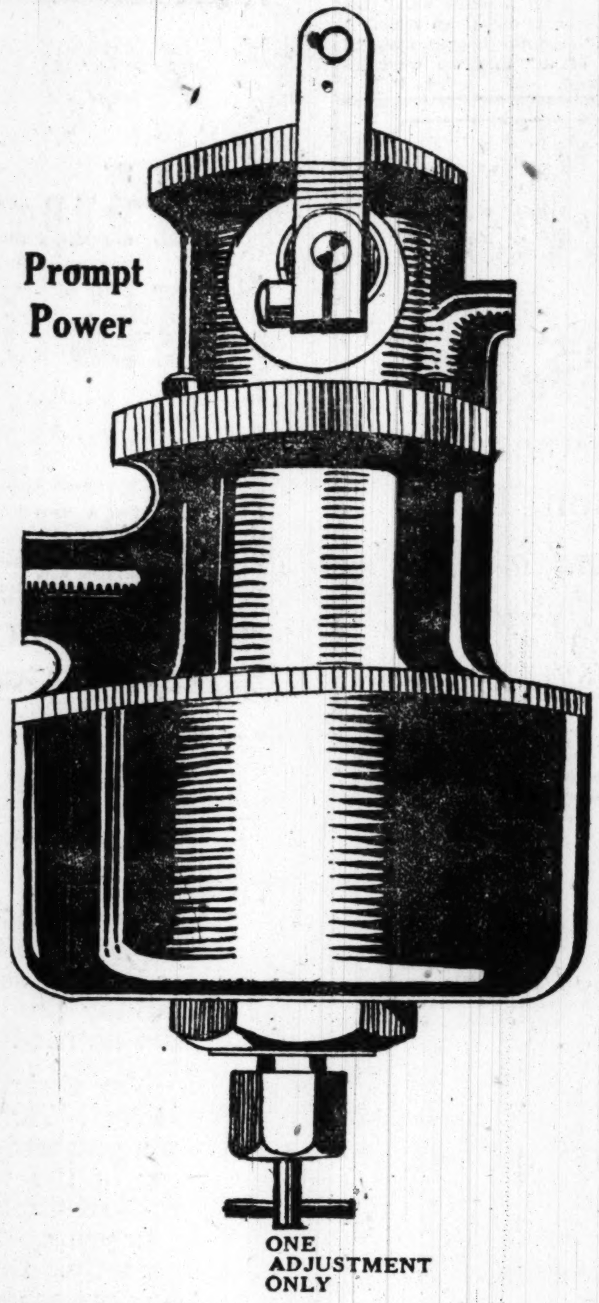


THE WORLD'S GREATEST LOOP—No serum has been invented to combat the germs of wanderlust. May as well give them "gang way" and you'll find it at its best along this picturesque route. From St. Gauden's statue of the great emancipator in Lincoln park to California via the road which bears his name the way lies open and inviting. It is the best summer highway to the Pacific. The new Lincoln branch to the south at Ely, Nev., is the most popular road to southern California this year. Returning, the loop takes the Santa Fe trail, coming home by way of Kansas City.

A Modern Miracle—

GAS BILLS REDUCED ON ANY CAR WITH A

U. & J. Carburetor



THE shortage of gasoline is international. Italy forbids pleasure motoring. Repeated reports, well founded, prophesy another era of motorless Sundays in the United States unless consumption of gasoline is reduced.

You—individually—can cut down your gas consumption, at the same time making your car more efficient.

Think of it! Mileage increased as much as 100%—a much smoother, easier riding car—quicker "pick-up"—more pep and power—carburetor worries and troubles abolished—and gasoline bills performing the marvel of "coming down" instead of "going up."

100,000 Wise Auto Owners Run Their Cars Equipped with the U. & J.

When 100,000 autoists buy, use and keep on using an appliance which they can return without question if it fails to do all claimed for it—don't you think there must be considerable merit to it?

The U. & J. Carburetor is entirely different from any other—it's a new principle worked out in a simple way. Foolproof—no complicated, delicate mechanism—and yet one of the most powerful and efficient agents for reducing your gas bills and taking the "kinks" out of driving.

15-DAY FREE TRIAL MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

We want you to try out the U. & J. Carburetor—we'll take the risk. Test it for economy and efficiency and prove to yourself that it will be a big money-saver. Ready now for Ford, Dodge, Maxwell, Overland, Vim, Dort and all four-cylinder cars. Ready for sixes shortly. Easily and quickly installed with a screwdriver and money-wrench. Furnished complete with all fittings. If there is no dealer near you, write for complete descriptive circular and proof of U. & J. supremacy.

Fleet Owners—The U. & J. will save $100 to $200 per year per truck.

Silent, Smart, Luxurious

AS a result of its mechanical refinement the Grant Six is a singularly quiet car even after thousands of miles of travel. And this is true not only of the motor and other moving parts but of the body as well. It is evidence of the painstaking care with which the car has been designed and the scrupulous nicety with which it is assembled and inspected in the factory.

Economical transportation is, of course, the primary consideration in any medium priced car. But if your choice is the Grant Six you obtain in addition smartness of style, completeness of comfort and the luxury of quiet, flexible, effortless operation which hitherto have been found only in very expensive cars.

A demonstration of the Grant Six will prove all of these statements. Let us show you.

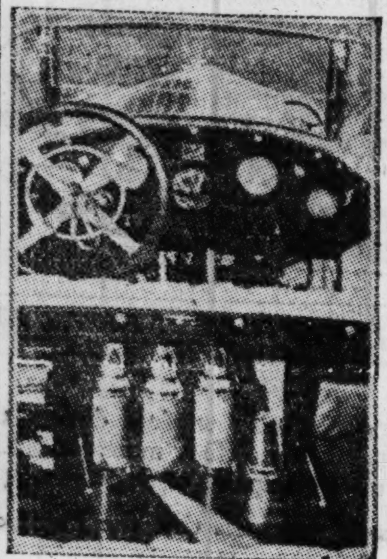
Thomas Registers to Complete Fast French Race Team

RENE THOMAS, the Frenchman who showed a clean pair of heels in the international sweepstakes on the Indianapolis speedway in 1914, has filed his entry for this year's contest as a member of the Ballot team that will fly the tricolor in the Hoosier engagement May 31.

Teaming with Thomas will be Ralph De Palma, world's speed king until his recent dethronement by Tommy Milton, resulting in an alignment of forces that is expected to boost Ballot speed shares several points.

Thomas is coming to wipe out the bitterest disappointment of his career, sustained in last year's contest. After demonstrating in the time trials preliminary to the race that he had more speed than any one in the field, setting a new lap record for the course, he finished no beter than in tenth position.



TOO LATE. 'Way back in 1919 the "wet" interior feature of this Read special Winton would have its appeal. Now the bottles and shaker are just ornaments.

Public Interest Served by This Transport Plan

LOUISVILLE, Ky., since the completion of a central freight depot and the purchase of three large, well established motor truck lines by the Union Transportation line, claims one of the best equipped highway transport organizations in the country.

This company, incorporated at $100,000, began operations only six months ago. Its development came as a result of the public's recognition of its value as an adjunct to other transportation agencies where they exist and the fulfillment of a long felt need where other agencies do not exist.

The company when founded planned to establish seven main and forty-seven secondary routes, covering 136 towns, all within a radius of seventy-five miles of Louisville. Five of these main routes are now in operation. The company now owns more than twenty trucks, which carry to the small inland towns all the merchandise made, distributed, or sold in Louisville, and bring back to the city merchants live stock, grain, green groceries, and all other farm products.

This service has been the means of saving shippers money by decreasing the time of delivery.

The JORDAN Silhouette

THE Silhouette is simply a frank expression of another Jordan ideal—a determination to meet the demand for a high-grade car, perfectly balanced, comfortable, economical, and yet light in weight, compact, and with rare ability to perform.

After all, the building toward an ideal has been the keynote of Jordan popularity.

Both men and women who have natural appreciation for comfort, poise and atmosphere, have found this Jordan Silhouette irresistible in its symmetry of line and beauty of color.

The chassis, of finished mechanical excellence, is the lightest on the road for its wheelbase. This Silhouette weighs only 2,800 pounds. Its entire movement is forward. No racking sideway or continuous bouncing so conspicuous in the cars of yesterday.

No wonder the Jordan has found such instant favor among the motor wise.

Overheated Motor Common Cause of Summer Troubles

Simple Adjustments Are Sufficient to Prevent Usual Delays

BY HIGH SPEED.

OVERHEATING is a rather common complaint in summer, and sometimes, while no serious results occur, the motorist is delayed on the road and often required to spend no little time endeavoring to determine the exact cause. Because there are numerous causes, every owner should be familiar with the more common ones.

All makes of cars but two are water cooled, hence we shall deal with water cooled engines only. Naturally, in such engines partial depletion of the water system means an overheated engine. This is more particularly the case with thermo-syphon cooled engines, which require a complete circuit of water. It is therefore a good plan for the owner of a car with a thermo-syphon cooled engine to see that the radiator always is full. In a pump cooled engine there is more force back of the water and a lower level may be carried without the danger of overheating.

Leaks in the water system naturally bring about reduction of water supply and consequent excessive heating of what water remains.

Anything tending to interfere with the free circulation of the water through the radiator or the water jacket keeps the jacket water in contact with the hot cylinders too long, resulting in boiling of that water. Obstructions may be in the form of dirt or sediment in the radiator, disintegrated hose connections, which partially clog the passageways; an obstruction of dirt or lumps of rusty material in the water jacket.

Running for too long a period in low gear, or even second, may cause overheating. This overworks the engines. Running on retarded spark, especially for any distance under load, as up a grade, will cause overheating. Instead of running with retarded spark in high, run with advanced spark in second slowly.

It is quite possible for the ignition timing to be wrong, so that manipulation of the lever will not advance the spark enough to keep the engine cool. This is a matter for an ignition man to correct, as it may be due to a number of causes, the commonest being a wrong setting of the timer or maladjustment of the interrupter points.

One of the commonest causes of overheating is due to a slipping fan belt. It is absolutely necessary for the fan to cause sufficient air draft to cool the water as it flows through the radiator. A slipping belt reduces the fan speed and thus cuts down the draft. The belt should be taut but not tight. Tight belts usually wear fast and break, and they also wear the pulley bearings.

A bad mixture, usually a rich one, brings about overheating. Carbon in the cylinders also will cause the engine to heat rapidly, but at the same time the engine will lack power, knock, and generally perform poorly. If you get the whole combination of trouble indicating engine debility and then get the overheating it usually is a sure indication of carbon.

Any drag on the engine, causing it to overwork, is likely to cause overheating. When the clutch slips the engine has to do more work to accomplish a given set of results; also when the brakes drag.

If the engine should overheat the sooner it is stopped the better. After stopping the engine allow it to cool for about ten or fifteen minutes; it depends upon how hot it is. Then add cold water slowly until the system is full. Then start the engine again, noting through the radiator filler if there is circulation. You might open the radiator drain, when the engine is stopped, to see if there is free flow through that unit. Poke a wire through the drain to make sure the drain itself is free. You then can go over the car to see that the spark advances with lever movement, that the mixture is not too rich, as indicated by pungent exhaust, and by noting if the fan belt slips.

Polishing Nickel Parts.

Ordinary silver polish, such as every housewife knows, is one of the best mediums for cleaning nickel parts about the car. The polish is rubbed on and then rubbed off with a soft cloth.

BYGONE GLORIES—In its day the "White Star," with its round steering wheel was a revelation to the motor world. Here is one of the eighty-three built in 1898 by Harry W. Anderson, who is now general sales manager for Templar motors.

New Club Manager.

S. F. D. Meffley assumed the management of the Illinois Automobile club last week. Mr. Meffley has had broad experience in building up organizations of various kinds and comes here from Toledo, where as assistant secretary of the Commerce club of that city he assisted in increasing the membership from 1,000 to more than 3,500.

Superlative Lake.

"The deepest and bluest lake in the world and one of the most sensationally beautiful spots of America"—thus is Crater lake characterized in the Automobile Blue Book for the motor tourist. The water is a lovely turquoise at the edges and in the center almost a sapphire hue. The lake is said to be in excess of 2,000 feet deep

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

How can I stop my car from wiggling of the front wheels when running at about five miles an hour? It is a Chevrolet, and when it starts to wiggle I simply have to stop and start slowly. Is it dangerous? J. K. L.

The trouble is caused by worn gears in the steering. Do not try to remedy this by replacing only the sector or one of the spur gears. Replace all. It is dangerous. Go over the whole steering system and take up excessive play.

I had a talk with a man who said that if the spring leaves are oiled they will break quicker than if not oiled. I say that if they are oiled they won't break. J. S. R.

I imagine your friend referred to old springs. When springs are old and are "lifeless," if they are oiled or greased they flex too much and may break. Better to just remove rust from between the leaves and not use grease or oil.

In watching my engine the other day I noticed that the cylinder head got a few drops of water at a certain spot. I discovered that there was a water leak due to an imperfection in the casting. What way can it best be fixed? P. H.

It can be welded, or if it is a mere pinhole it can be covered by means of a center punch mark. Welding is the better job, though.

If the insulation on ignition cables is hard but does not show signs of wear would you change the cables? L. S.

No.

Where can we obtain wheels that will run on railroad tracks. We want to put the wheels on a big six Lozier and run the car over the tracks of one of the old roads down here. W. D. McI.

PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

THE man who tempers economy with wisdom directs the expenditure of his money judiciously. He is more concerned with ultimate values than with mere cheapness of price.

It is to this type of person among motorists that the Paige car most appeals.

We, of the Paige Company, have always taken the view that unless a car has the qualities essential to comfort, lasting satisfaction and pride of ownership, it would be dear at any price.

So we built the Paige Glenbrook according to our ideas of what a real motor car should be—a car which would be not only a reliable vehicle of transportation but also a car of beauty, comfort and power.

MOTORDOM

Uncle Sam Orders Motor Convoy to Make Peace Run

War Strength Units Are Ready for Tour from Capital to Coast

PLANS have been completed whereby the war department will send a motor convoy from Washington to Los Angeles over the Bankhead national highway on or about June 15, due to arrive at Los Angeles Sept. 1. The convoy will be under the supervision of the motor transport corps and will consist of a motor transport unit complete at war strength, one service park unit at war strength, detachment from the engineer corps, and detachment from the medical corps. All motor trucks will be one and one-half tons capacity, equipped with pneumatic tires.

The purpose of this and other overland trips will be to study the handicaps which surround the transportation needs of the army on account of the lack of dependable and definite systems of highways, to secure data relative to the use of various types of motor vehicles, to secure relative data on solid and pneumatic tires, to train officers and men in extended field operations, and to recruit personnel for the various branches of the army.

The federal highway council feels that such study by the motor transport corps will be of great value to the entire country because it will thoroughly establish the necessity of the federal government undertaking the construction and maintenance of a definite system of national highways.

The Child City.

Northeast of Ithaca, N. Y., is the village of Freeville, founded by William R. George in 1895. It is the home of the George Junior republic, an organization devoted to the task of training boys and girls in self-government and self-support. The children, called citizens, elect a mayor, have their own police, and, in short, study and make their own government.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

HIGHWAY boosters in Virginia are preparing an elaborate motion picture film called "Virginia's New Hour" as an educational enterprise to exploit the needs of roads development and to lead young men back to the farms via the automobile route.

Walter E. Sloman has been made general sales manager for the Chicago Motor Car company, distributor of the Jordan, and J. P. Doherty, a veteran of the row, has been given charge of the Jordan service station, according to recent announcement.

Flint, Mich., home of the Buick and other big motor factories, has increased 145 per cent in population since 1910, according to latest census figures. The city now boasts 100,000 people, most of them employed directly or indirectly in the automobile industry.

The Anderson Electric and Equipment company has established headquarters in its new factory building at 154-160 Whiting street.

W. A. Olen, president of the Four Wheel Drive company of Clintonville, Wis., was welcomed along the row last week while en route to the National Foreign Trade council convention in San Francisco.

The Miller Rubber company is advocating the general development of schools where young men may be taught tire repairing and the technical end of the rubber industry. It declares that with 4,000,000 tires to be produced this year for the 1,500,000 new cars to be brought out and the more than 7,000,000 cars already in operation, the field for skilled workers is widening daily.

Following a referendum taken among its membership of more than 350 manufacturers of automobile parts and equipment, the executive committee of the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' association has adopted resolutions opposing the introduction of the metric system in American industry.

In order to secure first hand data on pneumatic truck tire cost and general truck operation, the Federal Rubber company is operating a truck fleet on regular schedule between Chicago and Milwaukee. The company will supply figures on truck operating costs on request.

Howard L. Spohn has been made a vice president and Frank A. Kapp secretary of the Charles H. Fuller Advertising company. Both men are widely known in Chicago automotive circles.

DIXON'S
GRAPHITE GREASE
No. 677

Gears are the Gizzard of your Car

They do mighty important work. That's why it pays to keep them fit.

Dixon's is the best known antidote for gear troubles. It gets into the tiny depressions found on all gear surfaces and forms a smooth, slippery veneer that puts friction and noise clear out of commission.

DIXON'S Gear LUBRICANT

Dixon's 677 for your differential and transmission. Also the famous Dixon's Cup Grease and other Dixon Lubricants. They come in snappy red cans.

The minute you start using Dixon's you'll notice its superiority over plain oil and grease. You'll find it cuts down noise, increases power, saves fuel, and sweetens up your car all 'round.

Dixon's can't "squeeze out" under pressure. And it isn't affected by heat or cold like ordinary lubricants.

Your dealer will tell you why you should use Dixon's in your transmission or differential. Ask him about it.

The Ready Acceptance of CHALMERS is Nation-wide

WHEREVER automobiles are discussed, the merits of "Hot Spot Chalmers" are freely conceded.

For its Ram's-horn and Hot Spot devices have solved the problem of extracting the maximum power from low grade "gas."

And Chalmers performance has proved that those engine troubles which are almost invariably associated with the use of this low grade "gas" have been eliminated.

Hot Spot "heats up" the raw "gas," "breaks it up" and vaporizes it into a "cloud."

This makes just the right kind of fuel for the cylinders.

Ram's-horn, with its easy air bends, rushes the "cloud," at a speed estimated at 100 miles an hour, an equal distance to each cylinder, and when the spark plugs ignite the "gas" you get results.

These two devices have done much for Chalmers. They have given it remarkable smoothness. They have brought down the item of repairs and replacements to an almost negligible sum per year.

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

Compare the Price

We ask you to compare the Dort price with cars in the Dort class—yes, with cars priced considerably higher.

This is a fair method of determining value—a comparison that shows definitely what you are buying at the Dort price and what you might buy at some other price.

What You Will Find

You will find that Dort uses better grade material than other cars in its price class.

That Dort gasoline, tires and oil will average uncommonly high mileage.

That the Dort is simple in construction and that it is accessible. And that many Dort owners, mechanically inclined, do their own repair work because of this.

Above all, you will find that the approval of the vast Dort following—60,000 owners, thousands in Chicago territory—expresses itself in praise of such essential merits as strength, economy, comfort, good looks and long life.

Where Is Better Value

Where then, is there better value? Where is there another car—at $1130, or anywhere near it—that offers such full measure of return for every dollar invested?

And the comparative value of Dort does not only exceed in first cost. It goes still further.

Its slow depreciation, its thrifty economy—both in running expense and repair upkeep—will show real dollar saving in day-in and day-out use.

STANDARD EIGHT

A Powerful Car

THE Standard Eight's story is simple. The engineers of the Standard Steel Car Company had perfected the steel construction of the world's railroad rolling stock.

They believed that they could build an automobile of power which would be a light car and yet would give full riding comfort.

They went ahead and did it.

The Standard Eight's powerful motor, throttled or full lunged, will meet the demands of any situation in road or traffic. The car's balance gives riding comfort. Its light weight is appreciated in figuring operating costs and upkeep. See the new models on display.

CHEAP AT TWICE THE PRICE

By Guy F. Lee

The barber spins tall yarns and skins
The stubble from our necks and chins;
He's full of jests and jokes and japes
That he releases as he scrapes.
He gives the up-to-datest slant
On everything on earth extant,
And for good measure throws in free
His views of immortality.

His teeming tongue with wisdom trips
The while his razor blithely skips;
We learn the causes of the war,
We hear the current opera score;
We get the dope from soup to nuts
On politics and business ruts,
And every impropriety
That happens in society.

I'm glad the rumor that he planned
To set a bigger cash demand
Turned out untrue; but if he had
It really wouldn't be so bad.
Considering the lore we share,
A haircut at six bits is fair,
And shaves at thirty cents are cheap
With all the info that we reap.

Hail to the barber! Let him barb!
Hail to the barber! He's a darb!
He is a most important chap,
And cuts a wide swath on the map.
He is a circus, vodveel show,
And institute, all in a row.
Rare songs of sapience he hymns us,
And makes us like it as he trims us!

THE DISTANCES OF THE SMALL PLANETS FROM THE SUN

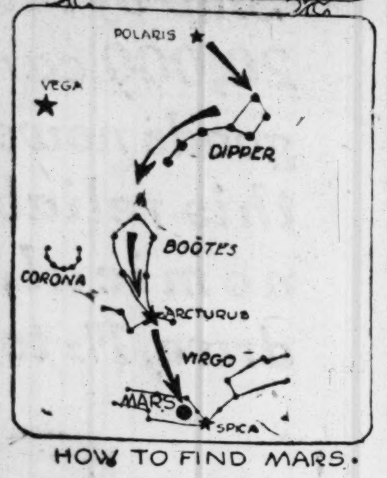
BY S F MAXWELL



HOW TO FIND MARS.

CONDITIONS ON MARS.

If you will look out in the southeast sky tonight a brilliant golden red star will meet your gaze. It is so plain to see and so much brighter than any of the neighbor stars that you will have no trouble at all in finding it. It is the planet Mars. Mars' track about the sun is set beyond the earth. Our world completes one trip around its orbit every dozen months, but Mars requires fully twenty-two and one-half months to make a similar journey.

Once every two years the earth and Mars come near together and run side by side for about a month. This year the two worlds are 55,000,000 miles apart. Two years from now, in August, 1922, the passing will be much closer.

The ruddy planet is a world quite like the earth, although much the smaller of the two. The continental area of the earth would about equal the total area of Mars. Small globe though it is, Mars is a land with much activity upon its surface.

Astronomers, looking through their telescopes tonight, see this world at a most fascinating stage of its year. In the north (the bottom in a telescope) the month is July, and the season is mid-summer, while in the south the season corresponds to mid-January, with its frigid winter snows.

Mars possesses the same kind of water that the earth has, but it is distributed about its small globe in a far different fashion from the earth. Three-quarters of the Martian soil is a desert, a barren waste of ochre sands, as parched as the Sahara or Gobi deserts. The other quarter of the land bears vegetation at favored seasons of the year, depending absolutely upon whether water can be had or not.

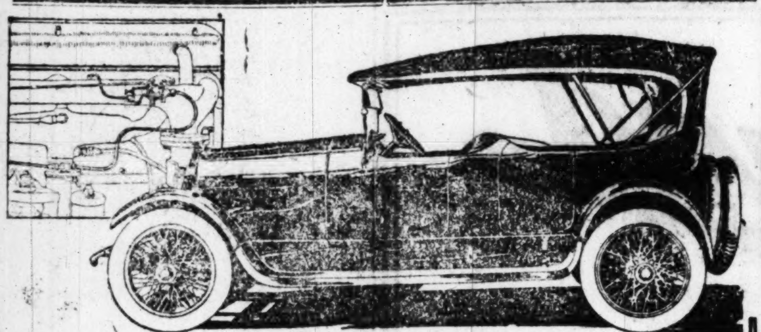
It almost never rains on Mars, observers think. The daytime skies there are always clear and blue. The days, even in the summer time, are cool, and the nights are often cold.

Around each pole in winter time the moisture in the air condenses into frost and forms a light white carpet on the land. When we, from our earthly stations, look on Mars with telescopes, these white spots stand in clear contrast to the inky sky of night around and to the ruddy colors of that far off land. We call these spots polar caps. The cap found in the north of Mars tonight is small and shrunken close up to the pole, as though the summer warmth had melted it away save at the actual pole itself. At the south pole, on the other hand, the snows are thick and white, and show that winter reigns.

The water released from the melting snows in spring drains into shallow pools and marshes, and forms a deep blue ring that follows the retreating white. It is from here, and only here, that the canals spring to carry water to the barren temperate wastes. It is only after water comes that Martian verdure ever feels a stir of life.

The plan of the canals, their obvious purpose, their well laid network all centering on the vital waters at the poles, leads us to conclude that there exist on Mars creatures who can think and execute herculean tasks. Many of the canals are 4,000 miles or more in length.

Who or what these creatures are no one can say. We do not know. Some insignificant attempts have been made to signal Mars, but with no perseverance or well planned effort.



Official Test Proves That Live Steam Increases Marmon Mileage 33⅓%

This test, conducted by two automobile editors of Chicago papers, proves our claim that the Automatic Steam Carburetor saves from 25% to 40% on fuel, increases the power, speed and smoothness of the motor, eliminates carbon and keeps the spark plugs clean. Here are the figures:

	Increased Mileage	Increased Power on 6% Grade	Increase Over Normal Speed
Marmon	33.3%	11.2%	5.5 miles per hour
Velie	27 %	10.4%	5.8 miles per hour
Chevrolet	35 %	12 %	6 miles per hour

These tests have been made on almost every make of car. Let us send you the figures for your car.

The Automatic Steam Carburetor is used in conjunction with the gasoline carburetor. It injects live steam into the gas mixture, increasing vaporization and making combustion complete. As a result you get every ounce of power out of your gasoline, which burns clean, leaving no carbon deposits on the cylinders.

Ask your dealer to show you the "Automatic" in operation. If he hasn't it in stock, write us for complete information of official tests.

THE shock of that misfiring spark plug is felt 'way back there in the differential.

Gears were never intended to run with a jerky motion. Chewed-up gears are expensive to replace. Cars and trucks were never intended to run with misfiring spark plugs.

Bethlehem Spark Plugs answer the problem of the "miss." They are sure-fire, and this is why: Improved engineering ideas reduce liability of fouling. Special-formula porcelain reduces leakage and current-loss to a minimum.

Every Bethlehem Spark Plug is tested individually on special electrical and compression-testing apparatus before leaving the factory.

ART

Water Color and Miniature Features of Week's Exhibits

By Louise James Bargelt

LAST week afforded several openings in the art world. Important exhibitions are now being held at the Art institute and at the Arts club.

At the institute there is the thirty-second annual exhibition of water colors, pastels and miniatures by American artists. This will continue at the institute until June 6.

The rotary exhibition is assembled and sent out by the American Federation of Arts from the annual exhibition by the American Water Color society held in New York. In this exhibition, which occupies the first of the galleries in the east wing, there is C. D. Weldon's "Birth of the Morrow," an atmospheric canvas full of charm. Near it hangs John S. Eland's "Hail, Mary," a religious painting of decided merit. William J. Whittemore's "The Little Girl with the Red Hair" is a fine piece of portraiture delightfully colored. George Elmer Browne's three paintings, among them the "Street to the Market, Le Puy," are strongly handled and stand out distinctively among the many canvases on exhibit. Alphaeus Cole has a "Pink Opera Cloak" which for sheer lure of coloring is not excelled in the exhibit. "The Red Barn" by Edmond Weill, the "Voice of the Forest" by Harry Hintermeister Jr., and "October Evening" by Felicie Waldo Howell possess unusual individuality and deftness in treatment.

There are many familiar Chicago names in the water color exhibition. Robert Prucha's "Juliette" stands out among the portrait work, a splendidly done canvas of a young girl whose gold brown hair blends softly with the greens and gold of her dress and whose face reflects beauty and strength.

There is Allen St. John's "Sunny Italy," a splash of sunlight on some oxen and a cart; Frederick Tellander's "South Wind," with its misty commingling of colors; Gertrude Spaller's wash drawings of "The Steadfast Tin Soldier" and "The Mad Tea Party," Harry Water Armstrong's decorative illustrations, K. A. Buehr's pastel sketches of a woman in blue, Mable Key's riot of summer foliage in "Through the Gate," Oskar Gross' "Philosopher," and William Clusman's "After a Rain" and the "Forest Preserve."

Elinor M. Barnard has a couple of portrait studies of a child which deserve special mention; so also do Adam Emory Albright's "Baking Time," Lucie Hartrath's "The Hilltop: Morning," Albert H. Krehbiel's "Oats Stack," Tod Lindenmuth's wood block prints, "The Boat Builders," "A Village Street," and "Winter"; Stanley W. Woodward's "Portrait of a Young Man" and "Girl with a Fur," and Sigurd Schou's "Jonquils" and "Tulips."

* * *

The Chicago Society of Minature Painters has some fifty miniatures on exhibition. Magda Heuermann's "Theodor Leschetizky" is an unusually fine piece of minature work. Anna Lynch's "Lillian," with her shadowy masses of hair and expressive features, is another example of excellent work. Bertha Coolidge has a "Profile" on exhibit which should not be missed; nor Annie Hurlburt Jackson's "Girl with a Fan"; nor A. Margaretta Archambault's "The Chinese Cabinet." Kate B. Bond's "Helen" is beautifully done, and Marian Dunlap Harper's "Jean Elizabeth" is a witching bit of miniature portrait rendering.

The paintings of Henry G. Keller and Louis Ritman occupy other galleries in the east wing, and these paintings will be written of later.

The French collection of paintings at the Arts club, which was chosen by La Triennalle, the three French societies, contains some remarkable work. The symbolic portrait of Cardinal Mercier by Paul Albert Besnard stands out distinctive and impressive. The portrait of Lieut. Dezarrois by Auguste Leroux is banked with clouds in the background, while the military swing of the figure and the expression in the eyes is one which war alone can bring. "Breton Waste Land," by Felix Valotton, is a graphic picture of barrenness. There is the "Interior of a Church," by Lucien Simon, atmospheric, peasant figures in their various attitudes of devotion. And again we see the snow covered "Terrace at Versailles," by Guirand de Scevola, and the "Barat Mill," by Paul Madeline.

There are also medals and medallions on exhibit at the Arts club by Ovide Yencesse, one illustrating "Lafayette, Here We Are," and a bronze of John J. Pershing by Annie Mouroux.

FARM AND GARDEN

Mild Days Start Sheep Shearing in Yards Near Chicago

By Frank Ridgway.

One sheep a minute is the record now made in clipping fleeces with a modern shearing machine. These pictures show how the sheep is held and clipped.

SHEEP shearing has been delayed several weeks this spring because of the cold rains. The recent warm weather has made it uncomfortable for the sheep and the winter coats have been removed by the thousands from the flocks of the central states during the last week.

At the sheep feeding stations at Kirkland, Montgomery, La Fox, and similar feed yards near Chicago, hundreds of fleeces are being cliped and sacked daily. Sheep shearing has developed into an enormous business at these "mutton factories," for western sheepmen ship thousands of lambs to these yards every spring. Here they are held and "peddled" at the Chicago market as they are needed. While the finishing touches are being put on many of the lambs are clipped before they are sent to the market.

Approximately 100,000 lambs have been handled this spring at the feeding yards near Montgomery. Twelve shearers have been kept going during the last few weeks, each one clipping an average of 140 a day with power machines.

Machine Gives Closer Shave.

The day's work begins with a few tinkling sounds, a baa or two, a buzzing, clicking noise from the machines as Dick, the toothless bell sheep, leads in a band of lambs each morning. The sheep are held in pens where they are convenient for the shearers and with the modern machinery the men are able to turn out one every three or four minutes.

The clipping of sheep with machinery is now being done extensively. J. E. Erickson, who has charge of the yards at Montgomery, says the men are able to get an average of about three-quarters of a pound more wool from each sheep with the clippers than they did when they used the old fashioned shears. Machine shearing not only gets more of the wool, but the work is done more uniformly over the body. When the shearers turn a sheep loose its body is not covered with ridges, the fleece comes off in a single unbroken blanket with longer fibers. There are no short fibers to be found, as there is where the hand shears are used and a second cutting is made to even the stubble.

The hand power machine is now being used by owners of small flocks. In some cases neighbors coöperate in buying the small shearing outfits. They find there is less danger of cutting the sheep where clippers are used.

Wool is selling at high figures this year, and sheep men can well afford to use every precaution in handling the fleece at shearing time. Several have contracted this spring's clip for 75 and 80 cents a pound, and in some cases the best grades have sold around 85 cents a pound.

Keep Fleece Clean.

Sheep that are out in grass pastures should be kept in a dry lot a few hours before shearing. They struggle less if their paunches are not full when they are being handled. Special care should be taken to keep the fleeces clean, for dirt, chaff, hay, and any other foreign material lowers the value. A shed where there is plenty of light and no wind is the best place for shearing. A smooth board floor is necessary, and if the surface is rough, a tarpaulin may be used.

Fleeces should be thoroughly dry before being clipped, as wool heats if sacked while it is damp. Every flockmaster will profit by removing all of the tags and coarse trimming from the legs and marketing them in separate sacks. The tags should be removed before the shearing begins.

The small flock owner often has better wool than the big breeders because he takes better care of his sheep. Breaks in staples are often noticeable at shearing time. This is usually caused by irregular feeding and watering. Insufficient watering during hot weather is especially detrimental to the fleece. This should be remembered in caring for sheep during the next few months.

Sheep should be clipped in this section, at least, by the first of June. Every animal should be dipped after shearing. Most breeders find it necessary to dip their flock in order to destroy the ticks, lice, and other skin parasites, but they usually wait a week or ten days after shearing.

This year you can give your lawn better care at less cost

No longer is it necessary to neglect your fine lawn because of the scarcity of labor. The Ideal Power Lawn Mower will solve your grass-cutting problems just the same as it has for hundreds of others.

The Ideal is a wonderful labor saver. It will cut as much grass per day as five hard-working men with hand mowers, and it will do the work better and at less cost.

Best of all, the Ideal is a power mower and power roller in one, and the sod is rolled every time the grass is cut. This keeps the turf smooth and firm.

The Ideal is simple and trouble-proof—easy to operate and easy to care for. Has no complicated gear or clutches. Machine turns easily and will cut close to walks, trees, flower beds and shrubbery. Operating cost is only about 50 cents per day for fuel and oil.

As extra equipment we can furnish special putting green mower for golf course work; also riding trailer which fastens to frame of the machine.

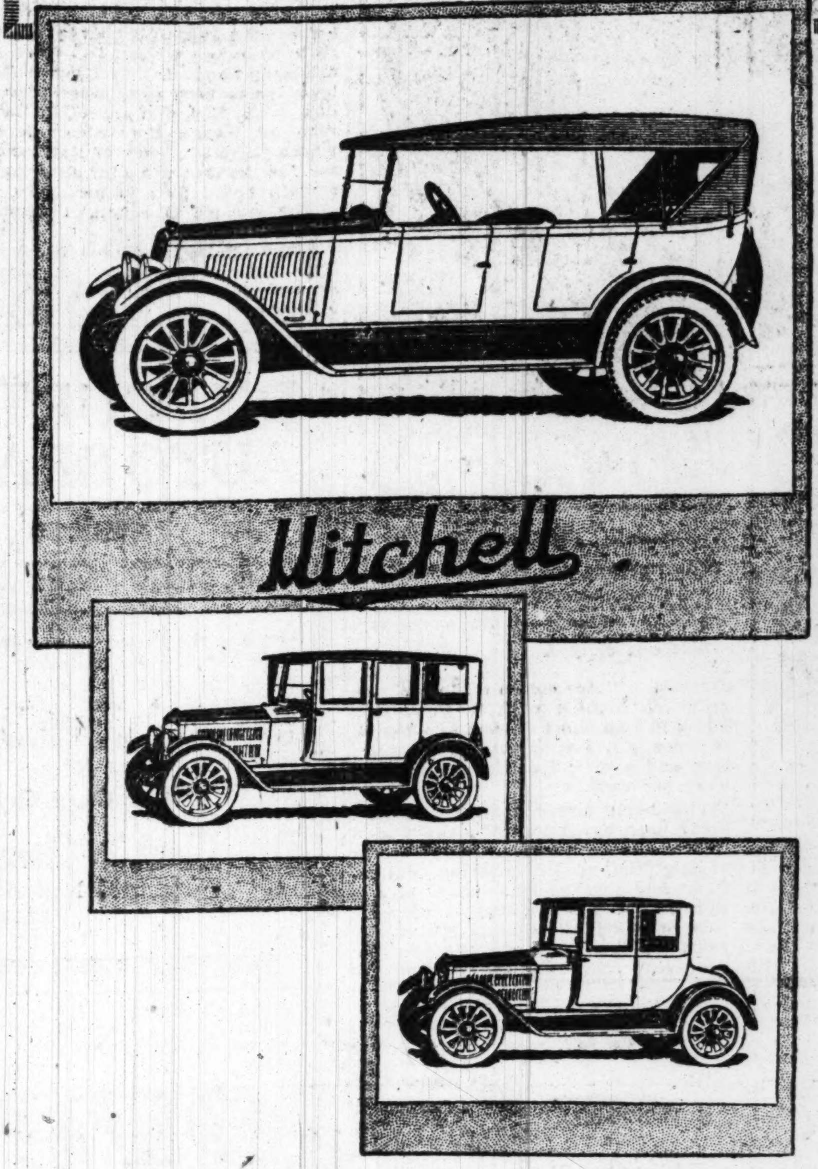
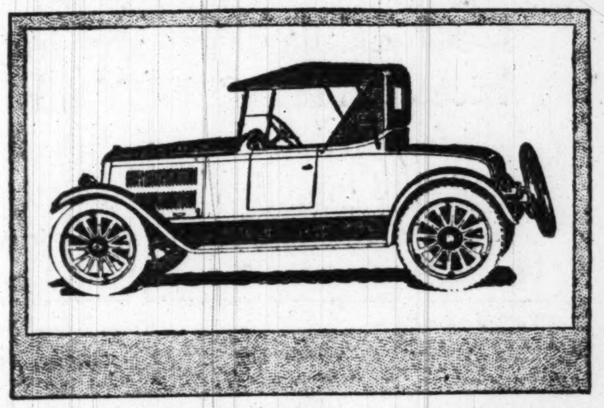
Extreme attention to details

distinguishes this New Mitchell



Four models: 5-passenger Touring Car, 3-passenger Roadster, 5-passenger Sedan and 4-passenger Coupe.



MORE and more New Mitchells are making their appearance on the streets. At first glance one is struck with the advanced style, the harmony of lines, the graceful contours. Here, indeed, is the personification of motion.

Then closer examination reveals the unexpected. Costly-car practices are seen throughout.

The eye quickly takes in, for instance, the costlier top, finely and sturdily tailored. Also the finish of the upholstery and of the body. And other details too numerous to itemize here.

People expect that this New Mitchell costs more than it really does.

Unseen values, too

All the Mitchell betterments are not obvious. Many costly shop practices become evident only as time goes by. For this is a car built throughout to stay new.

Finer materials, expensive details, latest practices—all are noted throughout.

And this is possible because the New Mitchell is built complete in one plant—not assembled. Even bodies are Mitchell-built. This saves money that goes back into the car.

That is why you get more for your money.

Make a comparison

Before you buy your car, see the Mitchell first. Let it set your standards of what your money ought to buy.

See if you can find another car that offers so much for the money. People who make such comparisons realize Mitchell values.

We would be delighted to show you this new car now, in four models. We would advise you to make an early selection, placing your order, so that we could arrange for early delivery. For there is a great demand for this very popular car.

YOU
Men and Women Who Pay Rent
WHICH WILL YOU RATHER DO?

Continue to let your money enrich a grasping, profiteering landlord in return for a

RENT RECEIPT?

or pay it out in return for a

HOME?

THINK IT OVER—IT'S UP TO YOU.

Ever since the time of the cliff dwellers it has remained the foremost desire of every worth-while man to obtain a home where he, and not an avaricious landlord, can issue orders, and every such man knows that he cannot borrow money on a stack of rent receipts, but that he can on what he has paid out for a home.

So, if you are that worth-while man or woman, then write or call in and see me and I will positively show how $100 will start you.

NEW PLAN.

Dairy farms, cattle, sheep, goat, and hog ranches of all sizes in the fine cutover lands of the rich states of Louisiana and Mississippi, contiguous to N. O. G. N. Ry., and carefully selected under expert advice with reference to flowing streams, ranch headquarters, feeding, herding, and breeding grounds, farming lands, and shipping facilities. Land at extremely low prices and payments extending over long period of years, so that payments per acre per year amount to little more than interest on purchase price and on ordinary leasing charges for grazing purposes, and yet at end of payments you own the land. Write Walter S. Ayers, Industrial Commissioner N. O. G. N. Ry., 1060 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., for dependable information.

Cities Growing

LATEST CENSUS FIGURES show 80 cities of 25,000 or more have doubled their population in the last ten years. Some have increased threefold and fourfold and some even sevenfold. Food production has not increased to meet this increased demand. The result is seen in present day high prices.

CITY PEOPLE will soon be paying so much for food that the man who has a farm home of his own will be better fixed than anybody. In Chicago bread prices took another jump last week and housewives are now paying $1 a peck for potatoes and 15c a lb. for cooking apples.

HARDWOOD LANDS in Kalkaska and Antrim counties, Michigan, offer you the opportunity to grow your own food and have plenty to sell for profit. Close to good markets, railroads, churches, schools, etc. These lands are a bargain at $15 to $35 an acre. No swamps or stones. On our easy terms, small down payment, balance on liberal monthly or yearly terms, you can soon get a farm home of your own; liberal discount for all cash.

WARRANTY DEED AND ABSTRACT OF TITLE furnished with every purchase. The state of Michigan exempts actual settlers from taxes for the first five years. After the land is paid for we loan you money to make improvements or buy live stock and farm machinery. Our free farm advisors help you in your farming operations. Free insurance protects your family.

TAKE A TRIP TO MICHIGAN on one of our early excursions. Bring your wife along. Stay at our new Clubhouse and see the lands in our automobiles, which are furnished free with guides. Call at our office or write today for excursion rates and dates. Don't put it off. Ask for our big free illustrated booklet and full information.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Wisconsin.

LAND OPENING

We have just opened a new tract of cut-over hardwood land, located a few miles east of Wabeno and Soperton, in Forest County, Wisconsin. This land can be purchased under our Home Lands credit system. We extend credit for building material to the amount of $500 on a $500 payment, and $700 on a $700 payment, or more, in proportion to the amount you pay down. No payments on principal and interest for 5 years after first payment is made.

SOIL.

The soil in this tract is a Kennan silt loam. By referring to the state soil survey you will find that that soil will wear well, hold moisture, and yield big crops, and does not leach. It contains the necessary mineral elements, such as phosphorus, potassium, etc., to grow corn, excellent small grain crops, as well as clover, timothy, potatoes, vegetables, root crops, small fruits and apples.

CAPITAL.

Sufficient capital or credit is as important as good soil. Without either you not only handicap yourself, but the development of the district is delayed wherever you locate. Our Credit System gives you your chance to succeed. It is based on the idea that if you succeed it still also means success to our company, and the whole district in general.

FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY.

You will get your contract direct from the lumber company that owns the land. The financial responsibility of our company and the three lumber companies can be ascertained by asking any Chicago or Milwaukee bank. If looking for a large or small tract for general farming, stock or sheep raising, write or call for further information. Now is a good time to see this district. The fare for the round trip from Chicago is only $18.

Partridge Farm

Is situated in the suburbs of Beloit, Wisconsin, a thriving city of 22,000, ninety-one miles from Chicago.

It comprises 430 acres, including two virgin timber tracts, and a beautiful little stream flowing diagonally across the estate.

The buildings are only ordinary and therefore could be razed at slight expense by any one who would be interested in the development of this property into a country estate. An artificial lake can be easily created, the lay of the land and the position of the creek would make this simple. This property offers an ideal location for a gentleman's country residence and its sale is to satisfy the necessity of settling an estate.

No trades considered. Terms: part cash, long term mortgage if desired.

IN TIME

Every day we are asked if it is not too late to go farming this year. IT IS NOT. Our improved and partly improved farms are planted. Our Medford office writes us "It will be time for people to come here and start for the next thirty days."

We have farms with stock and machinery ready for immediate possession. GO NOW AND SEE FOR YOURSELF. You will be IN TIME to grow and harvest the crop. THIS YEAR. [Oats and barley is now being seeded. Potatoes will be planted in about a week, same with corn.]

Our farms range from $50 to $125 an acre. They are REAL FARMS, with substantial bldgs., good acreage under cultivation, fenced, etc. They are located in a fertile dairy land, where the farmers are prospering, and where values are steadily rising. [In TAYLOR, LINCOLN, LANGLADE, MARATHON, PRICE AND CLARK counties.] Dairying is the big industry—the cream check is the best mortgage lifter—but general farming is also successfully carried on. LAND INFORMATION.

VAST COAL AND IRON RESOURCES IN NEW SOUTH WALES. New South Wales has large deposits of iron ore [53,000,000 tons awaiting treatment] in close proximity to vast beds of a superior coal. Both classes of deposits are being worked more extensively each year. In 1917 the coal mined amounted to 8,292,867 tons, of which 5,000,000 tons were used within the state—almost exclusively for industrial purposes, as the mild climate of Australia requires very little fuel to be employed for the heating of buildings.

The coal beds of New South Wales cover about 16,550 square miles—in three districts, Northern, Southern, and Western. The main lines of railways pass through the districts where the deposits are most easily worked. Newcastle, famous throughout the world as a port near Sydney, and at the heart of the Northern coal district, which furnishes 65 per cent of the coal that is mined in the state. Two hundred and forty-four million tons of coal, valued at $480,000,000, have been mined to date in New South Wales. It is conservatively estimated that there are over 115,300,000,000 tons of coal still available to be mined in New South Wales. This represents as asset to the State of New South Wales of over $175,000,000,000.

DANCING SCHOOLS.

DON'T FAKE IT.
Learn correctly and form the habit of dancing properly. Good or bad habits stick. I teach exactly what to do, how to do it and when to do it. Don't fake it by simply marking time. With my instructions you learn the simple, practical and popular steps and figures that are used at house parties, lodge and club dances and in the public ballroom. It's grand and glorious to know you are doing it right.

EXPERT FINANCIAL AND UNDERWRITING SERVICE.
Firms and corporations desiring to raise additional capital usually do not know what such capital ought to cost, what form of obligation will command the most favorable terms, nor how or where to find a responsible purchaser at the best price; nearly 35 years' successful experience in both commercial and investment banking, a thorough knowledge of markets and values, and a wide acquaintance with banks and investors ought to render my advice and service of value and which will cost you nothing unless I secure the capital wanted, and then only a moderate commission, which in most cases would be less than the amount saved in selling as your agent the securities direct or through an underwriting syndicate, aside from gratis preliminary counsel and advice rendered; prefer large undertakings, but smaller considered; give name and address, inclose balance sheet, state capital desired, all of which will be confidential, and I will call. Address D 566, Tribune.

HE'S A HARD GUY, BUT LISTEN TO WHAT HE'S DONE

Old Man Concrete Gets a Bit o' Praise.

BY AL CHASE.

Old Man Concrete is a hard guy—everybody knows that—but on the other hand few people know that he's both a philanthropist and a scrapper and has been landing several good wallops on our much hated hanger on, Old Hi Cost. He has, however, and some of the wallops have brought results which affect pretty nearly all of us.

For instance, if Cook county hadn't decided several years ago on a comprehensive concrete road program we'd now be paying considerable more for our vegetables; there wouldn't be so many big subdivisions being opened up for moderate priced homes; and a good many big building projects would be tied up; neither would farm values be $50 an acre higher, as is claimed by Maj. George A. Quinlan, county superintendent of highways.

Forces Truck Gardens Back.

The most significant result of good roads and the one which has brought the quickest results both to the public and the farmer, is the automatic forcing of the belt of truck gardens which once encircled Chicago at a distance of a few miles from the loop, farther and farther out into the country.

According to August Geweke of Morton Grove, president of the Cook County Truck Gardeners and Farmers' association, the present belt of truck gardens is ten miles farther out than it was five years ago.

"At the same time our truck garden products are nearer the city consumer than they were before our county concrete roads were built," said Mr. Geweke. "A farm twenty-five miles out in the country which is on a concrete road where motor trucks can be used is nearer town than was the old time farm ten miles out on a bad road where the farmer used a team.

Gardeners Act.

"As soon as concrete roads began to be talked about our city truck gardeners began to act. For instance, as soon as the Desplaines river road was contracted for I know of eight Hollanders who moved from the south side and began intensive farming. They could get their produce in as quickly and cheaply as they could when inside the city limits, and, of course, their land cost them much less. I know of several other farmers who moved from High Ridge to Bensonville as soon as concrete roads were assured.

"Slowly, but surely, the belt of intensive farming is going to spread farther out as our roads get better. Without paved roads the farmer practically is helpless to get his stuff to market. As rapidly as concrete roads are put in the character of the farming changes, for with a smooth highway to the tremendous market of Chicago the farmer goes in for truck gardenening as much as possible."

Helps Subdivisions.

Arthur T. McIntosh of Arthur T. McIntosh & Co. had this to say about the situation: "Good roads have made it possible for both the truck farmer and the person who wants to raise a little garden stuff on a small scale to move farther out, and that has, of course, helped relieve congestion in the city by putting more property on the market for subdivisions.

"At present practically all the truck farmers have moved outside the city limits, and now there is truck gardening for the Chicago market as far out as twenty-five miles. Most of the districts at present are in the neighborhood of Blue Island and along the Desplaines valley."

"Good roads give the truck farmer more time for his farming," explained Maj. Quinlan. "Instead of spending all night on the road driving into market, as he used to when he had a horse and team, he gets a good sleep and whizzes in early in the morning in an hour or so and comes back the same night and climbs into bed at a reasonable hour. He used to spend most of the night driving home before we had concrete roads.

Aids Building Projects.

"Another thing our county concrete roads have done has been to prevent a big tieup in building operations. With railroad freight traffic badly congested, it has been possible to keep building going on in any number of big projects by trucking cement in from Indiana and other materials in from outlying points over our concrete roads.

"Six years ago we had one-half mile of paved road in the county outside of Chicago. Now we've got 200 miles and plan 150 more. Our 1920 program calls for from fifty to seventy miles, and in addition there will be fifty miles of state aid roads. I understand that our good roads have added $50 per acre to farm values in the county."

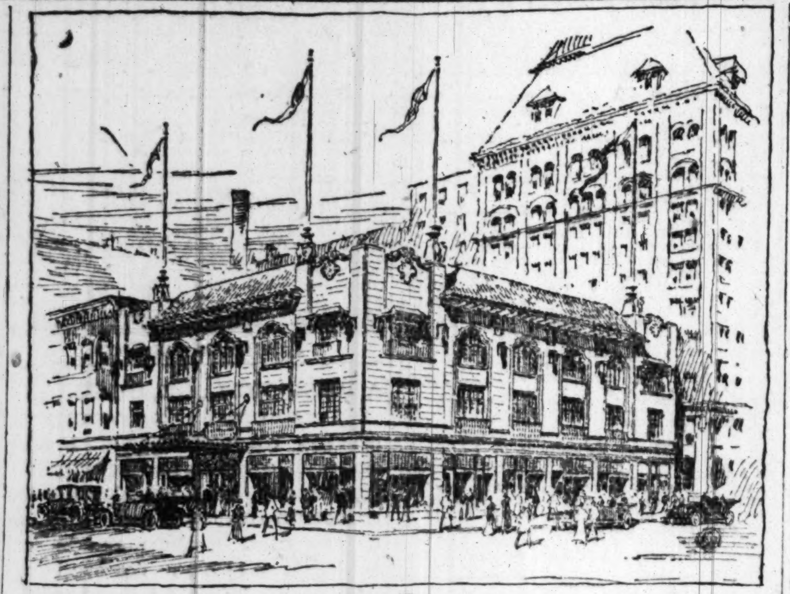
And, of course, there are the thousands of acres of forest preserve natural park land which have been opened up to the city person by our concrete roads.

So, even if Old Man Concrete is a tough guy, he's a good booster of real estate values and makes our foods cheaper and easier to get. And that's something these days.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

Henry T. Bloomfield informed THE TRIBUNE that he paid $225,000 to Max Ehrman for the 110 by 143 at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Lawrence avenue as the site for a $2,000,000 hotel and theater building, described in THE TRIBUNE May 12. Later it was learned from the county records that the contract called for $175,000, subject to a trust deed securing an indebtedness of $40,000. This would total $215,000.

On May 14 THE TRIBUNE gave the approximate cost of the new plant of the Clemetson company, desk manufacturers at West Division and North Homan, as $350,000. This was arrived at after a talk with the architects. According to the Central Trust company, the cost of the plant will be around $700,000.



Canton Tea Gardens to Be Loop's Newest Oriental Cafe

If the reported amount of money to be spent on Chicago's newest Chinese restaurant is correct, then the Canton Tea Gardens, at the southwest corner of Wabash and Van Buren, ought to be about the most attractive thing in Chicago chop suey cafés. It is announced that $150,000 will be used on oriental fixtures and furnishings.

The Art institute has just closed a new lease with a syndicate of Chinese merchants, headed by Chin Kung Fong, Eng Gow, and Chan Pak Sun, to run thirty years at a rental which, with taxes and insurance, will aggregate $1,500,000 for the term. The old lease, which ran for twenty-five years, with a cancellation clause in the event of a new building, has been annulled.

Under the terms of the new lease, the lessees are to erect a new three story building to cost not less than $200,000 after plans drawn by Walter E. Perry and Fugard & Knapp, architects, and approved by Howard Shaw, architect for the Art institute. The lot fronts 80 feet on Wabash and 125 feet on Van Buren back to an alley.

The lower floor of the building will be divided into ten shops. The basement has been leased for a billiard hall. The upper floors will have the Canton Tea Gardens. Work will start at once.

Hall & Ellis represented the lessors. E. F. Keebler & Co., who represented the lessees, will manage the building.

GOLD COAST TENANTS PAY $700,000 FOR 1550 NORTH STATE

Now the "own your own home" movement has spread to the most golden corners of the Gold coast. Knowing their rentals were so far below the present level for de luxe apartments that they were bound to get a boost when leases expired, the millionaire residents of the Marshall apartments, 1550 North State parkway, decided it would be wiser if some of the renters owned the building.

After considerable deliberation, William V. Kelley, president of the Miehle Printing Press and Manufacturing Co., who has apartment 8, and Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, who lives in flat No. 1, opened negotiations with Benjamin H. Marshall, of Marshall & Fox, architects, who owns the building. This resulted in the purchase for $700,000.

The other tenants are: Mr. and Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mrs. Eugene S. Pike; Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dick, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Field, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson.

The eleven story building has ten apartments of twenty rooms each. It faces north on Lincoln park. The present rental of $9,000 a year is several thousands under some of the newer but not so large or luxurious flats.

Catholic University to Spoof Old Man Hi Cost

High prices for food aren't going to worry the students or professors at the big Catholic university planned for the property now owned by the church at Area, Ill. Yesterday it was learned that the Catholic bishop of Chicago had purchased, through McMahon & Hoban, the 303 acre farm of Senator Rodney B. Swift for a reported $105,000. This, together with the 106 acres of Lake Eara and the other land recently purchased, gives the church a 1,000 acre site for the new university.

"This is one of the finest farms in Illinois," said Thomas J. McMahon. "It's just east of the proposed university grounds, and, according to present plans, will be operated by the college trustees to feed the students and professors. The church now owns all the land surrounding Lake Eara."

Gotham Petticoat Shop for Mallers Building

A term rental of $37,500 for five years will be paid by William Epstein & Brother of New York City, for the shop in the Mallers building, at 53 East Madison street, now occupied by the Merinello company, which will move to upper floor space in the same building. The new lessee will operate a silk petticoat shop. E. F. Keebler & Co. were the brokers.

Restaurateur Starts Work on State Street Building

John R. Thompson, restaurateur, has started work on a three story building at 206-208 South State street, north of the Consumers building. It will be three stories, 40x100. In the event of not finding a suitable tenant for the first floor Mr. Thompson will use it for a lunch room.

Ward Plans Fifth Chicago Bakery on Northwest Side

A fifth large Chicago bakery is planned by the Ward company on property just acquired at the southwest corner of Irving Park boulevard and North Kilbourn avenue, extending back to the St. Paul tracks.

Four building permits were issued yesterday. Those in excess of $10,000:

FOURTEEN STORY HOTEL PLANNED FOR SOUTH STATE

Concrete results are beginning to show as a result of the cleanup now under way by the South State Street Improvement association in the territory south of Van Buren street. The biggest is the announcement by Samuel Stern, owner of the 50x100 at the northwest corner of State and Harrison streets, that as soon as present leases expire he will erect a fourteen story hotel, similar in character to the Fort Dearborn hotel, which will cost in the neighborhood of $750,000.

John P. Hooker is now erecting a three story building on his 25x100 at 532 South State street to cost $40,000. It will have a tile and plate glass front.

William V. Kelley, former president of the association, has given notice to his tenants to vacate, and it is understood that negotiations are now in progress for the erection of a large building on his 75x100 opposite Congress street for a high class tenant.

"Chicago in 1921" Slogan of Local Real Estate Men

With the phrase, "Chicago in 1921," as their slogan, 200 members of the Chicago real estate board will leave for Kansas City on May 29 to attend the thirteenth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The convention will be held on June 2, 3, 4, 5.

"We want the convention for next year," said Adolph F. Kramer, president of the Chicago board, "and we're going to make every effort to get it."

Mr. Kramer will preside at the five minute boosting debates of members of boards from other cities who will contest for the silver cup which was presented by the Chicago board. Chicago will not be represented.

ROOSEVELT ROAD LEASE.

Owing to the constantly increasing demand for refrigerating machines, the McClellan Refrigerating company has again been compelled to seek larger quarters. It has leased from David A. Wright, through Hart & Whetston, the plant at the northwest corner of Roosevelt road and Washtenaw avenue, comprising several one story buildings, with 130,000 square feet of floor space, for ten years at a total rental of $300,000.

SALE ON NORTH SIDE STIRS UP STAMP RUMPUS

Overpaying of Uncle Sam Brings Protest.

"Ninety per cent of the brokers in Chicago put more revenue stamps on their deeds of sale than the actual selling price calls for in order that the real price may not become known to the public."—Henry E. Hedberg of Hedberg & Bistor, real estate investments.

"I have never heard of such a thing being done."—Adolph F. Kramer, president of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Here's what happened that caused the above comments, and to which the county recorder's office and THE TRIBUNE were innocent participants. This department has only this comment to make—if such a condition does exist, it casts a discreditable shadow on the Chicago real estate fraternity and should be given prompt attention by the Chicago Real Estate board.

Here are the facts: According to a letter from Hedberg & Bistor, they sold the southwest corner of Cass and Superior streets, 51x109, for Henry C. Prentice to Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect, "at a consideration of $50,000."

Gets Figures from County.

THE TRIBUNE reported the sale of this property from the daily report of real estate transfers furnished by the record's office, and, from the amount of revenue stamps—$50—assumed that the equity in the property was $50,000; and, as it was conveyed "subject to trust deed dated April 14, 1920, to the Chicago Title and Trust company, in the sum of $24,000," concluded that the sale price was $74,000.

The real estate editor of THE TRIBUNE has seen the warranty deed. It has $50 in revenue stamps on it, gives a nominal consideration of $10, and contains the above mentioned clause telling of the $24,000 mortgage.

Complaints were made to THE TRIBUNE about the reported selling price. The seller, Mr. Prentice, was interrogated. "I sold the property for $36,500," he said, "receiving in cash $12,500, paid off a mortgage of $5,000 with interest thereon, and paid Hedberg & Bistor, the brokers, $1,095, as commission. Mr. Alschlager gave back a part purchase money mortgage for $24,000."

Attorney and Buyer Talk.

Harry P. Muns, attorney for Mr. Prentice, said he placed $36.50 worth of stamps on the deed.

Mr. Alschlager admitted that he directed his brokers to place additional stamps, so that the total would be $50 worth—indicating an equity of $50,000—so that the public would not be able to know what he paid for it.

Mr. Hedberg of Hedberg & Bistor said the employé of his firm who handled the deal was in Michigan and he personally knew nothing about the stamps.

Two of Largest Flats in Oak Park Change Hands

Two of Oak Park's biggest apartment buildings have changed hands. The forty-eight flats, lot 182x130, at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Cuyler avenue, have been sold by Oliver B. Opsahl to Edgar G. Stearns, through C. C. Mitchell & Co., for an indicated $208,500, subject to $147,500. The annual rental is said to be $36,000.

The second big Oak Park deal was the sale by the estate of Elmer D. Duff to Mrs. Sadie Polster of the Seven Elms apartments, lot 125x220, forty-five flats, at 811-17 Lake street, for an indicated $142,000, subject to $96,116. William Durchslag & Co. were the brokers. Later it was conveyed in trust to the Home Bank and Trust company of Oak Park.

Chicago Colored Realty Men Form Association

Colored real estate brokers have organized the Chicago Real Estate Brokers' association. The object is "cooperation for higher and better service and the creating of proper recognition of and among the people of the city of Chicago."

The following officers were elected: George W. Faulkner, president; R. A. Williams, first vice president; T. W. Champion, second vice president; Warren Seltzer, financial secretary; William Y. Brown, treasurer; A. Walker Hobson, recording secretary. Board of directors: John T. Cook, chairman; H. L. Willis, M. E. Wimes, M. T. Bailey, and M. Byron Clark.
